(e) Cast or throw ballast or rubbish.
(f) Sink, strand, or abandon a vessel.
(g) Throw in or abandon any tree or trees, log of wood, spar, or any other thing which would be likely to form into a snag, or to cause an accumulation of silt, or in any way to alter the conformation of the bottom of the fairway.

2. The owner or master of a vessel desiring to cast or throw ballast or rubbish in a fairway leading to any of the said ports, may apply to the Port Officer for permission to do so, and he shall not, if the permission is granted, cast or throw the ballast or rubbish except at a place selected by the Port Officer for the purpose.

3. Any person desiring to place any apparatus for fishing stake, or spread any net, or to use any float, or to raise any embankment in a fairway leading to any of the said ports, may appply to the Port Officer for permission to do so. On receipt of such application, the Port Officer shall examine the site fixed upon by the applicant, and if satisfied that the placing of fishing apparatus, or the doing of any other act for permission to do which application has been made, will not cause or be likely to cause obstruction or danger to navigation, he shall report the matter to the Collector for orders, and the Collector, if similarly satisfied, shall grant permission. It shall be in the discretion of the Collector at any time to withdraw such permission, and to call upon the owner to remove the apparatus nets, floats or embankments within a reasonable time, and on failure on the part of the owner to do so, to remove them at the cost of the owner.

4. In the port of the powers and duties conferred and imposed by this notification on the Port Officer shall be exercised and performed by the Collector of Customs.

NOTIFICATION.

The 26th January 1883.—Under the provisions of section 69 of Act III of 1877, the Lieutenant-Governor directs that the following revised rule be substituted for rule 114, which was published under notification dated the 19th June 1882, in the Calcutta Gazette of the 28th idem:—

"Rule 114.—Every Registrar shall submit to the Inspector General, before the 1st March of each year, an indent in quadruplicate, in the prescribed form, for all register-books and other registration forms, including the forms prescribed by the Accountant General, Bengal, which will be required for his own office and for those of the Sub-Registrars subordinate to him, during the 12 months from the 1st October to the 30th September following. When it is desired that the supply of register-books, &c., should be forwarded to any sub-registry office direct instead of being sent through the office of the Registrar to whom the Sub-Registrar is subordinate, an intimation to that effect should accompany the Registrar's indent, and the indents of such Sub-Registrar should be submitted separately in quadruplicate with the Registrar's endorsement, instead of being embodied in the Registrar's indent. A supply of new register-books required to be opened on the 1st January of each year should be included in this annual indent.

CUSTOM HOUSE NOTICE.

Notice.

TO MASTERS OF NATIVE VESSELS.

IN accordance with a Resolution of the Government of Bengal in the Marine Department, dated 13th January 1883, regarding the exhibition of lights on native craft, it is hereby notified that the larger or sea-going craft, such as buggalows, must be provided with a small box, protected with the proper coloured shade, large enough to receive a light fitted on each bow, the red and green lights being permanently and separately fixed. Open cargo boats and other smaller craft are allowed to exhibit the necessary red and green lights by hand.

2. On and after the 1st April 1883, the master of every native craft will be required to produce to the Collector of Customs, before the grant of a port clearance, a certificate signed in Calcutta by the Deputy Conservator and Harbour Master, and at the out ports by the Port Officers, showing that they are provided with the proper lights, and have the necessary appliances for fixing and exhibiting them in their proper positions, that the men in charge know the sides on which the green and red lights should be shown, and that there is on board each vessel a copy of the rules of the road at sea, in a language understood by the masters.

LAND SALE NOTICES.

NOTICE is hereby given that the proprietary right of Government, as specified in the conditions of sale below, to the undermentioned estates situated in the district of Backergunge, will be put up to sale at the Backergunge Collectorate on Tuesday, the 27th March, corresponding with 14th Chaitra 1289.

The purchasers will be subject to the following conditions of sale :—

Conditions of Sale.

1*st.*—The estate to be sold to the highest bidder above the upset price. The purchaser of this estate will be considered as the proprietor of the estate, and the entire proprietary right of Government in such estate will be transferred to him, subject to the revenue fixed in perpetuity.

2*nd.*—The sale to be subject to existing leases and to the rights conferred by the settlement proceedings and by the laws in force, and purchasers to be bound to respect the rights of resident cultivators who have signed the schedule of assessment prepared by the revenue authorities.

3*rd.*—If the amount of purchase-money do not exceed Rs. 100, the whole amount to be paid down at once.

4*th.*—If the amount of purchase-money exceed Rs. 100, one-fourth of the amount bid to be immediately deposited. If the balance be not paid by noon of the fifteenth day after the sale, reckoning the day of sale as one, or if that day be a close holiday, then by noon of the first succeeding office day, the sale to be cancelled, the sum deposited being forfeited to Government, and the estate to be again put up to sale at the risk of the defaulting purchaser, after issue of advertisement, as in the case of original sale.

SCHEDULE.

ENACTMENTS REPEALED.

A Bill to regulate the manufacture, keeping, sale, conveyance and importation of Explosives.

WHEREAS it is expedient to regulate the manufacture, keeping, sale, conveyance and importation of explosives; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Preamble.

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Explosives Act, 1883.

Local extent.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India.

38 Vic., c. 17, s. 97.]

Saving for manufacture, keeping, sale, conveyance or importation by Government.

2. Save as provided in section sixty-one, nothing in this Act shall apply to the manufacture, keeping, sale, conveyance or importation of any explosive by order of the Government, or by any person employed under the Government in the execution of this Act or as keeper of a magazine, artizan, soldier, sailor, policeman or otherwise, or enrolled as a volunteer under the Indian Volunteers' Act, 1869, in the course of his employment or duty as such.

Saving of Indian Arms Act, 1878.

3. Nothing in this Act shall affect the provisions of the Indian Arms Act, 1878.

of 1878.

Commencement.

4. (1) This Act shall come into force on such day as the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, appoints.

(2) But any notification, order or rule, and any appointment to an office or grant of authority, may be made under this Act at any time after the passing thereof, but shall not take effect until the Act comes into force.

Repeal of enactments.

5. On and from the day on which this Act comes into force the Acts mentioned in the first column of the schedule to this Act shall be repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column thereof.

Limitation of application of Madras and Bombay Municipal Acts.

6. Nothing in section 322 of Madras Act V of 1878, or in section 225 of Bombay Act III of 1872, shall be deemed to apply to an explosive.

Definitions.

7. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "explosive"—

Vic., c. 17,

(a) means gunpowder, nitro-glycerine, dynamite, gun-cotton, blasting powders, fulminate of mercury or of other metals, coloured fires, and every other substance, whether similar to those above-mentioned or not, used or manufactured with a view to produce a practical effect by explosion, or a pyrotechnic effect; and

(b) includes fog-signals, fireworks, fuzes, rockets, percussion-caps, detonators, cartridges, ammunition of all descriptions, and every adaptation or preparation of an explosive as above defined:

(2) "manufacture" includes the process of dividing into its component parts, or otherwise breaking up or unmaking, any explosive, or making fit for use any damaged explosive, and the process of re-making, altering or repairing any explosive: [38 Vic., c. 17 s. 105]

(4) "master" includes every person (except a pilot or harbour-master) having for the time being command or charge of a ship; and, in reference to any boat belonging to a ship, means the master of the ship; and, in reference to any other boat, includes every person having for the time being command or charge of that boat: [ib.]

(5) "factory" means a place licensed under this Act for the manufacture of an explosive: [New.]

(6) "magazine" means a place licensed under this Act for the keeping of an explosive, and includes any ship or other vessel licensed for that purpose: [38 Vic., c. 17, s. 108.]

(7) "registered place" means a place registered under this Act for keeping an explosive: [New.]

(8) "warehouseman" includes all persons owning or managing any warehouse, store, wharf or other place in which goods are deposited: [38 Vic., c. 17, s. 108.]

(9) "carrier" includes all persons carrying goods or passengers for hire by land or water: [ib.]

(10) "port" means any port, or any part of a navigable river or channel, in which the Indian Ports Act, 1875, is for the time being in force: [New.] XII of 1875.

(11) "railway" means any railway, whether it is used for the public conveyance of passengers or goods or not, and includes— [Cf. Act IV of 1879, s. 3.]

(a) a railway under construction;

(b) all lands within the fences or other boundary-marks prescribed under section 52 of the Indian Railway Act, 1879; IV of 1879.

(c) all lines of rail, sidings or branches worked over for the purposes of, or in connection with, a railway;

(d) all stations, offices, warehouses, fixed machinery and other works constructed for the purposes of, or in connection with, a railway; and

(e) all vessels and rafts used for the purpose of carrying on the traffic of a railway:

(12) "railway-administration" means, in the case of a railway worked by Government, or a [Cf. Act IV of 1879, s. 3.]

Native State, the manager of the railway, and, in the case of a railway worked by a company or private individual, the company or individual:

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 108.] (13) "wharf" includes any quay, landing-place, siding or other place at which goods are landed, loaded or unloaded:

[ib.] (14) "carriage" includes any carriage, waggon, cart, truck, vehicle or other means of conveying goods or passengers by land, in whatever manner the same may be propelled:

[ib.] (15) "ship" includes every description of vessel used in sea-navigation, whether propelled by oars or otherwise:

[ib.] (16) "boat" means every vessel, not a ship as above defined, which is used in navigation in any inland water or any port, whether propelled by oars or otherwise:

[New.] Cf. Act VIII of 1881, s. 3.] (17) "import" means to bring into British India by sea or land:

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 108.] (18) "prescribed" means prescribed from time to time by notification of the Governor General in Council:

[ib.] (19) the expression "safety-cartridges" means cartridges for small arms of which the case can be extracted from the small arm after firing, and which are so closed as to prevent any explosion in one cartridge being communicated to other cartridges:

[New.] (20) "Magistrate" means, in the Presidency-towns, a Presidency Magistrate, and elsewhere, a Magistrate of the first class, and includes also any Magistrate whom the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may, by notification, appoint to discharge in any local area the functions of a Magistrate under this Act.

CHAPTER II.

GENERAL LAW AS TO MANUFACTURE AND KEEPING OF EXPLOSIVES.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 4.] Prohibition of manufacture of explosives except at factory.

8. The manufacture of an explosive shall not, nor shall any process of that manufacture, be carried on except at a factory for that explosive:

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply—

(a) to the making of a small quantity of an explosive for the purpose of chemical experiment and not for practical use or for sale; or

(b) to the making of any part of an explosive where that part is not itself an explosive and no explosive is used in making it.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 5.] Prohibition of keeping of explosives except in factory, magazine or registered place.

9. An explosive shall not be kept except—

(a) in the factory in which it is manufactured, or

(b) in a magazine for that explosive, or

(c) in a place registered under this Act for keeping that explosive:

Provided that this section shall not apply—

[38 Vic., c. 17, 40 (4).] (a) to a person keeping for his private use, and not for sale, an explosive to an amount not exceeding in the same place the prescribed amount, or

(b) to the keeping of an explosive by a carrier or other person for the purpose of conveyance, when the explosive is being conveyed or kept in accordance with the rules under this Act with respect to the conveyance of explosives.

CHAPTER III.

FACTORIES, MAGAZINES AND REGISTERED PLACES.

(A).—Licensing and Regulation of Factories.

Power of Local Government to make rules as to licensing and regulation of factories.

10. (1) The Local Government may make rules as to the licensing and regulation of places as factories for the manufacture of explosives. [Cf. 38 Vic., c. 17, ss. 6 to 10, & ss. 12, 13 & 26.]

(2) Rules under this section may provide for all or any of the following among other matters, that is to say:—

(a) the authority by which licenses may be granted;

(b) the fees to be charged for licenses, and the other sums (if any) to be paid for expenses by applicants for licenses;

(c) the manner in which applications for licenses are to be made, and the matters to be specified in such applications;

(d) the form in which, and the conditions on and subject to which, licenses are to be granted;

(e) the period for which licenses are to remain in force;

(f) the renewal of licenses and the fee to be paid for their renewal;

(g) the alteration of the terms of licenses by the grant of amending licenses, and the fee to be paid for an amending license;

(h) the devolution and determination of licenses;

(i) the situation, construction, materials and fittings of factories;

(j) the conditions on and subject to which the manufacture, or any process in, or work connected with, the manufacture, of an explosive is to be carried on in any factory;

(k) the descriptions of explosives which may be kept in a factory, and the conditions and restrictions subject to which they may be so kept;

(l) the manner of carrying out repairs in factories; and

(m) the restricting of the employment of persons under the age of sixteen years in factories or in certain parts thereof.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 46.]

Provision in favour of occupiers of magazines and registered places making cartridges.

11. The occupier of a magazine or registered place shall not be required by this Act or the rules under this Act to take out a factory-license by reason that, in connection with the magazine or place, he fills, for sale or otherwise, any cartridge for small arms with the explosive for the keeping of which the magazine or place is licensed or registered: provided that he observes such rules as the Local Government may make in this behalf.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 47.]

Provision in favour of occupiers of magazines adapting or preparing explosives for use in their own mines or quarries.

12. The occupier of a magazine shall not be required by this Act or the rules under this Act to take out a factory-license by reason that, in connection with the magazine, he, by filling cartridges, making charges, drying, sifting, fitting or otherwise, adapts or prepares the explosive for the keeping of which the magazine is licensed, for use exclusively in his mine or quarry, or in some excavation or work carried on by him or under his control: provided that he observes such rules as the Local Government may make in this behalf.

(B).—Licensing and Regulation of Magazines.

[38 Vic., c. 17, ss. 15 to 19 (relating to stores).]

Power of Local Government to make rules as to licensing and regulation of magazines.

13. (1). The Local Government may make rules as to the licensing and regulation of places as magazines for the keeping of explosives.

(2) Rules under this section may, among other matters, provide for all or any of the matters for which rules under clauses (a) to (i), both inclusive, and clauses (k) to (m), both inclusive, of section ten may provide in the case of factories.

(C).—Registration and Regulation of Registered Places.

[Cf. 38 Vic., c. 17, ss. 21 and 22.]

Power of Local Government to make rules as to registration and regulation of registered places.

14. (1) The Local Government may make rules as to the registration and regulation of places for the keeping of explosives.

(2) Rules under this section may provide for all or any of the following among other matters, that is to say:—

(a) the manner in which places may be registered, the period for which registration is to be valid, and the manner in which registration may be renewed;

(b) the fees to be paid for registration and renewal of registration;

(c) the situation and nature of places which may be registered, the manner in which an explosive is to be kept in those places, and the maximum amount of an explosive which may be so kept; and

(d) the descriptions of explosives which may be kept together in the same registered place, and the conditions and restrictions subject to which they may be so kept.

(D).—Supplemental Provisions.

Duty of occupier to make special rules for regulation of workmen in his factory or magazine.

15. (1) Every occupier of a factory or magazine shall make special rules for the regulation of the persons managing or employed in or about his factory or magazine, with a view to secure the observance therein of this Act and the rules under this Act, and the safety and proper discipline of those persons and the safety of the public.

(2) The occupier may, and, if required by the Local Government, shall, make rules, repealing, altering or adding to any special rules made under this section.

(3) Any rule under this section may contain a provision that any person committing a breach of it shall be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

(4) A rule made under this section shall not take effect until it has been confirmed by the Local Government and notified to the persons managing or employed in or about the factory or magazine in such manner as the Local Government from time to time directs.

CHAPTER IV.

SALE OF EXPLOSIVES.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 30.]

Sale of explosives on highways or public places prohibited.

16. An explosive shall not be hawked, sold or exposed for sale on any highway, street, public thoroughfare or other public place.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 31.]

Sale of explosives to children prohibited.

17. An explosive shall not be sold to any child apparently under the age of thirteen years.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 32 and s. 40 (8).]

Explosives to be sold in cases, closed and labelled.

18. Every explosive, exceeding in amount the prescribed amount, shall, when publicly sold or exposed for sale, be in a substantial case, bag, canister or other receptacle, made and closed so as to prevent the explosive from escaping, and (except when the explosive is sold to any person employed by or on the property occupied by the vendor for immediate use in the service of the vendor or on that property) the outermost receptacle containing the explosive shall have affixed in conspicuous characters, by means of a brand or securely attached label or other mark, the name of the explosive, with the addition of the word "explosive."

CHAPTER V.

CONVEYANCE OF EXPLOSIVES.

[38 Vic., 17 s. 33.]

Power of Governor General in Council to make rules as to packing of explosives.

19. The Governor General in Council may make rules to regulate the packing of explosives for conveyance, and may by those rules provide for the nature of the packages, cases, bags, canisters or other receptacles in which an explosive is to be contained.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 34.]

Power of Local Government to make rules regulating the conveyance, loading, unloading and keeping of explosives in ports.

20. (1) The Local Government may make rules to regulate the conveyance, loading, unloading and keeping of explosives within any port.

(2) Rules under this section may provide for all or any of the following among other matters, that is to say:—

[Sub-section 1.] [cf. Act XII of 1875, s. 7 (o).]

(a) the notice to be given in the case of ships and boats having any explosive on board within the port;

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 34, sub-section 2.]

(b) the navigation and place of mooring of those ships and boats;

[Sub-section 3.]

(c) subject to the rules as to packing made under section nineteen, the mode of stowing and keeping an explosive on board any such ship or boat, and of giving notice, by brands, labels or otherwise, of the nature of the package containing the explosive;

[Sub-section

(d) the description, construction, fitting-up and licensing of the ships, boats or carriages to be used for the conveyance of an explosive, and the licensing and dress of the persons having charge thereof;

[Sub-section

(e) the prohibition of the conveyance of one explosive with another explosive or any articles or substances, or in passenger-ships, boats, trains or carriages, or the subjection of that conveyance to conditions and restrictions;

[Sub-section

(f) the prohibition, in cases where the loading or unloading of an explosive within the limits of the port appears to be specially dangerous to the public, of loading or unloading within those limits, and the fixing of the times and places at which an explosive is to be loaded or unloaded, and the quantity to be loaded or unloaded, or conveyed at one time or in one ship, boat or carriage;

[Sub-section

(g) the mode of, and the precautions to be observed in, conveying an explosive, and in the loading or unloading any ship, boat or carriage conveying an explosive, and the time during which the explosive may be kept during the conveyance, loading or unloading;

[Cf. Act XII of 1875, s. 7, cl. (o), ss. 28, 29, 30, 31 and 33.]

(h) the fixing the cases in which an explosive is to be taken out of a ship for the purpose of being deposited, the places in which the explosive so taken out is to be deposited, the appointing of an officer to receive the explosive, and the manner in which, and the conditions on and subject to which, the explosive is to be deposited in and removed from those places

(i) the times at which lights or fires are to be allowed or not allowed on board the ships or boats having an explosive on board, or at which a Police-officer or other person authorized in this behalf by the conservator of the port is to be on board them; [38 Vic., c. 17, s. 34, sub-section 8.]

(j) the publication and supply to the public of copies of these rules; [Sub-section 9.]

(k) the enforcing the observance of this Act and the rules under this Act both by the officers of the port and also by other persons when within the limits of the port; and [Sub-section 10.]

(l) generally the protection, whether by means similar to those above-mentioned or not, of persons or property from danger. [Sub-section 11.]

Power on breach of rule to require ship, boat, carriage or explosive to be dealt with in conformity with rule.

21. (1) In the event of any breach of a rule under section twenty, in the case of any ship, boat, carriage or explosive, whether there has or has not been any conviction for the breach, the conservator of the port or other officer named in the rules, or any person acting under the orders of the conservator, may cause the ship, boat, carriage or explosive, at the expense of the owner thereof, to be removed to such place or otherwise dealt with in such manner as may be in conformity with the rule.

(2) All expenses incurred in the removal may be recovered in like manner as a fine under this Act.

Duty of railway-administration to make rules regulating the conveyance, loading, unloading and keeping of explosives on its railway.

22. (1) Every railway-administration shall make rules to regulate the conveyance, loading, unloading and keeping of explosives on its railway. [Cf. 38 Vic., c. 17, s. 35.]

(2) The railway-administration may, and, if required by the Governor General in Council, shall, make rules repealing, altering or adding to any rules made under this section.

(3) Rules under this section may provide for all or any of the following among other matters, that is to say:—

(a) the notice to be given of the intention to send an explosive for conveyance on the railway; [Sub section 1.]

(b) subject to the rules as to packing made under section nineteen, the mode of stowing and keeping an explosive for conveyance, and of giving notice by brand, labels or otherwise of the nature of the package containing the explosive; [Sub-section 2.]

(c) the description and construction of carriages, ships or boats to be used in the conveyance of an explosive; [Sub-section 3.]

(d) the prohibition of the conveyance of one explosive with another explosive or with any articles or substances or in passenger- [Sub-section 4.]

trains, carriages, ships or boats, or the subjection of that conveyance to conditions and restrictions;

[Sub-section 1.] (e) the places and times at which an explosive is to be loaded or unloaded, and the quantity to be loaded or unloaded or conveyed at one time or in one carriage, ship or boat;

[Sub-section 2.] (f) the precautions to be observed in conveying an explosive and in loading and unloading the carriages, ships or boats used in the conveyance of an explosive, and the time during which the explosive may be kept during that conveyance, loading and unloading;

[Sub-section 3.] (g) the enforcing the observance of this Act and the rules under this Act by its servants and agents, and also by other persons when on the railway; and [Sub-section 4.] (h) generally the protection, whether by means similar to those above-mentioned or not, of persons or property from danger.

[Cf. 38 Vic., c. 17, s. 37.]

Power of Governor General in Council to make rules for the conveyance, loading, unloading and keeping of explosives in certain cases.

23. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules to regulate the conveyance, loading, unloading and keeping of explosives in any case in which rules made under section twenty or section twenty-two do not apply.

(2) Rules under this section may provide for all or any of the following among other matters, that is to say:—

[Sub-section 1.] (a) the description and construction of the carriages to be used in the conveyance of an explosive;

[Sub-section 2.] (b) the prohibition of the conveyance of one explosive with another explosive or with any articles or substances, or in passenger-carriages, or the subjection of that conveyance to conditions and restrictions;

[Sub-section 3.] (c) the places and times at which an explosive is to be loaded or unloaded, and the quantity to be loaded or unloaded, or conveyed at one time and in one carriage;

[Sub-section 4.] (d) the precautions to be observed in conveying an explosive and in loading and unloading the carriages used in that conveyance, and the time during which the explosive may be kept during that conveyance, loading and unloading;

[Sub-section 5.] (e) the publication and supply to the public of copies of these rules; and [Sub-section 6.] (f) generally the protection, whether by means similar to those above-mentioned or not, of persons or property from danger.

(3) For the purpose of any mode of conveyance which is not a conveyance by land, this section shall be construed as if ship and boat were included in the term "carriage".

[Cf. 38 Vic., c. 17, ss. 34, 35 & 37.]

Penalties which may be annexed to breach of rules under sections 20, 22 and 23.

24. The authority making any rule under section twenty, section twenty-two or section twenty-three may annex to any breach or attempt to commit a breach of the rule the following penalties, which may be imposed on such persons and graduated in such manner as may be deemed just, according to the gravity of the offence, and according as it may be a first, second or other subsequent offence, that is to say:—a fine which may extend to two hundred rupees for each breach and to one hundred rupees for each day during which the breach continues, and forfeiture of all or any part of the explosive in respect of which, or being in the carriage, ship or boat, or train of carriages, ships or boats, as the case may be, in respect of which, the breach of the rule has taken place.

CHAPTER VI.

IMPORTATION OF EXPLOSIVES.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 40 (9).]

Importation of certain explosives prohibited except under license.

25. Dynamite or gun-cotton or any explosive (other than gunpowder, cartridges made with gunpowder, percussion-caps, fireworks and any prescribed explosive) shall not be imported except under a license, and in the manner and to the extent permitted by that license.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 40 (9) (b).]

Power of Governor General in Council to make rules as to such importation.

26. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules to regulate the grant of licenses required under section twenty-five.

(2) Rules under this section may provide for all or any of the following among other matters, that is to say:—

(a) the officers by whom, the form in which, and the terms and conditions as to the composition and quality of the explosive, the unloading, landing, transhipment, delivery and conveyance thereof, and the protection of the public from danger, on and subject to which licenses may be granted;

(b) the period for which licenses are to continue in force and the persons for whom licenses are to be available; and

(c) the fees to be paid for licenses.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 40 (9) (c).]

Powers of Customs officers.

27. The officers of sea customs at every port shall have the same power with respect to any explosive to which section twenty-five applies and the ship containing that explosive as they have for the time being with respect to any article on the importation of which restrictions are imposed by the law relating to sea customs and the ship containing the same; and the enactments for the time being in force relating to sea customs or any such article or ship shall apply accordingly.

CHAPTER VII.

SPECIALLY DANGEROUS EXPLOSIVES.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 43: Cf. Act XI of 1878, s. 10.]

Power of Governor General in Council to prohibit the manufacture, keeping, importation, conveyance and sale of specially dangerous explosives.

28. (1) Notwithstanding anything in this Act or in the rules under this Act, the Governor General in Council may, by notification—

(a) regulate or prohibit, either altogether or except under a license, and to the extent and in the manner permitted by that license, the manufacture, keeping, importation, conveyance and sale, or any of them, of any explosive which is of so dangerous a character that, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council, it is expedient for the public safety to issue such a notification; and

(b) cancel any notification under this section.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 43.]

(2) The officers of sea customs at every port shall have the same power with respect to any explosive with regard to which a notification has been issued under this section and the ship containing the explosive as they have for the time being with respect to any article the importation of which is prohibited or regulated by the law relating to sea customs and the ship containing the same; and the enactments for the time being in force relating to sea customs or any such article or ship shall apply accordingly.

CHAPTER VIII.

GOVERNMENT SUPERVISION.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 53: Cf. Act XV of 1881, s. 3.]

Appointment and duties of Government Inspectors.

29. (1) The Local Government may, in its discretion, by notification appoint such persons as it thinks fit to be Inspectors for the purposes of this Act, and suspend or remove any person so appointed.

(2) The persons so appointed shall, within such local area as the Local Government may from time to time direct, exercise the powers and perform the duties conferred and imposed by this Act and the rules under this Act on an Inspector.

(3) Every such Inspector (in this Act referred to as a Government Inspector) shall be deemed a public servant within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code, and shall be officially subordinate to such authority as the Local Government may, from time to time, indicate in this behalf.

XLV of 1860.

(4) The Local Government may make rules assigning and regulating the duties of Government Inspectors under this Act.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 55.]

Powers of Government Inspectors.

30. (1) A Government Inspector shall, within the local area for which he is appointed, make such examinations and enquiries as may be necessary to ascertain whether this Act and the rules under this Act are complied with, and may for that purpose—

(a) enter, inspect and examine any factory or magazine and every part thereof, at all times by day and night, but so as not to unnecessarily impede or obstruct the work in the factory or magazine, and make enquiries as to the observance of this Act and the rules under this Act, and as to all matters and things relating to the safety of the public or of the persons employed in or about the factory or magazine;

(b) enter, inspect and examine any registered place, and every part thereof, in which any explosive is kept or is reasonably supposed by him to be kept, at all reasonable times by day; and

(c) require the occupier of any factory, magazine or registered place which he is entitled under this section to enter, or any person employed by the occupier therein, to give him samples of any explosive or ingredients of an explosive therein, or of any substance therein, the keeping of which is restricted or regulated by or under this Act or the rules under this Act, or of any substance therein which he believes to be an explosive, or such ingredients or substance.

(2) The occupier of every factory, magazine or registered place referred to in this section, his agents and servants, shall furnish the means required by the Inspector as necessary for any entry, inspection, examination or inquiry under this section.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 56.]

Notice by Government Inspector to remedy dangerous practice.

31. (1) If in any matter (not provided for by any express provision of this Act or of the rules under this Act) a Government Inspector finds that any factory or magazine, or any part thereof, or any thing or practice therein or connected therewith, is unnecessarily dangerous or defective, so as in his opinion to tend to endanger the public safety or the bodily safety of any person, the Inspector may require the occupier of the factory or magazine to remedy the same.

(2) Where the occupier objects to comply with a requisition under this section, he may, within one month from the date of the requisition, apply to any Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the factory or magazine is, for a decision in the matter; and the decision of the Magistrate shall be final.

(3) If the occupier does not apply to a Magistrate as provided by sub-section (2), he shall be bound to comply with the requisition of the Inspector.

(4) No person shall be precluded by any contract from doing such acts as may be necessary to comply with a requisition or decision under this section, and no person shall be liable under any contract to any penalty or forfeiture for doing any such act if he gave notice of the contract to the Inspector at or before the time at which the Inspector made the requisition, or to the Magistrate before his decision was given.

38 Vic., c. 17, 58 (b).]

Inspection in ports and of ships.

32. (1) The Local Government may, by notification, order any person acting as an Inspector or otherwise for the purpose of the Acts relating to merchant shipping for the time being in force to inquire into the observance of this Act or the rules under this Act in any port or in the case of any ship, and generally to act in that port and with respect to ships as a Government Inspector under this Act.

(2) Each person so ordered shall, while the order is in force, have for that purpose the same powers and authorities as he has under the Acts in pursuance of which he was originally appointed Inspector, and also the powers and authorities of a Government Inspector under this Act and the rules for the time being in force under it.

(3) The Local Government may revoke any order under this section.

8 Vic., c. 17, 75.]

Inspection of wharf, carriage, ship or boat with explosives in transit.

33. Any Government Inspector, or any officer who may by name or in right of his office be authorized by the Local Government in this behalf, may, if he has reasonable cause to suppose an explosive to be for the purpose of or in course of conveyance on or in the wharf, carriage, ship or boat of any carrier, or of the occupier of any factory or magazine or of the importer of any explosive, enter, inspect and examine at any time the wharf, carriage, ship or boat for the purpose of ascertaining whether the provisions of this Act or the rules under this Act with respect to the conveyance, loading, unloading and importation of an explosive are complied with, but so as not to unnecessarily obstruct the work or business of the carrier, occupier or importer.

8 Vic., c. 17, 63; I. Act IV of 1879, s. 6.]

Notice to be given of accidents.

34. Whenever there occurs in or about, or in connection with, any factory, magazine or registered place, or any carriage, ship or boat, either conveying an explosive, or on or from which an explosive is being loaded or unloaded,—

(a) any accident by explosion or by fire attended with loss of human life or serious injury to person or property, or

(b) any such accident of a description usually attended with such loss or injury, or

(c) any accident of any other description which may be prescribed in this behalf, the occupier of the factory, magazine or registered place, or the master of the ship or boat, or the person in charge of the carriage, as the case may be, shall forthwith give notice thereof to the nearest Magistrate.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 66.]

Inquiry into accidents.

35. (1) If in any such case an inquiry into the cause of the accident appears to the Magistrate to whom notice has been given under section thirty-four to be necessary, the Magistrate may either himself make the inquiry or direct a Government Inspector or a Magistrate subordinate to himself to make the inquiry.

(2) Any Magistrate or Government Inspector making an inquiry under this section shall, for the purposes of conducting the inquiry, have all the powers which he would have in holding an inquiry into an offence under the Code of Criminal Procedure. X of 1882.

(C).—Power of Search.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 73.] [Cf. Act I of 1878, s. 14.]

Power of Government Inspector and certain other officers to search for explosives.

36. (1) Where any Government Inspector, or any officer who may by name or in right of his office be authorized by the Local Government in this behalf, has reasonable cause to believe that any offence has been or is being committed with respect to an explosive in any place (whether a building or not, or a carriage, boat or ship), or that any explosive is in that place in contravention of this Act or of the rules under this Act, or that the provisions of this Act or of those rules are not duly observed in that place, the Inspector or officer may, on producing, if demanded, in the case of an Inspector, a copy of the notification appointing him, and, in the case of any other officer, of the order authorizing him, enter at any time, and, if need be, by force, that place and every part thereof, and examine the place, and search for explosives therein, and take samples of any explosive or ingredient of any explosive therein, or of any substance reasonably supposed to be an explosive or an ingredient of an explosive which may be found therein.

[Cf. Act I of 1878, s. 16.]

(2) All searches under this section shall be made in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. X of 1882.

[Cf. Act I of 1878, s. 21; 38 Vic., c. 38, s. 73, last para.]

(3) When any officer other than a Government Inspector enters and searches as by this section provided, he shall within forty-eight hours make a full report of all the particulars of the entry and search to his immediate official superior.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 35, paragraph 3.]

Power of Government Inspector and certain officers to stop, enter, inspect and examine carriages or boats in case of emergency.

37. (1) If any Government Inspector or any officer of any of the Departments of Excise, Police, Customs, Salt, Opium or Revenue, superior in rank to a peon or constable, has reasonable cause to suppose that any offence against this Act or the rules under this Act is being committed in respect of any carriage (not being on a railway) or any boat conveying, loading or unloading any explosive, and that the case is one of emergency, and that delay will be likely to endanger life, he may stop and enter, inspect and examine the carriage or boat, and by detention or removal thereof or otherwise take such precautions as may be reasonably necessary for removing the danger, in like manner as if the explosive were liable to forfeiture.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 75, para 4.]

(2) Every such officer shall, for the purposes of this section, have the same powers and be in the same position as if he were an officer authorized by the Local Government under section thirty-six to search for explosives.

(D).—Power of Seizure and Detention.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 74.]

Seizure and detention of explosives liable to forfeiture.

38. Where any Government Inspector, or any officer authorized as provided by section thirty-six, has reasonable cause to believe that any explosive or ingredient of an explosive or substance found by him is liable to be forfeited under this Act or the rules under this Act, he may seize and detain the same until a Magistrate has determined whether the same is or is not liable to be forfeited.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 74.]

Power of Local Government to make rules to regulate seizure and detention of explosives.

39. The Local Government may make rules to regulate the seizure and detention of any explosive or ingredient of any explosive or substance under section thirty-eight, and may by those rules empower the Government Inspector or officer seizing the explosive or ingredient or substance—

(a) to require the occupier of the place in which it was seized (whether a building or not, or a carriage, boat or ship) to detain it in that place or in any place under the control of the occupier; or

(b) to remove it in such manner and to such place as will in the opinion of the Government Inspector or officer least endanger the public safety, and there to detain it; or

(c) in any case which appears to the Government Inspector or officer to be urgent and fraught with serious public danger, to take a sample of it and cause the rest of it to be destroyed or otherwise rendered harmless.

Cl. (2).

Proceedings before Magistrate to be commenced as soon as practicable.

40. The proceedings before a Magistrate for determining whether an explosive or ingredient of an explosive or substance is or is not liable to forfeiture shall be commenced as soon as practicable after the seizure.

Cl. (3).]

Power to seize receptacles.

41. The receptacles containing an explosive or ingredient of an explosive or substance may be seized, detained and removed in like manner as the contents thereof.

Cl. (4).]

Power to use ship, boat, carriage, &c., in which explosives are seized.

42. The Government Inspector or officer seizing an explosive or ingredient of an explosive or substance may use for the purposes of the removal and detention thereof any ship, boat or carriage in which it was seized, and any tug, tender, engine, tackle, beasts and accoutrements belonging to, or drawing or provided for drawing, that ship, boat or carriage, and shall pay to the owner a reasonable compensation for the use, to be determined in case of dispute by a Magistrate, and to be recovered in like manner as a fine under this Act.

Payment for samples of explosives.

43. When a Government Inspector or other officer in pursuance of this Act or the rules under this Act takes samples of any explosive or ingredient of an explosive or substance, he shall pay for or tender payment for those samples to such amount as he considers to be the market-value thereof; and the occupier of the place in which, or the owner of the bulk from which, the sample was taken may recover any excess of the real value over the money so paid or tendered, and any amount so tendered, from the Inspector or other officer taking the sample, as a debt, in the Small Cause Court, or, if there is no Small Cause Court, in the Civil Court having jurisdiction.

CHAPTER IX.

PENALTIES AND LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 4.]

Penalty for illegal manufacture of explosives.

44. If an explosive is manufactured in contravention of section eight, or of a notification under section twenty-eight—

(a) the explosive and all the ingredients of the explosive, which may be found either in or about the place at which the explosive is manufactured, or in the possession, or under the control, of any person convicted under this section, shall be liable to be forfeited; and

(b) the person manufacturing the explosive shall be punished with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees for each day on which he so manufactures.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 5.]

Penalty for illegal keeping of explosives.

45. If any explosive is kept in contravention of section nine, or of a notification under section twenty-eight—

(a) all the explosives found in the place at which the explosive is kept shall be liable to be forfeited; and

(b) the occupier of that place, and also any person guilty of keeping the explosive, shall each be punished with fine which may extend to one rupee for each pound of the explosive so kept.

[38 Vic. c. 17, s. 10; but s. 9 as to amount of penalty.]

Penalty for breach of rules for regulation of factories.

46. In the event of a breach in any factory of any of the rules under section ten for the regulation of factories—

(a) the explosive or ingredients thereof with respect to which, or being in any building or machine with respect to which, the breach is committed, shall be liable to be forfeited; and

(c) the occupier shall be punished with fine which may extend in the case of a first breach to five hundred rupees, and in the case of any subsequent breach to one thousand rupees, and to five hundred rupees in addition for each day during which the breach continues.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 17, which applies to stores.]

Penalty for breach of rules for regulation of magazines.

47. In the event of a breach in any magazine of the rules for the regulation of magazines under section thirteen, or of any rules under section eleven or section twelve—

(a) the explosive with respect to which, or being in the magazine when, the breach is committed, shall be liable to be forfeited; and

(b) the occupier shall be punished with fine which may extend in the case of a first breach to one hundred rupees, and in the case of any subsequent breach to one hundred rupees in addition for each day during which the breach continues.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 22.]

Penalty for breach of rules for regulation of registered places.

48. In the event of a breach in any registered place of the rules for the regulation of registered places under section fourteen, or of any rules under section eleven—

(a) the explosive with respect to which, or being in any house, building, place, safe or receptacle with respect to which, the breach is committed, shall be liable to be forfeited; and

(b) the occupier shall be punished with fine which may extend to one rupee for each pound of the explosive with respect to which, or being at the place in which, the breach was committed.

[38 Vic., c. 17, ss. 30, 32.]

Penalty for illegal sale of explosives in public places.

49. If any explosive is hawked, sold or exposed for sale in contravention of section sixteen or section eighteen—

(a) the explosive which is so exposed for sale, and any explosive found in the possession of any person convicted under this section, shall be liable to be forfeited; and

(b) the person hawking or selling the explosive, or exposing it for sale, shall be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 31.]

Penalty for selling explosives to children.

50. Whoever sells an explosive in contravention of section seventeen shall be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 40 (8).]

Penalty for affixing false name to receptacle containing explosives.

51. If the name of the explosive affixed to the outermost receptacle containing an explosive is materially false, the person selling the explosive or exposing it for sale shall be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s.

Penalty for breach of rules as to packing of explosives.

52. In the event of a breach of any rules as to the packing of explosives under section nineteen—

(a) the explosive with respect to which the breach is committed shall be liable to be forfeited; and

(b) the person guilty of the breach shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

[17 & 18 Vic., c. 7, s. 40 (9), (e): Cf. Indian Penal Code, s. 186.]

Penalty for obstructing conservator or other person.

53. Whoever resists the conservator, or other officer named in the rules under section twenty, or any person acting under the orders of the conservator, when causing any ship, boat, carriage or explosive to be removed under section twenty-one, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 40 (9) (d).]

Penalty for breach of provisions as to importation of an explosive or of the provisions of an importation-license.

54. In the event of a breach of the provisions of section twenty-five with respect to the importation of an explosive, or of the provisions of a license to import an explosive granted under section twenty-six—

(a) the explosive with respect to which, or being in any ship or boat with respect to which, the breach is committed, shall be liable to be forfeited; and

(b) the owner and master of the ship or boat, and the licensee or person to whom the explosive is delivered, shall each be liable to a fine which may extend in the case of a first offence to one thousand rupees, and in the case of any subsequent offence to two thousand rupees.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 43.

Penalty for importing or selling specially dangerous explosives in contravention of notification.

55. If any explosive is imported or sold in contravention of a notification under section twenty-eight—

(a) the explosive shall be liable to be forfeited;

(b) the owner and master of the ship in which the explosive is imported shall each be punished with fine which may extend to five rupees for every pound of the explosive brought in the ship; and

(c) the person selling and the person buying the explosive shall each be punished with fine which may extend to five rupees for each pound of the explosive sold.

Penalty for conveying specially dangerous explosives in contravention of notification.

56. If any explosive is conveyed in contravention of a notification under section twenty-eight—

(a) the explosive shall be liable to be forfeited; and

(b) the master of the ship or boat or the person in charge of the carriage in which the explosive is conveyed, as the case may be, shall be punished with fine which may extend to five rupees for each pound of the explosive so conveyed.

[Cf. Act I of 1872, s. 13.]

Penalty for vexatious entries, searches and seizures.

57. Any Government Inspector or officer authorized under section thirty-three or section thirty six, or referred to in section thirty-seven, who—

(a) without reasonable ground of suspicion enters or searches, or causes to be entered or searched, any building, carriage, boat or ship, or

(b) vexatiously and unnecessarily seizes the property of any person on the pretence of seizing or searching for any explosive or other thing liable to be forfeited under this Act or the rules under this Act, shall for every such offence be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 77.]

Penalty on, and removal of, trespassers.

58. Whoever enters without permission or otherwise trespasses on any factory or magazine, or the land immediately adjoining thereto which is occupied by the occupier of that factory or magazine, shall be punished with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, and may be forthwith removed from the factory, magazine or land by any Police-officer, or by the occupier of the factory or magazine, or by any agent or servant of, or other person authorized by, the occupier.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 77, para. 2.]

Penalty on persons committing act tending to cause explosion or fire in or about factories or magazines.

59. Whoever, other than the occupier of, or a person employed in or about, a factory or magazine is found committing any act which tends to cause explosion or fire in or about a factory or magazine shall be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 77, para. 3.]

Occupier to put up notices warning persons of liability under last two sections.

60. The occupier of every factory or magazine shall put up in some conspicuous place or places a notice or notices warning all persons of their liability to penalties under the last two foregoing sections; but the absence of a notice or notices shall not exempt a person from punishment under those sections.

[38 Vic., c. 17 s. 97, proviso.]

Penalty for trespass, &c., on Government manufactory or store.

61. Whoever enters without permission, or otherwise trespasses on, any place in the occupation of the Government where any explosive is manufactured or stored, or the land immediately adjoining thereto in the occupation of the Government, or of the officer or person in charge of that place, and any person found committing any act tending to cause explosion or fire in or about any such place, shall be liable to the like penalty, and may be removed and arrested in like manner, as if the place were a factory or magazine to which this Act applies.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 78.]

Power to arrest without warrant persons committing dangerous offences.

62. Whoever is found committing any act for which he is punishable under this Act or the rules under this Act, and which tends to cause explosion or fire in or about any factory, magazine, railway or port, or any carriage, ship or boat, may be apprehended without a warrant by a Police-officer, or by the occupier of, or the agent or servant of, or other person authorized by the occupier of, that factory or magazine, or by any agent or servant of, or other person authorized by, the railway-administration or conservator of the port, and be removed from the place where he is arrested, and conveyed as soon as conveniently may be before a Magistrate.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 82.]

Penalty for pulling down, injuring or defacing notices.

63. Whoever without due authority pulls down, injures or defaces any notice, copy of rules or document when affixed in pursuance of this Act or of the rules under this Act, shall be punished with fine which may extend to twenty rupees.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 87.]

Exemption of occupier, &c., from penalty on proof of offence having been committed by another person.

64. (1) Where any offence under this Act or the rules under this Act, for which the occupier of any factory, magazine or registered place is liable to a penalty or forfeiture, has in fact been committed by some other person, that other person shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

(2) Where any occupier is liable under this Act or the rules under this Act to a penalty or forfeiture for an offence committed by some other person, the occupier shall be exempt from the penalty or forfeiture on proving that he had supplied proper means and issued proper orders for the observance, and used due diligence to enforce the observance, of this Act and the rules under this Act, and that the offence in question was actually committed by some other person without his connivance, and, if the actual offender is alive, that he has taken all practicable means in his power to prosecute the offender to conviction.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 87, para. 4.]

(3) The occupier or other accused, when charged in respect of any offence committed by another person, may, if he think fit, be examined as a witness in the case.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 87, para. 5.]

(4) Where any offence under this Act for which any warehouseman, or carrier, or the owner or master of any ship, boat or carriage is liable to a penalty or forfeiture, has in fact been committed by some other person, this section shall apply in like manner as if the warehouseman, carrier, owner or master were such an occupier as in this section mentioned.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 88.]

Exemption of carrier or owner or master of ship where consignor, &c., is in fault.

65. Where a carrier, or an owner or master of a ship or boat, is prevented from complying with this Act or the rules under this Act by the wilful act, neglect or default of the consignor or consignee of the explosive, or other person, or by the improper refusal of the consignee or other person to accept delivery of the explosive, the consignor, consignee or other person, who is guilty of that wilful act, neglect, default or refusal shall be liable to the same penalty to which the carrier, owner or master is liable for a breach of this Act or those rules; and his conviction shall exempt the carrier, owner or master from any penalty or forfeiture under this Act or those rules.

38 Vic., 7, s. 96] 66. (1) In any case in which any explosive or ingredient of an explosive or any substance is liable to be forfeited under this Act or the rules under this Act, the convicting Magistrate may direct the whole or any part of the explosive, ingredient or substance, together with the receptacles containing the explosive, ingredient or substance to be forfeited.

Provisions as to forfeiture.

Vic., c. 17, 3, para. 2.] (2) Where any explosive or ingredient of an explosive or any substance is alleged to be liable under this Act or the rules under this Act to be forfeited, proceedings may be instituted in the Court of any Magistrate, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the explosive, ingredient or substance is, against the owner of the explosive, ingredient or substance, for the purpose only of enforcing the forfeiture; and, where the owner is unknown or cannot be found, the Magistrate may cause a notice to be published in such manner as he thinks fit stating that, unless cause is shown to the contrary at the time and place named in the notice, the explosive, ingredient or substance will be forfeited; and if cause is not so shown, the Magistrate, after hearing the owner or any person on his behalf (if present), may order all or any part of the explosive, ingredient or substance to be forfeited.

Vic., c. 17, 3, para. 1.] (3) Where a Court before whom a person is convicted of an offence against this Act or the rules under this Act has power to order a forfeiture of any explosive or ingredient of an explosive or any substance owned by, or found in the possession or under the control of, that person, the Court may, if it thinks fit, in lieu of ordering a forfeiture of that explosive, ingredient or substance, sentence that person, in addition to any other punishment, to a fine which may extend to such sum as appears to the Court to be the value of the explosive, ingredient or substance.

Vic., c. 17, .] Act XII 875, s.

67. Where the owner or master of a ship or boat is adjudged to pay a fine for an offence committed with or in relation to that ship or boat, the Court may, in addition to any other power it may have for the purpose of compelling payment of the fine, direct it to be levied by distress and sale of the ship or boat, and the tackle, apparel and furniture thereof, or so much thereof as is necessary.

Distress of ship or boat.

CHAPTER X.

SUPPLEMENTAL.

Vic., c. . 72.]

68. (1) When any municipal committee satisfies the Local Government that the erection of a magazine by the committee either within or without the limits of the municipality would conduce to the safety of the public within the limits of the municipality, and would not be injurious to the public without those limits, the Local Government may grant to that municipal committee a license under this Act for a magazine.

Provision of magazine by municipal committee.

(2) The municipal committee may, for the purpose of any license under this section, acquire any land or right over land, or appropriate any land or right belonging to it, and acquire or build a magazine, and may maintain and manage the magazine, and may charge for the use by persons of the magazine such reasonable sums as it may, from time to time, with the approval of the Local Government, fix.

(3) The amount of all sums charged, and the amount of all expenditure incurred, for the purposes of this section by any municipal committee shall respectively be credited to, and paid from, the municipal fund. [Cf. Act XIII of 1880, s. 23.]

(4) When any land is required by a municipal committee for the purposes of this section, if the municipal committee cannot agree with the owner for the purchase thereof, the Local Government may, on the request of the municipal committee, proceed to acquire it under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870; and, on payment by the municipal committee of the compensation awarded under that Act, the land shall vest in it for the purposes of this section. [Cf. Act XV of 1879, s. 13; Act XV of 1873, s. 39.] X of 1870.

(5) In this section "municipal committee" includes a municipal corporation or a body of municipal commissioners constituted by or under the provisions of any enactment for the time being in force. [Cf. Act XI of 1881, s. 2.]

69. (1) A person shall not be required by this Act or the rules under this Act to take out a license or to register any premises for the keeping of percussion-caps, or safety-fuzes for blasting, or fog-signals kept by any railway-administration for use on the railway of that railway-administration, or any prescribed explosive. [38 Vic., c. 17, s. 50.]

Provisions in favour of the keeping and conveyance of percussion-caps, safety-fuzes for blasting, fog-signals and prescribed explosives.

(2) It shall not be obligatory on a railway-administration making rules under section twenty-two to make any rules with respect to the conveyance, loading, unloading or keeping of any explosive to which this section applies.

(3) The Governor General in Council may, by notification, exempt any explosive to which this section applies, or any description thereof, from any other of the provisions of this Act or from any of the rules under this Act, or may declare that a license shall be required for the keeping of any explosive to which this section applies, or any description thereof, or that rules shall be made with respect to the loading, unloading, conveyance or keeping thereof.

70. Nothing in this Act or in the rules under this Act shall apply to the filling or conveying for private use, and not for sale, of any safety-cartridges to the amount allowed by this Act or those rules to be kept for private use. [38 Vic., c. 17, s. 41.]

Exemption of safety-cartridges for private use.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 100.]

Saving for owner or master of ship, carrier and others in case of emergency.

71. Nothing in this Act or the rules under this Act shall render liable to any penalty or forfeiture the owner or master of any ship or boat, or any carrier or warehouseman, or the person having charge of any carriage, for any act done in breach of this Act or those rules, if he proves that, by reason of stress of weather, inevitable accident or other emergency, the doing of that act was under the circumstances necessary and proper.

[38 Vic., c. 17, s. 102.]

Saving as to liability under other law.

72. Nothing in this Act or the rules under this Act shall—

(a) exempt, save as is in this Act or those rules expressly provided, any person from any suit which might, but for the provisions of this Act or those rules, have been brought against him; or

(b) prevent any person from being prosecuted under any other law for any act or omission which constitutes an offence against this Act or those rules, or from being liable under that other law to any other or higher punishment or penalty than that provided by this Act or those rules: provided that no person shall be punished twice for the same offence.

[New: Cf. Act VIII of 1878, s. 198: Act XI of 1878, s. 33.]

Notice and limitation of proceedings.

73. No proceeding other than a suit shall be commenced against any person for anything done in pursuance or in alleged pursuance of this Act or of the rules under this Act until at least one month's previous notice in writing of the intended proceeding and of the cause thereof has been given to him, nor after the expiration of three months from the accrual of that cause.

[38 Vic., c. 17 s. 104.]

Extension of definition of "explosive" to other explosive substances.

74. The Governor General in Council may, by notification, declare that any substance which appears to the Governor General in Council to be specially dangerous to life or property, by reason either of its explosive properties, or of any process in the manufacture thereof being liable to explosion, shall be deemed to be an explosive within the meaning of this Act and of the rules under this Act; and the provisions of this Act and of those rules (subject to such exceptions, limitations and restrictions as may be specified in the notification) shall accordingly extend to that substance in like manner as if it were included in the term "explosive" in this Act.

Procedure for making, publication and confirmation of rules.

75. (1) Every authority having power to make rules under any section of this Act other than section fifteen or section twenty-nine, shall, before making the rules, publish a draft of the proposed rules for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

(2) The publication shall be made, in the case of rules made by the Governor General in Council, in such manner as may in his opinion be sufficient for giving information to persons interested, and in the case of rules made by any other authority, in the prescribed manner.

(3) There shall be published with the draft a notice specifying a date at or after which the draft will be taken into consideration.

(4) The authority shall receive and consider any objection or suggestion which may be made by any person with respect to the draft before the date so specified.

(5) A rule made under this Act by a Local Government or railway-administration shall not take effect until it is confirmed by the Governor General in Council.

(6) Every rule made under this Act by a Local Government and confirmed by the Governor General in Council shall be published in the local official Gazette.

(7) Every rule made under this Act by a railway-administration and confirmed by the Governor General in Council, and every rule made under this Act by the Governor General in Council, shall be published in the Gazette of India.

(8) The publication in the local official Gazette, or, as the case may be, in the Gazette of India, of a rule purporting to be made under this Act, shall be conclusive evidence that it has been duly made, and, if it requires confirmation, that it has been duly confirmed.

(9) All powers to make rules conferred on any authority by this Act may be exercised from time to time as occasion requires.

Issue and publication of notifications.

76. (1) Save as provided in section four, all powers to issue notifications conferred by this Act on the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may be exercised from time to time as occasion requires.

(2) A notification issued by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government under this Act shall not take effect until it has been published in the Gazette of India or the local official Gazette, as the case may be.

V of 1879 ...	The Jute Warehouse and Fire-Brigade Act, 1879.	In section twenty-one, the words "or manufacture."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

1. The object of this Bill is to provide a comprehensive law regulating the manufacture, keeping, sale, conveyance and importation of explosives throughout British India. The matter was first brought to the notice of the Government in connection with an application made by the agents of Nobel's Explosives Company, Limited, for permission to import dynamite manufactured by the Company. The Government of Bombay, to whom the application was made, referred the question to a Committee, which reported that the expediency of allowing the importation into that Presidency of dynamite and other preparations of nitro-glycerine was doubtful. The Government of Bombay forwarded a copy of this report to the Government of India with a request that the importation of preparations of nitro-glycerine might be prohibited until further notice by a notification under the Sea Customs Act. Before complying with this request the Government of India thought it well to consult the Governments of Madras and Bengal. In reply, both Governments expressed an opinion that the importation of these explosives should not be forbidden. The Government of Bengal further submitted a draft set of rules to regulate the importation, package, transport and storage of dynamite and similar substances, together with a report which had been prepared by a Committee appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor to consider the entire subject. This Committee, while recommending that the draft rules should be published as rules under the Indian Arms Act, 1878, suggested the enactment of a comprehensive Imperial Act of a similar nature to the English Explosives Act, 1875 (38 Vic., c. 17), which would in a convenient and compendious Code deal with the subject of explosives in its entirety and furnish the public, as well as Government officials, with an easy means of ascertaining their duties, responsibilities and powers respecting articles which by their inflammable, explosive or dangerous nature imperil the public safety.

2. It appears to the Government of India that it would be an abuse of the powers conferred by the Indian Arms Act, 1878, to make rules of the nature of those submitted by the Bengal Committee under that Act. There are, no doubt, powers conferred by the Indian Arms Act which might, at first sight, seem to authorise the making of such rules; but the object to which such rules are directed is altogether different from that of the Act. The object of the Arms Act was to enable the Government more effectually to prevent arms and ammunition (which term under section 4 includes gun-cotton, dynamite, lithofracteur and other fulminating substances) from getting into the hands of persons who would make a bad use of them. In other words, the main object of that Act was to restrict the possession of arms and ammunition. But the main object of the rules prepared by the Bengal Committee is not restrictive. Their object is to protect the public against the dangerous nature of the explosives to which they relate by regulating all dealings with those explosives. If they are restrictive, it is only so far as is necessary to carry out their protective object. Under these circumstances, it appears to the Government that the proposed rules could not properly be published under the Indian Arms Act, 1878.

3. Nor does it appear that there is any other enactment, as the law at present stands, under which rules of the nature of those prepared by the Bengal Committee can be issued. Under the existing law, the only enactments relating to this subject are to be found in various fragmentary provisions, dealing with gunpowder and fireworks only, which are in force in the Presidency-towns and in certain municipalities and ports. It appears to the Government that it is unsatisfactory that the law should be in this state at a time when dynamite and other compounds of nitro-glycerine are rapidly taking the place of gunpowder in all works where blasting in necessary. Already these explosives have been used to a considerable extent in connection with various works undertaken both by the Government and by private enterprize throughout India; and it is only natural to suppose that, as their superiority to gunpowder becomes more widely known, their use will increase.

4. Under these circumstances, the suggestion of the Committee that an Act drawn on the model of the English Explosives Act, 1875, and dealing comprehensively with the whole subject of explosives, should be added to the Indian Statute-book, recommends itself to the Government of India, as being the only satisfactory method of treating the subject. Accordingly the present Bill has been prepared. It embodies such of the provisions of the English Act as are in the opinion of the Government necessary in this country. In addition to the omission from the Bill of certain provisions of the English Act, the Bill further differs from that Act in that, in accordance with the well-recognized principle of Indian legislation, it confers power on the Local Governments to provide by means of rules, adapted to the varying local circumstances of the provinces under their administration, for many points for which there are specific provisions in the body of the English Act.

5. The Bill is divided into ten chapters.

Chapter I (Preliminary) contains the usual preliminary matter. Section 2 saves from the Act the manufacture, packing, sale, conveyance or importation of explosives by the Government, and section 3 saves the provisions of the Indian Arms Act, 1878. Under section 4, the Act will not come into force until after the publication of a notification by the Governor General in Council; but, in order to prevent the inconvenience which would arise if the Act were brought into force before the notifications, rules, orders and appointments necessary for its efficient working had been made, sub-section (2) gives power to make these at any time after the passing of the Act, though they are not to take effect until the Act comes into force. By section 5 and the schedule are repealed the enactments which at present deal with the subject-matter of the Bill, with the exception of the Indian Arms Act, 1878, and the provisions to be found in the Andaman and Nicobar Islands Regulation, 1876. The provisions of the former Act relating to explosives have been left unrepealed for the reasons which have led the Government of India to decide that the rules framed by the Bengal Committee cannot be passed under it, namely, because the objects of the Act and of the Bill are different. The provisions of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands Regulation, 1876, have not been repealed because, considering the peculiar nature of that settlement, it seems inconvenient to interfere with any of the rules which are at present contained in that Regulation. Though the proposed Act will extend to the Andamans, its provisions will be practically a dead-letter in those islands.

6. Chapter II lays down the general law as to the manufacture and keeping of explosives prescribing the places at which an explosive may be manufactured or kept. It is to be read subject to certain exceptions in the Supplemental Chapter (X).

7. Chapter III deals with the licensing and regulation of factories and magazines, and the registration and regulation of registered places, and confers power on the Local Government to make rules on all necessary matters. A factory under the Act is a place licensed for the manufacture of an explosive; a magazine is a place licensed for the keeping of an explosive; and a registered place is a place registered for the keeping of an explosive. Magazines differ from registered places in that the former are places devoted exclusively to the keeping of explosives and the receptacles for or tools or implements for work connected with the keeping of explosives, whilst the latter are places, e.g., general stores or shops, not devoted exclusively to the keeping of explosives but in which explosives may be kept. Sections 11 and 12 enact certain provisions in favour of the occupiers of magazines and registered places; the former section enabling the occupiers of magazines and registered places to make cartridges without taking out a factory-license, and the latter enabling the occupiers of magazines to adapt or prepare explosives for use in their own mines or quarries without any such license. Section 15 imposes on the occupier of a factory or magazine the duty of making special rules for the regulation of the workmen in his factory or magazine.

8. Chapter IV relates to the sale of explosives. Section 16 prohibits explosives being hawked, sold or exposed for sale on highways or public places; section 17 prohibits the sale of an explosive to a child under 13; and section 18 prescribes the manner in which an explosive exposed for sale or sold is to be packed and labelled.

9. Chapter V treats of matters relating to the conveyance of explosives. Under section 19, the Governor General in Council may make rules as to the packing of explosives for conveyance. Under section 20, the Local Government may make rules to regulate the conveyance, loading, unloading and keeping of explosives within a port; and section 21 confers certain powers on the Conservator or other officer named in such rules in the event of their breach. Under section 22, Railway-administrations are directed to make rules for their own railways respectively. Under section 23, the Governor General in Council is empowered to make rules in any case in which rules under section 20 or section 22 do not apply. By section 24 the authority making rules under sections 20, 22 and 23 respectively is empowered to annex to a breach of any rule, or attempt to commit a breach of any rule, a penalty which may consist of a fine which may extend to two hundred rupees for each breach and to one hundred rupees for each day during which the breach continues, and of forfeiture of all or any part of the explosive in respect of which the breach is committed.

10. Chapter VI regulates the importation of explosives other than gunpowder, cartridges made with gunpowder, percussion-caps, fireworks, and any prescribed explosive, and prohibits their importation except under a license. The Governor General in Council is given power (section 26) to regulate all matters connected with the grant of such licenses, and the officers of sea-customs are given similar power (section 27) with regard to these explosives as they have with regard to any article on the importation of which restrictions are for the time being imposed by the law relating to sea customs.

11. Chapter VII confers special powers on the Governor General in Council to regulate or prohibit all dealings with any explosive which in the opinion of the Governor General in Council is specially dangerous to the public safety; and the officers of sea customs are given like powers with regard to any such explosive as they are given under section 27 with regard to the importation of the explosives referred to in section 25.

12. Chapter VIII (Government supervision) first provides for matters relating to inspection. The Local Government is empowered (section 29) to appoint Government Inspectors, and to make rules to assign and regulate their duties. Section 30 defines the general power of these officers as to entry, inspection, and examination of factories, magazines and registered places, and the taking of samples from the occupiers. Section 31 empowers the Government Inspector to require the occupier of any factory or magazine to remedy anything connected with his factory or magazine which is in the opinion of the Inspector unnecessarily dangerous or defective, and provides for a reference to the nearest Magistrate when the occupier objects to comply with the inspector's requisition. Section 32 deals with inspection in ports and of ships, and section 33 provides for the inspection of a wharf, carriage, ship or boat on or in which an explosive is reasonably supposed by a Government Inspector or other officer to be for the purpose of or in course of conveyance.

The chapter secondly provides (section 34) for the giving of notice of accidents arising from explosion or fire occurring in or about or in connection with any factory, magazine or registered place, or any carriage, ship or boat either conveying an explosive or on or from which an explosive is being loaded or unloaded, and (section 35) for inquiry into the cause of such accidents when necessary.

Thirdly, the chapter deals with power of search. It empowers (section 36) Government Inspectors and officers authorised by the Local Government to enter and search all places where they have reason to believe that any offence has been or is being committed with respect to an explosive, or that any explosive is in contravention of the Act, or that the provisions of the Act are not duly observed. Such searches are to be made in accordance with the Code of Criminal Procedure, and when made by any officer other than a Government Inspector are to be reported by him to his official superior within 48 hours. Section 37 gives special power to Government Inspectors and other officers to stop carriages or boats in case of emergency.

Fourthly, the chapter treats of seizure and detention of explosives. Section 38 authorizes the seizure and detention of any explosive liable to forfeiture, and section 39 gives the Local Government power to make rules to regulate such seizure and detention. Section 40 declares that the proceedings before a Magistrate with regard to any such seizure shall be commenced as soon as possible. Section 41 gives power to seize the receptacle in which the explosive was found, and section 42 to use the ship, boat, carriage, &c., in which the explosive was seized.

Lastly, the chapter (section 43) provides for the payment for samples of explosives taken by Government Inspectors or other officers under the Act.

13. Chapter IX deals with the penalties and legal proceedings.

The penalties for breaches of the provisions of the Act and the rules made under it are restricted to forfeitures and fines, and the only instance in which the Act prescribes imprisonment as a punishment is (section 53) that of resistance to a public officer.

14. With regard to legal proceedings, section 64 provides for the exemption of an occupier of a factory, magazine or registered place, and of a warehouseman, carrier or owner or master of a ship, boat, or carriage from penalty on proof of another being the real offender. Under section 65, a carrier or owner or master of a ship or boat is exempted from penalty when he is prevented from complying with the law by the act or default of the consignor or consignee of the explosive or some other person and the consignor or consignee or other person is convicted (as it is provided he may be) under the Act.

Section 66 confers a general power on Magistrates to order forfeiture in all cases in which explosives are liable to be forfeited, and provides that proceedings may be taken for the purpose only of inflicting a forfeiture. The same section empowers the Court to inflict an additional fine in lieu of forfeiture of the explosive; and section 67 provides for levy of a fine imposed on the owner or master of a ship by distress of the ship.

15. Chapter X (Supplemental) provides for several miscellaneous matters. Section 68 empowers Municipal Committees to provide magazines for the use of the public; section 69 enacts certain provisions in favour of the keeping and conveyance of percussion-caps, safety-fuses for blasting, fog-signals and prescribed explosives. Section 69 exempts railway-administrations from the obligation to make rules with regard to such explosives, and empowers the Governor General in Council to exempt such explosives altogether from the Act. By section 70 the filling and conveying for private use, and not for sale, of safety-cartridges are excepted from the application of the Act. Section 71 exempts the owner or master of a ship and a carrier or warehouseman or any person in charge of a carriage from punishment when an act is done by him in breach of the provisions of the Act in a case of emergency. Section 72 contains the usual provision saving liability to civil suit or prosecution under other laws. Section 73 deals with notice and limitation of proceedings. Section 74 empowers the Governor General in Council to extend the definition of "explosive" to other explosive substances; and sections 75 and 76 treat of general matters connected with the issue and publication of notifications and rules. Under section 75, proposed rules must be published as drafts before they are finally made, and the authority that makes the rules is directed to receive and consider any criticisms or suggestions which may be made by persons interested.

AMENDMENT OF THE EXCISE ACT.

THE HON. MR. REYNOLDS moved that the Bill to amend the Bengal Excise Act, 1878, be passed, and in doing so he said that the debateable questions connected with this Bill were so fully discussed when the measure was last before the Council that it was unnecessary for him to detain the Council with any further remarks on the present occasion.

The HON. AMEER ALI said he proposed to vote among the dissentients on this motion, and he therefore begged His Honor the President's permission to say a few words in explanation of his vote. He had the honour of being a member of the Select Committee on this Bill, but his absence from India prevented him from taking part in the deliberations of that body, or assisting the Committee with any suggestions which lay in his power to offer. But having read the reports of the debates which had taken place in Council, he found that he agreed in the main with the remarks of RAI KRISTODAS PAL and the hon. member opposite (Moulvie Mahomed Yusuf). Therefore he did not think it would be right to give his vote in favour of the passing of the Bill without stating that he agreed with those hon. members in their views as to the sale of the fresh tari of the palm or date-tree. He merely said this to explain how he was obliged to vote.

The motion was put and carried, and the Bill passed.

EXTENSION OF LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

THE HON'BLE MR. MACAULAY said:—"I have the honour to move for leave to introduce a Bill for the extension of Local Self-government in these Provinces. As, from various causes which I need not specify, there has been considerable delay in the preparation of the Bill, and as the Council will not again assemble for a fortnight, it will probably be expected that I should at this stage give a general exposition of its provisions. Before I proceed to do so, it may be convenient if I lay before the Council a brief sketch of the circumstances which have attended the initiation and development of this measure. When Lord Mayo's Government determined upon the adoption of a scheme of financial decentralization in 1870, it recognized, as the ultimate outcome of its action, something beyond a mere division of financial control between the Imperial and Local Governments. It declared that the full meaning and integrity of the measure comprehended the development of Self-government, the strengthening of Municipal institutions, and a larger association of Natives and Europeans in the administration of affairs. It recognized that the practical adoption of these principles could only be gradual, that difficulties would be felt, and that disappointments and partial failures would occur; but it expressed Lord Mayo's generous conviction that, the object in view being the instruction of many peoples and races in a good system of administration, the Local Governments and all their subordinates would enlist the active assistance, or, at all events, the sympathy of many classes who had till then taken little or no part in the work of social and material advancement. This declaration of policy was followed in Bengal by the organization, under Sir George Campbell, of District Committees for the administration of the road cess, of District School Committees for the control of education, and of a system of Benches on which Honorary Magistrates were associated with the stipendiary officers. Subsequently, the laws relating to Municipalities were amended and enlarged under Sir Richard Temple's Government, and an elective constitution was introduced into Calcutta, and, later on, into three Municipalities in the interior. In 1877 a further step was taken in financial decentralization, and the Local Governments were allowed a share in the development of important branches of the revenue, as they had been allowed in 1870 an interest in the control of expenditure. I need not detain the Council by enlarging upon the eminent success of this further measure of decentralization in the hands of Sir Ashley Eden. Nor need I enter into a detailed explanation of the causes which have operated to dwarf the effect of the elective provisions contained in Sir Richard Temple's General Municipal Bill. It will be sufficient for me to say that a provision which was intended simply as a check on the indiscriminate extension of the elective system to places to which it might be unsuited has operated practically to exclude from that system all the large and advanced Municipalities to which it was intended to apply. This and other defects will be fully remedied in the Bill which has been introduced by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Reynolds. Experience has amply justified Lord Mayo's anticipations. Difficulties have been encountered; disappointments and failures have occurred. That decentralization would prove fiscally successful in the hands of such a man as Sir Ashley Eden, with broad and liberal views of financial administration, with keen insight and great power of forecast, was naturally to be expected. But from a variety of causes, arising from the constitution of the local bodies, the degree of power and responsibility entrusted to them, the extent of the funds to be administered, and other conditions which need not be detailed, there can be no doubt that the advance made in the development of Self-government has been comparatively small. It was reserved to the present government of India to grasp the opportunity of the expiry of the provincial contracts of 1877 to reaffirm the principles laid down by Lord Mayo, to determine upon a further practical development of his intentions, and to appeal to the Provincial Governments to revise the system of control so as to loosen the trammels which have hitherto hindered the administrative education, and marred the utility, of the Local Bodies. And that appeal will not be in vain. The twelve years that have elapsed since Lord Mayo's Resolution was issued, if they have witnessed no large strides in Self-government itself, have seen a great increase in the material prosperity of Bengal, and a great advance in the development of wealth, the opening of communications, and the dissemination of knowledge. The material is undoubtedly ready for the undertaking Nor will this Government or its officers be found wanting. Sir Ashley Eden, in laying the original scheme before the Commissioners of Division, directed me to declare to them that it must be accepted as the settled policy of Government to develope among the local bodies a genuine and intelligent interest in the management of local affairs, and he appealed to all the officers of his Government for loyal co-operation in giving to this policy the fullest effect compatible with the interests of the province. In pursuance of these principles, he afterwards took the earliest opportunity of relieving Municipalities in the interior of the charges for Police, and thus made available a large sum for expenditure on local improvements. You, Sir, have determined that Local Self-government shall have free scope and liberal countenance in Bengal. You have decided to place that policy upon a thoroughly sound basis resting upon a wise recognition of the importance of the movement, and utilizing the many forces that are available for the attainment of the great end before us. As the Council will observe from the scheme which I am about to lay before it, the policy will receive at your hands no hesitating encouragement, no half-hearted support. And your efforts will be seconded by the District Officers of Bengal. It has been a familiar cry among a certain class of writers during the past few months that the Commissioners and District Officers must resist the policy of Local Self-government as tending to diminish their power and lower their prestige. The members of the Civil Service have been depicted as enemies of liberty and progress, greedy graspers at petty power, selfish and narrow-minded opponents of all that is generous and liberal in policy. Sir, the Civil Servants of Bengal need no apologist in me. Their works are too well known, their solicitude for the good of the people among whom they pass their lives too deep and true, to require that they should be defended at my hands. Differences of opinion on questions of policy must always be expected; and it would be strange indeed if such differences were not elicited in the discussion of such a question as this. But the great majority of the officers of this Administration have distinctly announced their hearty concurrence in the policy of this measure, and have recognized that, far from lowering their prestige or diminishing their power, it will, if properly initiated and developed, place that prestige upon a higher footing, and open that power to broader and nobler aims. The papers which I shall have the honour of laying before the Council will leave no doubt that your officers will co-operate heartily in the advancement of this great measure, as they have always co-operated in any measure that promises to contribute to the enlightenment and welfare of their fellow-subjects.

The three main points to be considered in framing a scheme of Local Self-government are the constitution of the local bodies, the control to be exercised over them, and the work to be entrusted to them. A guiding principle to be observed in the consideration of the first point is obviously the utilization to the utmost of existing and well-established institutions,—the construction of our edifice as far as possible with existing materials. The District Committees cannot be said to be well-established. As a rule they have been failures, and as an agency for the management of local affairs by the people themselves, they can never be very efficient. Our districts are so large that, if the District Committee meets at short intervals, it can only be occasionally attended by members who do not reside at or in the immediate vicinity of the head-quarters station, while, if it meets at long intervals, it loses its character of a working body. In either case the work will either be neglected altogether, or be carried on by members who can as a rule have little knowledge of the wants of the outlying tracts. It has therefore been determined that the area under a Local Board, to be called the Local Government Circle, though if members are available, it may be smaller, should not as a rule be larger than the area of a sub-division. These Local Boards will be practically new bodies, but we cannot go lower for our Chief Board if we wish to utilize the intelligence of the educated inhabitants and to give them duties and responsibilities sufficiently important and sufficiently large to engage their attention and enlist their sympathies. Nor can we go higher, by creating District Boards, without impairing the importance and utility of these Local Boards, through which we hope that the measure will take root in the country, and in the working and direction of which we hope to utilize and develope the enthusiasm and energies of its best intelligence. We can, however, provide them with useful auxiliaries among the people. We can frame for them a sound basis and an executive agency out of the material of village Committees to which the people have already become to some extent accustomed. In the conjunction of these two bodies, the Local Board administering the Local Government Circle, and the Union Committee administering a Union of villages, we hope to combine and make mutually supporting two great elements of success which we undoubtedly have at hand The first of these is the political enthusiasm of the educated classes. This has been exaggerated by some: it has certainly been unduly depreciated by others. That such enthusiasm exists, and exists in a genuine and active form, must be plain to any one who has watched the proceedings of the past few months, and who has conversed with educated men from the interior. Among the great mass of the rural population, on the other hand, there is no enthusiasm whatever on the subject of Local Self-government as a general question. The Bengali villager takes a keen interest in the affairs of his own village and its immediate neighbourhood, but he knows and cares nothing about politics or representation, and he has no idea of giving his time to the management of the affairs of other people. But, if he has no political enthusiasm, he can be made to serve the enthusiasm of others, while looking only to that which interests himself. He will readily contribute to the formation of an efficient village executive, as officers who have sought to utilize his services on village works have always found. He it is who really possesses local knowledge and local interest within his own narrow sphere. The educated man whom we hope to see upon the Local Board will have need of such an executive agency. He is willing to give up his time to the direction of local affairs; but it is impossible that he could be acquainted with the wants of more than a small section of the area to be administered by the Board on which he sits. He will be the administrative head, but he will require executive hands. In representative Committees of the villagers, we shall have the material for a great part of that executive power in which the Local Boards will at first be to some extent deficient. What we require to establish is a touch between the educated member of the Local Board with political enthusiasm, but without much local knowledge or interest, and the member of the village Union Committee with local knowledge and interest, but without political enthusiasm. That touch can, I think, be established. At first the members of the Union Committee will not look beyond their Unions. But they will form a corps d'elite, and as such will provide the constituency to elect the members of the Local Board to represent the tract to which their Unions belong. As the intelligent Union Committee man gradually sees the advantages of a seat on the Local Board, as his field of interest becomes gradually extended and he begins to realize a desire for larger duties and responsibilities with larger power, he will seek election to the Local Board, while the Local Board will gradually gain by such accessions the practical knowledge which it may lack at first.

It seems to me of the first importance that the Union Committee should be made thoroughly representative, and be fostered and utilized to the fullest extent. If the members are chosen by the people themselves, and sufficiently large interests and responsibilities are entrusted to them, the Committee will bring home to every villager the fact that he has a voice in the management of affairs which concern him, and if the best men can be induced to serve upon it an ever stronger and stronger link will be established between the people and the distant Local Board, which at first they will barely comprehend. It is not intended that the Union Committees should be formed by a coalition of chowkidari punchayets. Whether they can hereafter be entrusted with any control over the village police is a question which need not now be discussed. The subject is under enquiry by a Special Commission and Government must reserve its decision in the matter. I may only say that the expression "Union," which is to be eliminated from the Municipal Act, should also be eliminated from the Chowkidari Act, where it is used to represent a smaller area than that which is proposed as the lowest Self-government unit. It is proposed to take as that unit the area that would ordinarily be served by a pound. This may be a large village or a group of villages. Its radius would ordinarily be about two miles. The strength of each Committee would be 5, 7 or 9 as might be determined in the order constituting each. The duties of Union Committees will be referred to presently when I am dealing with the question of the work to be entrusted to the Local Bodies, but I may say here that the policy will be to give them an improvable revenue to devote to Union purposes, and that they will be entrusted with the management of the local pound and the expenditure of its revenue. These Union Committees should be elected by the villagers themselves, not by formal methods, but by such simple processes as may be familiar to them. It will be advisable to provide for the necessary elasticity by leaving the details of the method of election in different places to be settled by rules under the Act. In exceptional cases, where factions run high and there would be a danger of one section of the community being oppressed by another, it would be necessary to nominate some or all of the members. But these instances would be of rare occurrence, and in the great majority of the cases the Union Committee should be elected by the people of the Union. It is proposed to fix the franchise so as to exclude only the most ignorant classes who have no stake in the Union and no interest in its improvement. I am convinced that in this organization we shall have the foundation of a great and successful system of Local Self-government. If the Union Committee is entrusted with real powers and responsibilities it will become an object of interest to the villagers, its proceedings will be watched and criticised, and the power of control which each voter possesses will gradually be understood. We shall in fact give to the people Local Self-government in the form in which they will be able to appreciate it, in the management of their own pound, their own schools and their own roads. At the same time we shall be making them contribute unconsciously, and in the pursuit of a different object, to a broader system of Local Self-government which individually they would be unable to understand.

This brings me to the question of the constitution of the Local Boards. It is proposed that, as a rule, each thanna should be represented by two elected members. The chief portion of the elective body would be the Committees of the Unions in the thanna. Apart from the question of an educational franchise, to which I will presently allude, the right of voting for the election of members of the Local Boards should be restricted to the Union Committees,—to the men, that is, who have been chosen by the villagers themselves to manage their affairs. If we attempt scrutin de liste, if we ask the cultivators at large to vote for the members for a thanna instead of concentrating their attention on their own villages, we shall be courting failure. I venture to think that such opposition as is ordinarily offered to the extension of the elective system in Bengal proceeds upon a totally incorrect assumption. We are told that the people will abuse their powers and will return a set of irresponsible demagogues who will neglect the work and discredit the system and will ultimately have to be set aside by Government. In my humble opinion,—an opinion which rests upon the evidence of facts and upon the views of some of the most experienced officers of the province,—the danger is, not that election would be abused, but that it would not be used. We have to guard, not against a revolution, but against a collapse; not against an unhealthy exuberance in the plant we seek to rear, but against its death from inanition. A perfect system of election has a double value. It acts at once as a stimulus and as a check on the elected; it enlarges the interest and promotes the self-reliance of the elector. Under such a system the elected member has a sense both of independence and of responsibility to which the nominated member is a stranger. He knows that he has little to fear if he does his duty, and he will seek to discharge his trust efficiently under penalty of having it withdrawn from him. But unless the electors take an interest in the elections, the members might as well be selected by nomination, by lot, by the day of the week on which they were born, or by any other haphazard process. If the electors do not feel that by their votes they indirectly affirm their interest in the management of affairs through the representatives of their choice, they might as well abstain from voting, and they will have no more share in Self-government, as represented by the proceedings of the elected body, than they have in the motion of the planets. If they have such an interest, election is the only means by which they can give it effect. Now the villagers have a keen interest in all work that affects their village and its surroundings, and they may therefore be trusted to use their knowledge and interest in electing the Committee to do that work. But we must always keep in mind the important condition to which I have already adverted—that the people at large are devoid of enthusiasm in the matter of Local Self-government as a general question—and recognize that it would be idle to expect them to vote for the election of a Board to control a whole sub-division. If we are to have election we must have election, as regards the larger areas, by a select body only. It has been proposed that this body should be formed by the Magistrate of the District by his own nomination. I should like to ask any district officer in Bengal if he could nominate 150 or 200 men in each of his sub-divisions, who in his opinion would be the best representatives of the people. His reply would be that the great proportion of his nominees would be the nominees of the police, and that he could not guarantee that they would be even approximately the best men. The system which the Bill proposes, however, will give us a representative body chosen for their own ends by the people themselves. In the Union Committee we shall have a compact body of the most intelligent men, who will gradually acquire and transmit a feeling of interest in the constitution of the larger body. I do not overlook the probability that by reserving the ordinary franchise to the Union Committees, we may exclude men in the larger villages who, though intelligent, have no seat on the Union Committee. They may be much wealthier and much more intelligent than others who, because they belong to the Committee of a smaller Union, are entitled to vote. It would be impossible, however, so to frame the rules as to admit them without extending the franchise to very many others who would make no attempt to employ it. Moreover it should be our policy to strengthen the Union Committees, and through them the Local Board, by making it an object with the most intelligent villagers to join them. If the Union is very populous and advanced, the villagers can apply to have it erected into a Municipality. Besides the Union Committees, it is proposed to give the right of voting for the election of members for the thanna to all persons residing within the Local Government Circle or any Municipality contiguous to it, who are holders of University degrees or diplomas, who are pleaders or mookhtears, or who hold salaries of not less than Rs. 50 a month, and who are themselves entitled to vote for the election of the Committee of any Union in the thanna, or belong to a joint undivided family of which one of the members is so entitled. It appears to me that the recognition of an educational qualification with some guarantee of local interest is very important. It must be realized that, though the Union Committees will do good work and will interest the people in Local Self-government so far as their own villages are concerned, the success of the measure in its broader aspects will rest with the educated classes. It will be an important advantage to bring together the two elements—the educated man and the working Union Committee man—in the exercise of the franchise. Those who oppose an educational qualification as such appear to me to look only at one side of the question. It is no doubt very important that we should guard against handing over the administration of local affairs to a number of needy adventurers who can talk, but who will not work; and if there were any danger of this, a heavy responsibility would rest with those who advocated such a scheme. But there is too much of a tendency to object to education on general grounds as if its very possession were a danger, and it could not be combined with local interest,—to look upon it in fact as a positive disqualification, when in reality we can look for no real success without it. Local interest should certainly be an indispensable qualification. A pleader, we will say, from Dacca residing in the Municipality of Burdwan could have no claim to vote for members, or himself be a member, of a Local Board in the district. He has an interest in the Municipality as a rate-payer, and is entitled to a voice in its management, but he has no concern outside it. But I would ask on what ground it could be said that a pleader at the head-quarters of a sub-division or district, whose father or brother held land in a thanna in the Local Government Circle, should be disqualified for voting for the election of the members for the thanna, or for being himself a member? I would even ask what more fitting representative the thanna could have? With the safeguard of a certain amount of local interest, the concurrence of the educated classes will be essential to the success of the measure as a whole. We shall use their political enthusiasm to leaven the mass of comparative indifference and ignorance with which we shall have to deal.

Now as regards the qualifications of candidates. Every person qualified to vote for the election of members should himself be qualified for candidature. And in order not to exclude small zemindars and men of substance, who, though they might not wish to serve on Union Committees, would be quite willing to stand for election to the Local Board, it is proposed to add a separate qualification of the payment in the district of, say, Rs. 100 Road and Public Works Cess or of Rs. 50 license-tax or proof of income from any source amounting to Rs. 2,000 per annum. I am now merely giving a sketch of the measure, and it will of course be understood that all details will be fully considered in Select Committee. No one should be qualified for election who does not reside within the limits of the Local Government Circle or within a Municipality contiguous to it.

It is proposed that Government should have power to nominate one-third of the members of the Local Board. It is unnecessary for me to point out to the Council the necessity for this provision. It corresponds with the English practice of making Justices of the Peace, who are of course nominated ex-officio guardians of Unions. At any rate it will be essential to make such a provision at the outset of our measure. If this power is not reserved, important classes may be left unrepresented, and the Boards may be deprived of the services of men of wealth and intelligence, Native and European, who are unwilling to undergo the ordeal of an election, and of men of businesslike habits and executive experience, whose absence may be fatal to their successful working. At the same time it might be provided that there should be no ex-officio members, and that not more than one-fourth of the total number of members should be nominated by Government from among its own servants. Thus if a Local Government Circle consisted of four thannas, there would ordinarily be twelve members of whom Government would nominate four, of whom again not more than three would be Government servants. This number would of course be exclusive of any Government servants chosen by the electors.

The remarks which I have made on the subject of election apply only to thannas in which it is possible to introduce the system of Unions to a considerable extent. If one-half of the area of a thanna is under Union Committees, there will be a sufficiently large elective body. Where this is not the case the members for the thanna must all be nominated. If we cannot get men fit to manage Unions, we cannot get men fit to elect members of Local Boards.

It is proposed that every Local Board should be allowed to elect its own Chairman and Vice-Chairman, subject to the approval of Government. Every person so elected would, upon the confirmation of his election, become a member of the Board. It is hoped that the Boards will in as many cases as possible elect one of their own body, and it will be the policy of Government to encourage them to the utmost to do so; but it is considered unreasonable to debar them from electing an official who may not have been nominated to the Board by Government, if they feel, as many may feel at the outset, that the affairs of the Board cannot be satisfactorily conducted without the aid of his experience and knowledge. It is hoped that such instances will gradually become less and less numerous. Efforts will be made to guard, so far as existing circumstances will permit, against the dearth of competent non-officials. If there are no competent men in the circle it can be enlarged. The scheme will be perfectly elastic in this respect. If a sub-division is very backward it can be linked on to one more advanced, and the two will then constitute one Local Government Circle, with its head-quarters at such place as Government may direct. It will be the desire of Government that non-official Chairmen should be elected wherever this is possible, and I think most District and Sub-Divisional Officers recognise that, if they have an intelligent Board to deal with, they will have a much stronger and more dignified position if they have no place at all upon it. Some persons argue that the Magistrate will lose his power and prestige if he is not the Chairman of every Board in his jurisdiction. I am not speaking now of the control that must be maintained for the protection of the public interests and the maintenance of efficiency. I am speaking of the individual power and prestige of the Magistrate himself. In one sense, no doubt, it is quite true that he would have more power and prestige if we made him Chairman of every Board. It is true in the sense that the King of Dahomey has more power and prestige in Dahomey than the Prime Minister of England has in the British Dominions. But it is not true in the sense that the man who by his counsel and advice and the force of his character and the influence that is begotten of confidence and respect, guides thinking men forward in the path of progress and exacts from them, not unreasoning assent, but intelligent and willing concurrence and co-operation, has more real power and prestige than the individual who has only to express his will that it may be blindly obeyed. Notwithstanding the terrible revelations with which we have recently been favoured regarding the sanity of the members of the Indian Civil Service, I venture to think that we may flatter ourselves that they still retain a sufficient glimmering of reason to enable them to choose between the Prime Minister of England and the King of Dahomey.

I now come to the second point,—the control to be exercised over the local bodies. This control has two objects, a direct one and an indirect one. The first is the protection of the public interests by the efficient performance of the duties entrusted to the bodies. The second is the maintenance of a standard of administrative education. The first object requires no further notice. It is sufficiently obvious. The second simply means that Local Self-government can only be successful if the people both do the work and do it well. We must ensure that there be no collapse and no serious loss of efficiency in the Administration. If this is allowed to occur the public will suffer, the officers of Government will not be relieved of the work that they have now to do, and the local bodies will not learn to take the position which we desire to assign to them. Efficient control must therefore be maintained. I have already in my remarks on the internal direction of the Boards somewhat anticipated this part of the subject, and argued that control should not be maintained from within. I venture to differ from an opinion which I have this morning seen expressed in a London newspaper, that if Government ceases to govern entirely through its own agents, and governs partly through parish vestries and Local Boards, it will take an irrevocable step towards an anarchy which will utterly destroy the fabric of the British Empire in India. I think we need not be seriously disturbed by the cloud-giant conjured up by this temperate and well-informed writer. I venture to hope that British rule may still be maintained, even though the roads, schools and dispensaries of our sub-divisions are managed by non-official agency, and that the members of our Local Boards will not insist on turning us out of the country. Internal control of the Local Boards, therefore, not being indispensable for the preservation of the Empire, the question is what form of external control will be most suitable. That form will be best which will secure the three results to which we look forward—the political education of the people, the relief of the regular Administration by the enlistment of gratuitous agency, and the maintenance of efficiency. In other provinces it is proposed to employ partly local and partly divisional control. It has been held that this system would not be suitable to Bengal. There can be no question that it would fully secure the third object—the maintenance of efficiency,—but it is considered that it would militate against the first and second objects, the political education of the people and the relief of the regular Administration. The influence of the Magistrate and the Commissioner would undoubtedly be exercised for the promotion of efficiency, but it is felt that it would involve too much of that primary interference in detail which is so likely to discourage and repel non-official agency, while the duty of supervision and control to be performed by the Magistrate, the Commissioner and the Government would be so heavy that there would be a large increase rather than a decrease in the work they have now to do. This duty, it is to be observed, will be more and more onerous as the scheme receives its full development. It is very probable that in other provinces, the third and essential object could not otherwise be secured, and that large powers of local interference must be reserved: in such places, however, progress will not be rapid, and the many great questions of superior control which must accompany the operation of the Bengal scheme will not arise. In Bengal it is felt that efficiency of administration can be secured under a more liberal scheme; it is felt that we can afford to look less to control as a safeguard against failure than to reasonable liberty, tempered by control, as an instrument of education. It will of course be necessary that the Magistrate should have the power (though he will probably never have to use it) of suspending the action of the Board when, for reasons to be recorded, he believes it to be imminently dangerous to the public health or the public peace, and, in order that he may be kept fully acquainted with their action, that he should be furnished with copies of their proceedings and permitted access to their works. But all power of interference beyond this and all control over the initiative action of the Boards, it is proposed to vest in a Central Board, which will deal, not only with all the Local Boards, but also with all the Municipalities, in the Province. That Board will consist of a Chairman and two members, the former a specially selected officer of Government, the latter non-official native gentlemen of education and influence. The functions of the Central Board will be similar to those exercised by the Local Government Board of England. It will have full power to compel Local Boards and Municipalities to perform duties they may be found to have neglected, and to suspend work which may be found to be wasteful or mischievous. It will deal with their estimates, sanction their bye-laws and rules of procedure, supervise elections, and in fact perform all the functions of Government which may be extended to it. Those functions will chiefly relate to guidance and the control and supervision of details. Government must of course retain the direction of general policy, and there will be many questions of which it alone can be the arbiter. It is not overlooked that this will really be a new department for the control of Local Bodies generally, and that in some respects there will only be a shifting of labour and expense from one set of shoulders to another. But it must be recognized that if the extension of Local Self-government is ultimately to relieve our officers of much work that they now have to do, or would hereafter have to do, it can only be by the creation of a special department to deal with the questions involved. I think it may fairly be claimed that the system will secure all three of the objects already alluded to. It will give reasonable liberty to the Local Bodies, it will relieve the regular Administration of much present and more prospective work, and it will secure that the management of local affairs is efficiently conducted. The Board will be in close and constant correspondence with the local officers, who will be able to represent to it their views and give it the benefit of their advice and their local experience. With the Local Bodies it will correspond direct. It will have inspectors for special purposes, and its members will themselves make tours of inspection. It will be able to secure such uniformity as may be desirable, to apply experience gained in one part of the country for the benefit of another, and to gather up and utilize various agencies which are now imperfectly employed. In regard to Sanitation and the allied questions, it is expected that the Central Board will be able to secure improvements which have hitherto been found unattainable.

As I have detained the Council so long with an exposition of what is proposed in regard to the constitution and control of Local Bodies, I shall merely indicate generally the departments to be entrusted to them, leaving most of the details under this head to be explained hereafter. There is not much to add to the list given in the letter from the Government of Bengal to the Government of India, dated 8th April last, which has already been published. The policy will be to give Local Bodies the construction and maintenance of roads (District and Provincial), and of such buildings as they may be willing to deal with through their subordinate engineering staff under the general control of the Government District Engineer, the management of all hospitals and dispensaries and the administration generally of medical relief, the management of zillah schools through Joint-Committees formed partly of representatives of the Municipalities in which the schools may be situated, the control of middle schools, and of primary schools,—of all educational institutions, in fact, except colleges, attached collegiate schools, normal schools, with attached model schools, medical schools, surveying schools, madrassahs and schools for Europeans and Eurasians,—the management of all camping grounds and staging bungalows, the control of Ferries, of Pounds, of Sanitation, of Vital Statistics, of Vaccination, where the licensed agency is employed, of Drainage schemes in certain cases under Act VI of 1880, of the administration of relief in times of scarcity (special grants being made in exceptional cases), and various miscellaneous duties which I need not now specify. It is not proposed to make the collection of the License Tax any part of the duty of Local Bodies. It would be no gain to them to be made responsible for the collection if they had no share in the outturn, and the fact that a large portion of the tax is levied in Municipalities renders it impossible to make any such arrangement.

The Union Committee will, as I have already said, be entrusted with the management and the expenditure of the income of the Union Pound. They will, under the control of the Local Board, manage the primary schools of the Union, and they will, as a rule, form the Managing Committee of any aided or middle vernacular school in the Union. They will appoint and pay the gurus of the patshalas, and they will be the medium for the transmission to them of rewards granted by the Local Boards. They will have the management of all village roads, and, separately or as members of Joint Committees appointed by the Local Board, of such lengths of district or provincial roads as may be entrusted to them by the Local Board. They will be responsible for the accurate registration of vital statistics and for the execution of small measures of sanitation, drainage and water-supply affecting the Union. In regard to these works they will act under the general control of the Local Board and will be bound to carry out its orders, subject to the right of appealing to the Central Board. Powers will be given to them to compel private persons to take such action with their tanks, land and other property as the Union Committee, of its own motion or by order of the Local Board, may direct.

The Local Board will deal, subject to the direction of the Central Board, with the control, directly or through the Union Committees, of the various branches of the Administration which I have just enumerated. Where the regular staff of Government vaccinators has given place to licensed vaccinators, the Local Board will be entrusted with the management of this branch, in regard to which their general and social influence will be specially useful. The Inspector of Vaccination will also be their Sanitary Inspector. It is proposed that Government should maintain a District Engineer at the head-quarters of each district who would be the Inspector of all Local Works within its limits. He would be the Consulting Engineer of all Local Boards who could not afford to employ Engineers, or "Surveyors," of their own, with the necessary qualifications, that is, he would prepare all projects for roads and bridges which might be beyond the powers of the Surveyor. He would generally supervise the works of all Boards and give them the benefit of his advice. He would also prepare all designs for public buildings and the like and estimates for their repairs, and, where the system was complete, would make them over, when sanctioned, to the Local Board, which would execute them through its Surveyor and his establishment, and thus, as it were, act as contractor to Government, securing the ordinary allowance on account of establishment for the maintenance of its staff.

The funds of the Local Board will consist, first, of the proceeds of the Road Cess levied in the circle unless the Central Board should direct that, in consequence of the general importance of any work in any other circle, a portion should be contributed to its funds. The Union Committees will be entitled to the income from their pounds: where there is no Union the income will of course go direct to the Local Board. Even in Unions, however, the Local Board will be able to participate in the increase of income which will undoubtedly take place by reducing their grants to the Union for roads and schools. It will be the desire of Government to make over the existing pound revenue, with no corresponding deduction, or with as little deduction as possible, from the general grants to be made to the Boards, as the position of the finances may allow. In no case will Government seek to participate in the development of this revenue, and that it will very largely develope under the management of the villagers themselves no officer of mofussil experience will deny. Figures which have been kindly supplied to me by my friend, the Honorable Mr. Thomas of the Madras Civil Service, show that in Madras the pound system has been largely developed with the most satisfactory fiscal results. The large revenue to be gained by careful management of this branch will be at the disposal of the Local Bodies for local improvements. Ferries will be transferred to the Local Boards, and they will enjoy all the increase of revenue that may be derived from them. The general services to be made over to the Local Boards will be covered by fixed grants representing existing, or recent average, expenditure, and these will not be revised except in the event of any change in the method of administration. It may even be hoped that Government will be able to pursue the policy which Sir Ashley Eden was able to adopt, of making annual additions to the grant for primary education. So long as the service is performed the fixed grant will remain, with the proviso that funds are not diverted from one object, such as primary education, to another, without express sanction or in accordance with such rules as may be laid down.

Such is an outline of the scheme which it is my privilege to lay before this Council. That scheme is animated by no niggardly spirit of restriction; it is influenced by no repugnance to the admission of the non-official classes to a share in the administration. It is based upon the principle that the first duty of a Government, and the surest safeguard of its prosperity, is the progress and enlightenment of its people. Its object is not to sever, but to bring into closer and more cordial relations, the official and non-official classes, and to cause them to work together, with mutual confidence and respect, for the welfare of this great Empire. But the Legislature can only provide the instrument and the machinery: they must be worked by other hands. Whether this measure is to succeed and to form the stable basis of larger liberties, or is to be discredited and to lapse into the old system under another name, will depend upon the moderation, the energy and the public spirit of those for whose advancement it is devised. A weighty responsibility will now rest upon the educated men of Bengal. They are the natural leaders of their countrymen, and if they will recognize that the foundation of all progress is work, and by the exercise of industry and prudence secure to themselves, and impart to those below them, a sound administrative training, then this measure, limited though it be, may lead to great results. If they overlook these principles, and seek to attain the end without practising the means, if they neglect the trust that devolves upon them, and aim directly at political objects instead of laying the foundation of progress by the efficient administration of local affairs, then will the liberal policy of Government be defeated. I for one am sanguine that they will not be wanting in their duty to themselves and their countrymen, but that, by the use they make of this measure, they will show that they are worthy of the opportunity afforded them, and that they are capable of teaching the peoples of India to work soberly and patiently towards the gradual development of the great destiny that awaits them."

His Honor the President said that he had intended at one time to have taken this opportunity, though it was only the preliminary stage of asking for leave to introduce the Bill, to say a few words of his own on this large question of the extension of Local Self-government in these provinces, because it had been for the last six months one which had been very closely brought under his consideration in official reports and in numerous communications which he had received from non-official gentlemen on the question, and the very varied criticisms which it had received from the public press. But he thought, as the speech of the Hon. Member in charge of the Bill had placed before the Council in a very full and lucid way the general outlines of the scheme which the Government contemplated in respect of this measure, that he would reserve any remarks which he might wish to offer till the next occasion when the Bill framed on the basis of the Hon. Member's speech had been laid before them. It had been resolved that all the official papers shewing the communications which had passed between Commissioners, Collectors, and the Government should be published and made available for the use of the Council and of all others who might desire to refer to them. It would there be seen that a great variety of views and opinions had been recorded upon the subject, and much information and instruction on the details of the question would be in the hands of Hon. Members.

The Council would adjourn after this meeting for a fortnight, and he hoped that in the interval the draft of the Bill would be got ready for submission to the Council. HIS HONOR'S present object in making these few remarks was to express the hope that, upon a consideration of the statement contained in the speech of the Hon. Mover, Hon. Members would be prepared, on the presentation of the Bill, to state their views as to the general principles which the Government advocated in the introduction of a measure of immense importance to the country.

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF THE CALCUTTA PORT IMPROVEMENT ACT.

THE HON. MR. REYNOLDS introduced the Bill to amend Bengal Act V of 1870, and moved that it be read in Council. He said that he had explained the object and purport of this Bill on the occasion when he applied for leave to introduce it, and now that the Bill had been prepared and circulated to Hon. Members, he found little or nothing to add to what he had then said. The second clause of section 39 of Act V of 1870 had been already amended by section 21 of Act IV of 1880. The present Bill, for the sake of clearness and convenience, proposed the repeal of that section, and reproduced the words with the amendments which it was intended to make in the clause. In reality the words proposed to be added to the Act were merely twelve in number, which were as follows—"and accommodation for the sampling and selling of such goods and merchandise." The rest of the words which were contained in the second section of the Bill were already in the existing law. This measure was a very short and simple one, and if the Council accepted the principle of it, he did not think he would detain them with any further remarks.

The motion was put and agreed to.

He also moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon. Mr. Allen, the Hon. Mr. Caithness, and the Mover, with instructions to report in a fortnight.

The motion was put and agreed to.

REGULATION OF THE CONTROL OF COOLIES IN HILL MUNICIPALITIES.

THE HON. MR. MACAULAY introduced the Bill for the general control of coolies in Hill Municipalities, and moved that the Bill be read in Council. He said that he did not think it necessary to detain the Council at any great length in the exposition of this measure. It would be better perhaps that that should be done after the Bill had passed through Select Committee. He would only point out that the essential principle of the Bill was that a distinction should be made between ordinary servants and persons who lent themselves out on hire for short periods. For the latter the provisions of the Bill would be very much the same as those for the regulation of hackney carriages and palankeens; that was to say, if they were guilty of misconduct or wrongfully prevented other coolies from accepting employment, or if they deserted from their hiring before being discharged, or demanded more than the proper rate for their hire, or were drunk during employment, or made use of insulting or abusive language during their engagement, and so forth, they would be liable to various penalties; and they would be required to wear a badge and take out special licenses. With regard to servants engaged for periods of more than twenty-four hours, as regular servants, it was very undesirable to interfere more than was necessary between master and servant. The only important provision regarding these servants was that they would have to take out licenses from the Municipality, and that in case of misconduct their licenses would be withdrawn. They would be liable to no other penalty under the law.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The HON. MR. MACAULAY also moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon. Mr. Reynolds, the Hon. Mr. Allen, Colonel the Hon. S. T. Trevor, the Hon. Bhudeb Mookerjee, and the Mover, with instructions to report thereon in three weeks.

The HON. MAHOMED YUSUF said that, before this Bill was referred to the Select Committee, he had one or two observations to make with reference to some portions of the Bill, the principle of which had his full support and co-operation. There were four points which must principally be kept in view in the consideration of the Bill in its present stage. The first was with reference to the class of persons on whom the Bill would operate and the places at which it would operate; the second consisted of the rules and bye-laws which were to govern those persons; the third related to the rates of remuneration which those persons were to receive; and the fourth was regarding the punishments to be provided for breach of the rules. On these four points he had to make some observations. With reference to the first point, viz. the class of persons on whom the Bill would operate, he had doubts whether the Bill contained the necessary provisions; the class had not at all been clearly defined in the Bill. At present that class of persons was unknown, and it was to be left to the Executive Government to define who they were. The Select Committee would of course consider whether it was necessary that this matter should stand as it was, or whether it required any amendment.

With reference to the second point, although no doubt there was the presumption of law that everybody was supposed to know the law, still that presumption was so weak amongst the persons on whom the Bill would operate, that he submitted that the greatest possible publicity should be given to the Bill, and no pains should be spared to make its provisions known to those whom it would affect. And in making this observation he was aware of the provisions of section 5, which provided for a public proclamation to make the provisions of the Bill intelligible to the coolies concerned. But it would be a question whether or not in addition to this the coolies should not have provided for them rules and bye-laws written in the vernacular, setting out what their duties were, so that they might inform themselves of their duties by having the same read to them by any of their brethren or by anybody else, and have no excuse left to them.

With reference to the third point, the rates to be paid, he ventured to think that the provisions of the Bill were far from satisfactory: the rates had been left to be settled by the Municipal Commissioners, and the license was to be for one year. He thought, however, in calculating the rates, that some certainty must be introduced, and they should be regulated according to the rise and fall in the prices in the market, and for this purpose it would be a point for consideration whether the rates should not be revised every month, or in some other mode as might be thought proper.

With reference to the fourth point, the amount of punishment, he made his observation with some degree of diffidence. He did not understand that he represented any class of persons in that Council, but he was at liberty to express his views, and those views were these:—The punishment which was prescribed in this Bill was by way of fine, and these fines, which were by no means slight, considering the position of the offenders, were often met with in connection with the provisions of the Bill. Of course he did not here contend for the traditionary mode of punishment, which was thirty abuses and twenty shoes; but it would have to be borne in mind whether or not in fixing the amount of fine the result would be to fix an amount which would not have the effect of visiting on the wives and children of the offenders the consequences of the breach of the law and to make the coolies incur debts which might not make them hesitate at adopting any means to discharge the same. These points of course would be considered in Select Committee when it would be seen what form the Bill would take. But he had thought it his duty to make the observations at the present stage in order that they might be considered by the Select Committee for what they were worth.

The HON. MR. DAMPIER said that, before this Bill was referred to a Select Committee, he wished to draw attention to the definitions. They gave very broad powers to the Executive Government. A Hill Municipality might mean practically any municipality in Bengal which the Lieutenant-Governor chose to say was a Hill Municipality. Then who were the coolies to whom the provisions of the Bill might be extended?—"any person included within "the classes of persons specified in an order published by the Local Govern-"ment under section 4." That was to say, putting an extreme case, that it was left to the Executive Government to declare that any person working for hire within any municipality in Bengal might be brought under the Act.

The HON. THE ADVOCATE-GENERAL said that he agreed with his hon. friend to the right (Mr. Dampier) that there should be a definition in the Bill which should not be left in such doubt and uncertainty as the term "holding" was left in another Act, in which a holding was defined as anything which the Magistrate chose to declare a holding. Another point was that the rates of hire should be fixed by the Act. He thought that the persons upon whom the Act was to operate should have a right to be heard—a right to represent to the Council or to the Lieutenant-Governor by memorial their views on the subject. But if the power to fix the rates was left to executive authority, those whom the rates would affect would be subject to their operation without having had the right to urge their objections (if any) to their sufficiency or propriety.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said that the observations which had been made seemed to him to have very great force, because personally he should be very sorry to accept the responsibility either of defining what a hill coolie was or of taking other executive action in a matter which should properly and rightly be defined by law. Therefore, he hoped that the remarks which had been made would receive the careful attention of the Select Committee before the Bill was brought up for final consideration.

The motion was agreed to and the Bill referred to a Select Committee.

JUTE-WAREHOUSES AND FIRE-BRIGADES.

THE HON. MR. REYNOLDS said:—"I beg to move for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the law relating to jute-warehouses and fire-brigades. The first special law on this subject was passed just eleven years ago by Bengal Act II of 1872. Before that time the sections relating to the inspection and licensing of jute-warehouses were embodied in the Calcutta Municipal Act, and there were no special provisions for the establishment and maintenance of a fire-brigade. The Act of 1872 provided for the grant of licenses to existing and new jute-warehouses, and required the Municipal Commissioners to organise and maintain an efficient fire-brigade for the Town and Suburbs of Calcutta. The Act was subsequently amended by Act II of 1875, Act I of 1877, and finally by Act V of 1879, which is the existing law on the subject.

By the Act of 1879 the license fees for jute-warehouses are to be fixed by the Local Government after consulting the Commissioners. The duty of maintaining the fire-brigade is delegated to the Commissioner of Police for the Town of Calcutta. The Calcutta Commissioners and the Municipal Commissioners of the Suburbs and Howrah are to apply the moneys derived from fees and penalties under the Act—first, to payment of the expenses of the fire-brigade; secondly, to the payment of the expenses connected with the inspection and superintendence of jute-warehouses, and the grant of licenses. Any balance which may remain is to be applied in reduction of the fees levied on licenses. The cost of the fire-brigade is to be contributed in the proportion of seven-tenths by Calcutta, and three-tenths by the Suburbs; but the three-tenths payable in any year by the Suburbs must not exceed the sum of Rs. 10,000.

The points in which the present law appears to the Government to be defective are the following:—Firstly, Part III of the Act, which relates to the maintenance of the fire-brigade, does not apply to Howrah. The Act contemplates that Howrah will maintain its own fire-brigade from the proceeds of its own license fees. But it would be a more convenient, more efficient, and more economical arrangement to have one fire-brigade for Calcutta, the Suburbs, and Howrah, under the management and superintendence of the Calcutta Commissioner of Police.

Secondly, the distribution of the expense of the fire-brigade between Calcutta and the Suburbs, in the proportion of seven-tenths to the former and three-tenths to the latter, with a limit of Rs. 10,000 as the extreme amount which the Suburbs can be called upon to pay, though it may have been an equitable arrangement in 1872, has how ceased to be either a fair or a convenient plan. It tends to throw too large a share of the burden on Calcutta, and it is an obstacle to the full utilization of the funds raised under the Act. The number of licensed warehouses in Calcutta is stationary, and, indeed, rather diminishing than increasing; whereas in the Suburbs the number shews a steady increase. This is only what might have been expected. Space in Calcutta is limited, land is more costly than in the Suburbs, and the incidence of municipal taxation is heavier. There are now 92 licensed warehouses in the Suburbs, against 73 in Calcutta. The consequence is that, while the fees levied in the Town do not cover the seven-tenths which Calcutta has to pay, the fees in the Suburbs provide for the three-tenths, and leave a considerable balance. Under section 24 of the Act, this balance can be applied only in the reduction of the license fees, and accordingly the rate of license fees in the Suburbs has lately been reduced from ten to five per cent. on the annual value of the warehouses. But even after this reduction the report on the working of the Act for last year shewed a balance of more than Rs. 5,000 to the credit of the Suburbs, while in Calcutta there was a deficit of nearly Rs. 3,000. Under the law, as it stands, this surplus in the Suburbs cannot be applied either to meet the deficit in Calcutta, or to the purchase of new engines or plant for the fire-brigade, though such purchase is very urgently called for. It must go towards the reduction of license fees in the Suburbs, though the rate of fee in the Suburbs is already 50 per cent. lower than it is in Calcutta. Then the necessary outlay for the purchase of new plant must be contributed in the proportion of seven-tenths by Calcutta and three-tenths by the Suburbs, though it is really for the requirements of the Suburbs that the outlay is necessary. Some other minor amendments in the Act are called for, but these are mostly of a verbal character, and I need not trouble the Council with them at this stage of the question. The two amendments to which I have referred are those which it is the main object of Government to introduce by the proposed alteration of the law; first, the extension of the Calcutta fire-brigade system to Howrah; and secondly, the reapportionment of the fire-brigade expenditure between Calcutta and the Suburbs.

It is not the object or desire of the Government to do anything to increase the present rate of license fees. On the contrary, it is hoped that one effect of the Bill will be to enable some relief to be given to the holders of licenses in Calcutta, who are certainly rather heavily taxed at present. Section 5 of the Act, which deals with the question of fees, will substantially be retained, though the wording of it will perhaps be found capable of improvement.

The important changes will be in Parts III and IV of the Act. The scheme which it is proposed to substitute for the present law is briefly as follows:—The Commissioners of Calcutta, of the Suburbs, and of Howrah will retain in their own hands 20 per cent. of the fees and penalties realised under the Act. From this amount they will defray the charges connected with superintendence, inspection, and the grant of licenses; and if they have any surplus they will be at liberty to use it for general municipal purposes. As far as can be gathered from the reports now submitted, it seems that the charges for inspection and superintendence come to about 16 per cent. of the fees. I propose to allow 20 per cent., but this is a point which can be more fully considered in Select Committee. The remainder (say 80 per cent.) of the receipts will be paid over by the Commissioners to the Commissioner of Police for Calcutta, who will be charged with the duty of maintaining an efficient fire-brigade for Calcutta, the Suburbs, and Howrah. The Bill will also provide that any balance now standing to the credit of the Fire-brigade Fund may be granted in such proportion as the Lieutenant-Governor shall direct either to the Municipal Fund of Calcutta or the Suburbs for general purposes, or to the purchase of new plant and other objects connected with the fire-brigade. I understand that there is a sum of about Rs. 20,000 now at the credit of the Fund, and it is not altogether easy to say how this balance should equitably be appropriated. The Bill will therefore leave the distribution of this surplus to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor.

If leave is now given to bring in the Bill, I hope to have it printed and placed in the hands of Hon. Members before the next meeting of the Council."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 3rd February 1883.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 8t, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The direction of the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

NOTE.

Barometric Pressure.—The pressures in column 2 of the above table for all stations below 500 feet are reduced from those given in column 3 of the table on the previous page, by adding the weight of a column of air of the temperatures given in column 18. For stations above 500 feet elevation the reduction is made by Captain Allan Cunningham's table—"Prof. papers on Indian Engineering, No. CXIII." The temperatures at the sea-level are taken from column 3 of the above table.

Temperature.—The temperatures in column 3 are reduced from those in column 18 on the preceding page, by adding 1° Fahrenheit for every 450 feet.

Wind Resultant.—The resultant wind direction and its comparative predominance are calculated from the whole number of wind observations recorded during the month. The relative predominance in the direction of the resultant is given as a percentage of the whole number of observations. The direction is computed in the usual way by Lambert's formula.

Cloud.—This column gives the average proportion of clouded sky, a cloudless sky being indicated by 0, and one completely overcast by 10.

The above, being all comparable, afford the data for constructing a meteorological chart for the month, which will show the isobaric and isothermal lines and the resultant wind directions, which last may be represented by arrows of varying length, proportioned to the prevalence of the wind. To these may be added the rainfall from the previous tables.

GOODS.

The goods traffic has on the whole been steady, and compares favourably with the previous year. The principal items of increase and decrease are—

INCREASES.

Coal, down.	Gunny.
Cotton.	Indigo.
Wheat.	Piece-goods.
Seeds.

DECREASES.

Coal, up.	Opium.
Rice.	Railway materials, foreign.
Other grains.	Salt.

REMARKS.

Increases.

Coal, downwards ... ... Mds. 60,940 Rs. 11,600

The demand in Calcutta during the month was good.

Cotton ... ... Mds. 21,300 Rs. 15,010

Screwed cotton to the Port of Calcutta has fallen off, the increase is in "loose" cotton.

Wheat ... ... Mds. —91,340 Rs. +11,630

The receipts have improved owing to the steady flow from North-West stations to Calcutta.

Gunny ... ... Mds. 13,560 Rs. 11,980

This increase is probably owing to the replenishing of stocks up-country.

Indigo ... ... Mds. 15,400 Rs. 41,340

This commodity is despatched early or late according to the state of the market in Calcutta, and the prices ruling. The season is said to have been a good one.

Piece-goods ... ... Mds. 71,690 Rs 87,440

The despatches from Howrah have been unusually heavy during the period.

Seeds ... ... Mds. 4,93,320 Rs. 1,78,840

Exports from Calcutta during November have been large compared with the same period of 1881.

Decreases.

Coal, upwards ... ... Mds. 1,82,450 Rs. 70,440

This large falling off is at Giridih, where the decrease is shewn as 1,53,670 maunds and Rs. 87,870.

Rice ... ... Mds. 16,510 Rs. 31,820

Demand was slack during November.

Other grains ... ... Mds. 45,580 Rs. 29,590

The demand for this description of cheap food-grain has been very limited this year.

Opium ... ... Mds. 35,740 Rs 28,573

Despatches commenced much earlier last year.

Railway materials, Foreign ... ... Mds. 5,960 Rs 30,960

Last year despatches were going forward from Howrah to Benares for the construction of the bridge over the Ganges.

Salt ... ... Mds. 83,420 Rs. 35,650

This decrease is nearly general.

The train mileage for the period has been, excluding maintenance and locomotive coal train mileage—

URBAN BROUGHTON, Offg. Traffic Manager.

Report on the Fluctuations in Traffic on the Northern Bengal State Railway for the month of December 1882.

GENERAL REMARKS.

THE results of the present month's working show a marked improvement under almost every staple, the net increase being 1,47,816 maunds or 34·67 per cent. in excess of the traffic carried for the same period last year. The principal decrease is in food-grain, while the noteworthy increases embrace Jute, Gunny, Salt, Tea, and all other goods. The increase of 17,303 maunds under this latter head is encouraging, as it is the best criterion of the steady development of the miscellaneous traffic of the Railway.

INCREASES.

Gunny-bags ... ... Mds. 27,711

The remarks made in previous reports regarding the causes and growth of this traffic still hold good. Despatchers seem anxious to avail themselves of the low freight charged.

Jute ... ... Mds. 81,473

Though the amount carried of this bulky staple has not equalled last month's despatches by a few thousand maunds, still it is satisfactory to note how steady despatches continue in the face of a declining market in Calcutta.

Piece-goods ... ... Mds. 2,422

This increase is probably due to despatches for the coming spring.

Railway material ... ... Mds. 6,127

Materials for the Dinagepore extension and coal for the Locomotive Department, make up the bulk of the despatches under this head.

Salt ... ... Mds. 11,656

For the past three months there has been a slight falling off in the despatches of salt, and it is hoped that the present increase will continue.

Sugar ... ... Mds. 492

This increase is in upwards traffic for local consumption.

Tea ... ... Mds. 3,717

There has been an improved demand and a rise in prices in the Calcutta market for this article, which will explain this increase at the close of the season.

Tobacco ... ... Mds. 2,345

Although no business for shipment to the coast has been done, a fair local demand exists and despatchers are anxious to avail themselves of the opportunity of clearing this season's stocks.

All other goods ... ... Mds. 17,363

This increase has been dealt with under "General remarks."

DECREASES.

Ale ... ... Mds. 386

This is a trade fluctuation. There has been apparently no despatches of Commissariat beer for the Darjeeling depôt.

Food-grain ... ... Mds 4,951

The despatches under this head from our stations are chiefly composed of consignments of rice and paddy of the coarser kinds, for which there has been little or no demand. This, added to the fact that the season is over, will explain the above decrease.

Ginger ... ... Mds. 153

There is no demand for this article at present.

NOTIFICATION.

The 30th January 1883.—In the exercise of the power conferred on him by section 38 of Act IV (B.C.) of 1871 (the Pooree Lodging-House Act), as amended by Act II (B.C.) of 1879, the Lieutenant-Governor intends to approve and confirm the following byelaws which have been framed for the town of Oolooberia in the district of Howrah, with the assent of the Health Officer of the town appointed under the Act, for the management of all matters necessary for the due enforcement of the Act within the town of Oolooberia.

BYE-LAWS UNDER SECTION 37, ACT IV (B.C.) OF 1871.

PART I.

On the appointment and constitution of a Committee to aid in carrying out Act IV (B.C.) of 1871 in the town of Oolooberia.

1. A Committee consisting of four official and four non-official members shall be appointed to assist the Sub-Divisional Officer and Health Officer in carrying out the provisions of the Act.

2. On the 1st of March in each year the Sub-Divisional Officer shall nominate the members to serve on the Committee during the ensuing official year, and shall report the nomination for the sanction of the Local Government.

3. In the event of the death, removal, or resignation of any member of the Committee during his year of office, an official member shall be succeeded by the successor to his appointment or any other official; and in the case of a non-official member, his successor shall be appointed by the remainder of the Committee.

PART II.

Rules for the conduct of business.

4. A meeting of the Local Committee appointed by the Local Government to assist the Sub-Divisional Officer and the Health Officer to carry out the provisions of the Act shall be held for the transaction of business and inspection of accounts at the Sub-divisional Office on the fifteenth of every month not being a Sunday or Holiday, in which case the meeting shall be held on the next open office day, provided that it shall be lawful for the Sub-Divisional Officer to call a meeting at any other time during the month, recording his reasons for doing so.

5. Notice of every meeting shall be given to each member at least four clear days before the day appointed for the meeting.

6. No question shall be finally decided on the first occasion it is brought before the Committee, unless the nature of the question has been fully described in the notice prescribed by the last bye-law.

7. The subject or subjects brought before the Committee shall be decided by a majority of votes. In the event of divisions, the Sub-Divisional Officer, or in his absence the Health Officer, shall have a casting vote.

8. The Health Officer shall be ex-officio Secretary to the Committee and the Sub-Divisional Officer President; the proceedings of every meeting shall be recorded by the Secretary in a book kept for the purpose.

PART III.

On the receipt and disbursement of moneys under the Act.

9. On the 15th October in each year a budget of probable receipts and of proposed expenditure during the ensuing year shall be submitted for the sanction of the Government.

10. It shall be competent for the Committee, subject to the orders of Government, to transfer sums from one item of the budget to another, provided that the total expenditure be not exceeded, and provided that an annual review of the same be submitted to the Commissioner.

11. In forming every annual estimate an amount not exceeding 25 per cent. shall be reserved for emergent contingencies, such as a sudden outbreak of cholera and sickness, and necessity for employment of extra and special establishment.

12. At the close of every year the Sub-Divisional Officer shall submit a report on the working of the Act during the year, showing the works of improvement and conservancy carried out, and a detailed account of the receipts and expenditure during the year and the balance in hand at its close. This report shall be forwarded through the Commissioner to Government.

PART IV.

13. If any person shall carry night-soil or other offensive matter through the town otherwise than in a closely covered receptacle, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 5.

14. The Committee shall open a register of the sweepers engaging for the various quarters of the town, specifying the name or names of the sweepers engaging for each of the limits of the quarter, for whose cleanliness they are responsible, and shall supply each sweeper with a metal ticket bearing his number painted on it, and the section of the town to which he is attached, the spots fixed under section 24 of the Act, in which they are bound to deposit dirt, and any other detail that may seem necessary. Any sweeper neglecting to remove night-soil from any part of the quarter for which he is responsible, once in twenty-four hours, shall be liable for each omission to a fine not exceeding Re. 1.

15. If any person shall bury or allow to be buried within the limits of the town of Oolooberia, night-soil or other offensive matter, or leave it within the premises occupied by him, beyond such time as may be fixed by the Magistrate, he shall be liable to a fine which may extend to Rs. 20, provided that this penalty shall not extend to manure heaps until notices to remove them have been issued by the Health Officer. The Sub-Divisional Officer may issue notice ordering any person to remove any offensive matter that may be buried on the premises occupied by him within a specific term. Any person neglecting to comply with such notice shall be liable to a daily fine not exceeding Rs. 2, from the date of the expiry of notice.

16. If any person shall dispose, or cause to be disposed of, within the limits of the town of Oolooberia, any corpse or part of a corpse otherwise than by burning or burying it at or in some burning or burial-ground specially set apart for that purpose, fixed by the Sub-Divisional Officer with the assent of the Health Officer for that purpose, he shall be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 10.

17. Any person allowing land or premises occupied by him within the limits of the town of Oolooberiah to be used as a camping place for cattle, carts, or any beasts of draught or burden, shall be bound to permit such premises to be inspected by the Health Officer or Sub-Divisional Officer, or any officer they may depute, and shall be liable to any penalty provided for any infringement of the law or bye-laws committed on his premises.

18. Whoever shall offer for sale fish unfit for food, or shall offer for sale any fish in any part of the town except in places notified by the Magistrate, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 10.

PART V.

Miscellaneous.

19. Every lodging-house keeper taking out a license under this Act shall provide himself with a copy of the Act and with a printed copy of the notice prescribed in section 14, which notice shall be in the form shewn in appendix A of these bye-laws.

20. The register referred to in section 15 of the Act shall be in the form shown in Appendix B of these bye-laws.

21. There shall be hung up in each compartment of a lodging-house a board on which shall be legibly written in Uriya, Hindustance and Bengali the dimensions of such compartment and the number of lodgers it can properly accommodate, and this board shall bear the signature of the Health Officer.

22. Every lodging-house or hotel keeper shall be bound on requisition by the Health Officer to provide himself with tickets or tokens bearing consecutive numbers, and to furnish each of his lodgers with one of such tickets or tokens.

23. For the purpose of this Act the year shall be considered to commence from 1st April, and all licenses shall run from that date.

[Third Publication.]

NOTIFICATION.

The 23rd January 1883.—It is hereby notified for general information that the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to issue the following rules under section 8 of Act XVI of 1881, with a view to the prevention of obstructions in the fairways leading to the ports of False Point, Balasore, and Chittagong respectively.

1. No person shall, without permission of the Port Officer, do any of the following acts in a fairway leading to any of the said ports :—

(a) Fix any apparatus or part of any apparatus for fishing.
(b) Lay pieces of wood as floats.
(c) Spread or fix fishing nets.
(d) Raise an embankment.
(e) Cast or throw ballast or rubbish.
(f) Sink, strand, or abandon a vessel.

2. The owner or master of a vessel desiring to cast or throw ballast or rubbish in a fairway leading to any of the said ports, may apply to the Port Officer for permission to do so, and he shall not, if the permission is granted, cast or throw the ballast or rubbish except at a place selected by the Port Officer for the purpose.

3. Any person desiring to place any apparatus for fishing stake, or spread any net, or to use any float, or to raise any embankment in a fairway leading to any of the said ports, may appply to the Port Officer for permission to do so. On receipt of such application, the Port Officer shall examine the site fixed upon by the applicant, and if satisfied that the placing of fishing apparatus, or the doing of any other act for permission to do which application has been made, will not cause or be likely to cause obstruction or danger to navigation, he shall report the matter to the Collector for orders, and the Collector, if similarly satisfied, shall grant permission. It shall be in the discretion of the Collector at any time to withdraw such permission, and to call upon the owner to remove the apparatus nets, floats or embankments within a reasonable time, and on failure on the part of the owner to do so, to remove them at the cost of the owner.

4. In the port of the powers and duties conferred and imposed by this notification on the Port Officer shall be exercised and performed by the Collector of Customs.

A. P. MACDONNELL,
Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

NOTIFICATION.

The 25th January 1883.—The Lieutenant-Governor directs the publication of the following in supersession of the notification bearing the same date published at page 1031 of the Calcutta Gazette of the 20th December 1882:—

The 18th December 1882.—In continuation of the notification dated the 4th October 1880, published at page 912 of the Calcutta Gazette of the 20th idem, it is hereby notified for general information that, under section 18 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act, VI of 1871, the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to vary the local limits of the jurisdiction of the munsif of Bogra by detaching therefrom those portions of the district of Bogra which are comprised in the thanahs Panchbibi, Khetlal, Badulgachi and Adamdighi, and that part of thanah Shibgunge which lies west of the river Nagar, and that part of thanah Shibgunge which lies west of the river Karotoya, from the point at which the Nagar issues from the Karotoya at Shibgunge.

The Lieutenant-Governor is further pleased to establish a separate Munsif's court at Nawabgunge-Sonamookhi, and to fix the local limits of the jurisdiction of such munsifi to be the portions of district Bogra detached as above from the jurisdiction of the munsif of Bogra.

Under section 16 of Act VI of 1871, the Lieutenant-Governor is also pleased to fix Nawabgunge-Sonamookhi as the place at which the court of the munsif of Nawabgunge-Sonamookhi is to be held.

This notification will take effect from the 1st January 1883.

NOTIFICATION.

The 26th January 1883.—Under the provisions of section 69 of Act III of 1877, the Lieutenant-Governor directs that the following revised rule be substituted for rule 114, which was published under notification dated the 19th June 1882, in the Calcutta Gazette of the 28th idem:—

"Rule 114.—Every Registrar shall submit to the Inspector General, before the 1st March of each year, an indent in quadruplicate, in the prescribed form, for all register-books and other registration forms, including the forms prescribed by the Accountant General, Bengal, which will be required for his own office and for those of the Sub-Registrars subordinate to him, during the 12 months from the 1st October to the 30th September following. When it is desired that the supply of register-books, &c., should be forwarded to any sub-registry office direct instead of being sent through the office of the Registrar to whom the Sub-Registrar is subordinate, an intimation to that effect should accompany the Registrar's indent, and the indents of such Sub-Registrar should be submitted separately in quadruplicate with the Registrar's endorsement, instead of being embodied in the Registrar's indent. A supply of new register-books required to be opened on the 1st January of each year should be included in this annual indent.

BOARD OF REVENUE, L.P., FORT WILLIAM, the 23rd January 1883.

CUSTOM HOUSE NOTICE.

Notice.

TO MASTERS OF NATIVE VESSELS.

IN accordance with a Resolution of the Government of Bengal in the Marine Department, dated 13th January 1883, regarding the exhibition of lights on native craft, it is hereby notified that the larger or sea-going craft, such as buggalows, must be provided with a small box, protected with the proper coloured shade, large enough to receive a light fitted on each bow, the red and green lights being permanently and separately fixed. Open cargo boats and other smaller craft are allowed to exhibit the necessary red and green lights by hand.

2. On and after the 1st April 1883, the master of every native craft will be required to produce to the Collector of Customs, before the grant of a port clearance, a certificate signed in Calcutta by the Deputy Conservator and Harbour Master, and at the out ports by the Port Officers, showing that they are provided with the proper lights, and have the necessary appliances for fixing and exhibiting them in their proper positions, that the men in charge know the sides on which the green and red lights should be shown, and that there is on board each vessel a copy of the rules of the road at sea, in a language understood by the masters.

CALCUTTA, the 26th August 1875.

The Indian Law Reports.

Published under Authority of the Governor-General in Council.

THE Reports appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and will comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court will be reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court will be reported in the Calcutta Series.

The Parts of each series can be had separately, or all four Parts can be had stitched into one wrapper at the option of subscribers and purchasers. It will be observed from the following statement of the terms of subscription and sale, that a considerable reduction is allowed to persons taking the complete set.

Terms of subscription, payable annually in advance.

	Without postage.	With postage.
For the Calcutta Series...	Rs. 35	Rs. 40
„ Madras Series ...	„ 8	„ 9
„ Bombay Series...	„ 8	„ 9
„ Allahabad Series	„ 8	„ 9

PART IV.

Bill of the Bengal Council.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE following Bill was read in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 3rd February 1883, and was referred to a Select Committee who are to report thereon in three weeks:—

A Bill to amend the law relating to Jute-warehouses and Fire-brigades.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to Jute-warehouses and Fire-brigades: It is enacted as follows:—

Preliminary.

Title.

1. This Act may be called the "Licensed Warehouse and Fire-brigade Act, 1883."

Extent.

It applies to Calcutta and to such portions of the Suburbs thereof as are for the time being subject to the operations of Bengal Act II of 1866, and also to the Municipality of Howrah:

Commencement.

And it shall come into force from the date on which it may be published in the Calcutta Gazette with the assent of the Governor-General.

Repeal of Bengal Act V of 1879.

2. Bengal Act V of 1879 is hereby repealed. But all rules, orders, declarations, and appointments made under the said Act, and now in force, shall be deemed to have been made under this Act.

Interpretation.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

"Jute," "Cotton."

"Jute" and "Cotton" mean respectively jute and cotton which have not been pressed or screwed as if for shipment:

"Person."

"Person" includes a firm and an undivided Hindu family:

"Magistrate."

"Magistrate" includes a Justice of the Peace for the Town of Calcutta, and any person exercising all or any of the powers of a Magistrate:

"The Commissioners."

"The Commissioners" mean, in respect of Calcutta, the Corporation of the Town of Calcutta, and, in respect of the Suburbs and Howrah, the Municipal Commissioners appointed or elected under the Bengal Municipal Act, 1876, or any other law for the time being in force relating to Municipalities.

"Warehouse."

"Warehouse" means any building or place used for the storing, keeping, pressing, or depositing of jute or cotton or other substance for the time being subject to the operation of this Act.

PART I.

Licensed Warehouses.

Existing warehouses not to be used till licensed.

4. No warehouse shall be used for the storing, keeping, pressing or depositing of jute or cotton, unless the owner or occupier thereof shall have previously obtained a license for such use.

Fee for license for warehouse.

5. From and after the commencement of this Act every license granted to a warehouse under the Jute-warehouse and Fire-brigade Act of 1872 or 1879 shall be subject to the payment of an annual fee to be fixed by the Local Government, after consulting the Commissioners at a special meeting, and to be paid in such instalments as the Commissioners may direct.

In fixing the amount of fee to be paid in respect of any warehouse, the Local Government shall have regard to the annual value thereof as it is for the time assessed to the payment of municipal taxes, to the size and position of the warehouse, to the number and excellence of the pressing machines erected or proposed to be erected in such warehouse, and to the probable income derived from such warehouse by its owner or occupier.

The Local Government may from time to time, on the recommendation of the Commissioners at a special meeting, alter the amount of the fee to be paid in respect of any warehouse.

License for new warehouse.

6. Any person proposing to use any land for the purposes of a warehouse within the area to which this Act extends shall send to the Commissioners a plan of such land and all the buildings thereon, prepared in such manner as the Commissioners may direct, and it shall be within the discretion of the Commissioners at a special meeting to grant or refuse a license to establish the same.

Every license for a warehouse, to be granted under this section, shall be subject to the following conditions, namely,—

(1) that no loose jute, jute rejections or cuttings, or cotton, shall be stored or screwed or pressed, save within a building constructed of such materials, and on such a plan as may be approved of by the Commissioners;

(2) that no loose jute, jute rejections or cuttings, or cotton, shall be combed or dried except within an enclosure, and that the top or roof of any building or of any hut shall not be used for such combing or drying without the sanction in writing of the Commissioners;

(3) that space shall be reserved on land appertaining to the warehouse for the loading or unloading of carts;

(4) that no portion of the warehouse shall be used as a residence, and no artificial light (other than one duly and thoroughly protected) or lucifer matches shall be introduced therein, and that no person shall smoke therein;

(5) that the warehouse shall at all times be open to the inspection of officers duly appointed by the Commissioners;

(6) that the engines and furnaces used in the warehouse shall be placed as may be considered necessary by the Commissioners;

(7) that an annual fee shall be imposed in respect thereof as provided by the last preceding section:

Provided that the fee annually payable in respect of any warehouse under this or the last preceding section shall not be less than rupees fifty nor more than rupees two thousand.

Inspection of warehouses.

7. The Commissioners shall appoint a sufficient number of suitable officers for the inspection of warehouses within Calcutta, the Suburbs, and the Municipality of Howrah respectively; and any officer so appointed, and any Superintendent or Inspector or Sub-inspector of Police, may enter at any time into any warehouse and may inspect the same.

On change in occupation of warehouse, occupier to give notice.

8. On a change in the occupation of any warehouse, the person entering into occupation of the same shall, within two weeks of his so entering into occupation, give notice in writing to the Commissioners of such change of occupation, and shall thereupon pay to the Commissioners a fee of two rupees; and his name shall accordingly be substituted in such license for the name of the last occupier.

If any warehouse is let out in portions, the person so letting it out and entitled to the rent shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be the occupier.

Cancelment or suspension of license.

9. It shall be in the discretion of the Commissioners at a special meeting to cancel or to suspend for such time as they shall think fit the license of any warehouse in respect of which any one or more of the conditions under which such license is held shall appear to them to have been broken, or in respect of which the provisions of the last preceding section have been broken.

PART II.

Penalties.

Penalty for not taking out license.

10. Any person who without a license uses any warehouse for keeping or depositing jute or cotton shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding one hundred rupees for each day during which he may use or continue to use such warehouse as aforesaid.

Penalty for establishing warehouse without license.

11. Any person who without a license uses for keeping or depositing jute or cotton any warehouse established after the commencement of this Act shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees, and to a further penalty not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which such warehouse is used for keeping or depositing jute or cotton without a license.

Penalty for using warehouse after refusal of license.

12. Any person who uses a warehouse for the keeping or depositing of jute or cotton after the Commissioners shall have refused or cancelled a license in respect thereof, or during the time for which such license shall have been suspended, shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees, and to a further penalty not exceeding one hundred rupees for every day during which any such warehouse may be so used as aforesaid.

Penalty on occupier in case of breach of conditions of license.

13. Whenever any of the conditions under which a license is held in respect of any warehouse have been broken in such warehouse, the person whose name appears on the license as the occupier of such warehouse shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to have his license cancelled, or to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.

Penalty on any person in case of breach of conditions of license.

14. Any person who breaks any of the conditions under which a license is held in respect of any warehouse shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees for any one such offence.

15. If on a change in the occupation of any warehouse, the person entering into occupation fail to give the notice required by section eight of this Act, such person shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding one hundred rupees.

Penalty for omitting to give notice on change in occupation.

PART III.

Application of Funds.

16. The license fees and penalties received and levied under this Act shall be applied in the manner following, that is to say—

Funds how to be applied.

The Commissioners shall apply twenty per centum of such fees and penalties received and levied within their respective jurisdictions to the payment of the inspecting officers entertained under section seven of this Act, and to the payment of all expenses incurred by such Commissioners respectively in or about the inspection and superintendence of warehouses, and the granting of licenses in respect thereof.

Twenty per cent. to cost of inspection.

Any balance of such twenty per centum which may remain after payment of such expenses shall be credited to the Municipal Fund of Calcutta, or of the Suburbs, or of Howrah, as the case may be.

17. The remaining eighty per centum of such fees and penalties shall be paid by the Commissioners to the Commissioner of Police for the Town of Calcutta, and shall be applied by him to the maintenance of the fire-brigade as hereinafter provided.

Eighty per cent. to cost of fire-brigade.

PART IV.

Fire-brigade.

18. The Commissioner of Police for the Town of Calcutta shall maintain an efficient fire-brigade for the town and suburbs of Calcutta and for the Municipality of Howrah.

Maintenance of fire-brigade.

19. The Local Government may from time to time make, and, when made, alter or repeal such general or special orders as it may think fit—

Local Government may make orders.

For appointing or removing any member or officer of the force.

For furnishing the fire-brigade with such fire-engines, fire-escapes, horses, oxen, accoutrements, tools, and implements as it may think proper.

For building, providing or hiring places for the keeping of the force, engines, horses, and appurtenances.

For giving gratuities to persons who have given notice of fires.

For the training, discipline, good conduct, salaries, and pensions of the members of the force.

For the speedy attendance of such members with engines and all necessary implements on the occasion of any alarm of fire.

For sending the force, engines, and appurtenances beyond the limits of the area to which this Act extends in order to extinguish fire in the neighbourhood of the said limits.

For imposing and summarily realizing a fine not exceeding one week's wages from any member of the brigade who may infringe these orders.

Generally, for the maintenance of the fire-brigade in a due state of efficiency.

Such orders shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette, and shall take effect from such publication.

20. On the occasion of a fire, the chief or other officer in charge of the fire-brigade on the spot may—

Powers of fire-brigade in cases of fire.

(a) remove, or may order any member of the brigade to remove, any persons who by their presence interfere with the due operations of the brigade;

(b) by himself or by his men break into or through, or pull down any premises for the purpose of putting an end to the fire, doing as little damage as possible;

(c) cause the mains and pipes of any district to be shut off, so as to give greater pressure of water in the place where the fire has occurred;

(d) call on the officer in charge of the Port Commissioners' fire-engine to render such assistance as may be possible in the case of any fire occurring near the river bank;

(e) and, generally, take such measures as may appear necessary for the preservation of life and property.

The chief officer on the spot in charge of the brigade may verbally nominate and depute one or more officers of the brigade to act at a distance, and such officer or officers shall have for the time being the like powers as the chief officer himself possesses under this section.

Police officers of all grades shall be authorized to aid the fire-brigade in the execution of its duties. They may close any street in or near which a fire is burning, and they may, of their own motion or on the request of the chief or other officer of the fire-brigade, remove any persons who interfere by their presence with the operations of the fire-brigade.

Police officers to render assistance.

Any damage done by the fire-brigade in the due execution of their duties shall be deemed to be damage by fire within the meaning of any policy of insurance of property in Calcutta or the suburbs against fire.

Damage done to be deemed damage by fire.

But nothing in this section shall exempt any officer of the police or of the fire-brigade from liability to damages on account of any acts done by him without reasonable cause.

21. In the case of any fire occurring in Calcutta or the Suburbs or in the Municipality of Howrah the chief officer of the fire-brigade shall ascertain the facts as to the origin and cause of such fire, and shall make a report thereon to the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the place in which such fire shall have occurred, and the said Magistrate, in any case where he may see fit, shall summon witnesses and take evidence in order to the further ascertainment of such facts.

Enquiry into origin of fire

Licenses and Penalties in respect of fire-works, &c.

22. Within the town and suburbs of Calcutta whoever shall let off rockets or send up fire-balloons without a license from the Penalty for letting off rockets and selling fire-works without license.

Commissioner of Police, for which a fee not exceeding ten rupees shall be payable, and whoever shall sell fire-works without a license from the Commissioner of Police, for which a yearly fee not exceeding ten rupees shall be payable, shall be liable on conviction before a Magistrate to a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees for every such offence.

Powers to withdraw license.

23. The Commissioner of Police may at his discretion withdraw or suspend any license granted by him under the last preceding section:

Provided that a license to sell fire-works shall not be withdrawn or suspended except after thirty days' notice.

Exercise of powers in Howrah.

24. The powers conferred on the Commissioner of Police in respect of Calcutta and the Suburbs, by the two last preceding sections, shall be exercised in the Municipality of Howrah by the Chairman of the Commissioners.

Liability of house-holders.

25. In the event of any rockets being let off or fire-balloons sent up within the precincts of any private premises or compound without the express permission in writing of the Commissioner of Police, or the Chairman of the Commissioners, as the case may be, the occupier or owner, or person under whose immediate control the said premises or compound is, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees, unless he can prove who the person having committed the offence is, and that the offence was committed without his knowledge.

Miscellaneous.

Appropriation of existing balance.

26. Any sum standing at the credit of the Jute-warehouse fund at the time when this Act comes into force may be appropriated in such proportions as the Local Government may direct either as a grant to the Municipal Fund of Calcutta or of the Suburbs for general purposes, or to the purchase of new engines, plant or equipment for the fire-brigade referred to in section eighteen of this Act.

Local Government may declare the warehousing of any other substance to be subject to Act.

27. The Local Government may, on the recommendation of the Commissioners passed by resolution, declare that any other fibre, or any commodity which is stored or deposited in warehouses besides jute or cotton, shall be warehoused and kept subject to the provisions of this Act.

When such declaration shall have been made in the Calcutta Gazette this Act shall be read as if the name or names of the said fibre or commodity had been printed in addition to the words "jute" or "cotton" in the several sections of this Act wherein the said words "jute" or "cotton" may occur.

Submission of reports.

28. The Commissioners of the several jurisdictions to which this Act extends shall report to the Local Government once a year, at such time as the Local Government shall direct, shewing how the provisions of this Act have been carried out, and specifying the warehouses in respect of which licenses have been granted.

The Commissioner of Police for the town of Calcutta shall make a similar report, shewing the working of the fire-brigade during the year, the receipts and expenditure in respect thereof, and the proceedings taken by him under sections twenty-two and twenty-three of this Act.

Such reports shall be forthwith published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Power to arrest.

29. Any person committing any offence in respect of which a penalty is provided by section fourteen or section twenty-two or section twenty-four of this Act may, if his name and address be unknown, be arrested by any officer of police and forthwith conveyed before some Magistrate having jurisdiction in the place in which such offence has been committed, or shall be taken to the nearest police station within the said jurisdiction in order that such person may be detained until he can be brought before a Magistrate, or until he shall enter into recognizance with or without sureties for his appearance before a Magistrate.

Offenders to be brought to trial.

30. Whenever such person shall be taken to a police station, the officer in charge of such station shall, as soon as conveniently may be, cause him to be conveyed before some Magistrate having jurisdiction in the matter.

Form of license.

31. Every license granted under Part I of this Act shall, as far as possible, be in he form to the schedule to this Act annexed.

Saving of places of manufacture or retail trade.

32. Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to apply to buildings or places wherein small quantities of jute, cotton or other substance for the time being subject to the operation of this Act are deposited for the purpose of any manufacture or retail trade. The Local Government may from time to time declare, by notification in the Calcutta Gazette, what quantities of jute, cotton or other substance as aforesaid, shall be deemed to be small quantities within the meaning of this section.

SCHEDULE.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to amend the law relating to jute warehouses and fire-brigade as contained in Bengal Act V of 1879.

Experience has shown the present law to be defective in two principal points—

First, though a part of the Act applies to the Municipality of Howrah, the provisions which relate to the maintenance of the fire-brigade extend only to Calcutta and the Suburbs. A separate fire-brigade has consequently to be kept up for Howrah by the Commissioners of that Municipality, and this arrangement is not found to conduce either to economy or to efficiency. The Bill therefore provides that in future there shall be one fire-brigade for Calcutta, the Suburbs, and Howrah, under the management and superintendence of the Commissioner of Police for Calcutta.

Secondly, the existing law provides that the expenses of the present fire-brigade shall be contributed in the proportions of seven-tenths by Calcutta and three-tenths by the Suburbs, and that the amount payable in any one year on this account by the Suburbs shall not exceed ten thousand rupees. The Act of 1879 materially altered the previous law in this respect. By Act II of 1872 the entire balance of the moneys derived from fees and penalties under the Act (after paying the expenses of inspection and superintendence of jute-warehouses) was to be paid to the credit of the fire-brigade account. If the sums received under the Act were insufficient to meet the expenditure on account of the fire-brigade, the balance was to be contributed in the proportion of seven-tenths by Calcutta, and three-tenths by the Suburbs, and the three-tenths thus payable by the Suburbs was not to exceed ten thousand rupees. But, by the Act of 1879, the entire charges on account of the fire-brigade, and not merely the charges in excess of the receipts from fees and penalties, are to be contributed in the above proportions by Calcutta and the Suburbs: and the effect of this has been to throw an unfair share of the burden on the Corporation of Calcutta, and on the occupiers of licensed warehouses within the town. The number of such warehouses in Calcutta is diminishing rather than increasing, whereas in the Suburbs there is a steady increase, and there were last year 92 licensed warehouses in the Suburbs against 73 in Calcutta. The consequence is that the receipts in Calcutta are insufficient to cover the seven-tenths of the cost which Calcutta is required to pay, and a deficit is left, which has to be made good from the general municipal fund of the Corporation. In the Suburbs, on the other hand, though the rates of license-fees are 50 per cent. lower than in Calcutta, the receipts are sufficient to cover the three-tenths of the fire-brigade charges, and to leave a considerable surplus. This surplus, however, cannot be applied either to meet the deficit in Calcutta, or for the purchase of new plant for the fire-brigade, though such purchase is urgently required. The surplus must go towards the reduction of license-fees in the Suburbs, though the fees are already as low as can reasonably be demanded, and seven-tenths of the cost of purchasing new plant must be contributed by Calcutta, although it is for the requirements of the Suburbs, and not of Calcutta, that the purchase is necessary.

The present apportionment is therefore inequitable as regards the distribution of the cost, and it also obstructs the full utilization of the moneys raised under the Act. The Bill proposes to remedy this by providing that the Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta, the Suburbs, and Howrah shall retain in their hands a certain percentage of their receipts to meet the cost of inspection and superintendence, and shall pay over the balance to the Calcutta Commissioner of Police for the maintenance of the Fire-brigade. The amount to be so retained is provisionally entered in the Bill at 20 per cent, which is believed to be somewhat higher than the actual charges incurred at present. Any saving on this amount will be at the disposal of the Commissioners for general municipal purposes.

There is a balance of above twenty thousand rupees to the credit of the Jute-warehouse Fund, and the Bill provides that this surplus may be granted, in such proportions as the Lieutenant-Governor may direct, to the Calcutta and Suburban Municipalities, and to the purchase of new plant for the Fire-brigade. It is thought to be more convenient to leave this distribution to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor than to attempt to determine by law how these accumulations ought to be appropriated.

The remaining changes made by the Bill are of no great importance. The phrase "licensed warehouse" has been substituted for "jute-warehouse," as it seems somewhat anomalous to say that a jute warehouse means a warehouse used for the storing of cotton. Section 6 of the Bill fixes the maximum and minimum amounts of license-fees in accordance with the rule now existing. Section 24 gives to the Chairman of the Howrah Municipality the same powers in respect of the issue of licenses for letting off rockets and sending up fire-balloons, and for the sale of fireworks, as are given in Calcutta and the Suburbs to the Calcutta Commissioner of Police. It may be a matter for consideration whether these powers should be exercised in Howrah by the Chairman of the Municipality, or by the Magistrate of the district. Section 28 provides that, in addition to the reports by the Municipal Commissioners, which are contemplated by the present law, a report on the financial position and working of the Fire-brigade shall be furnished by the Commissioner of Police for Calcutta. Section 32 of the Bill supplies a defect in the wording of the present section 31 of the Act. The Act specifies what quantity of jute shall be deemed a small quantity, but is silent as to the corresponding quantities of cotton or of any other substance which may be brought under the operation of the Act. The Bill therefore provides that the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time notify what quantities of any substance shall be deemed to be small quantities within the meaning of the section.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 2nd February, 1883 :—

No. 3 OF 1883.

A Bill to authorize the Universities of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to grant certain honorary degrees.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the granting of honorary degrees, and to give to the Universities at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay the power of granting the degree of Doctor of Laws to persons who have not undergone a previous examination ;

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Repeal of Act XXI of 1875.

1. Act No. XXI of 1875 (an Act to authorize the University at Calcutta to grant honorary degrees) is repealed.

Power to confer honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

2. If the Vice-Chancellor and not less than four of the other members of the Syndicate for the time being of any of the Universities at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay recommend that an honorary degree be conferred on any person, on the ground that he is, in their opinion, by reason of eminent position and attainments, a fit and proper person to receive such a degree, and if the Chancellor of the respective University confirms the recommendation, the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor and Fellows for the time being of the University may confer on that person the degree of Doctor of Laws, without requiring him to undergo any examination.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

BY Acts II, XXII and XXVII of 1857, by which the Universities of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras were respectively established and incorporated, power is given to grant degrees only after examination, and Act XLVII of 1860 only extends the number and description of degrees which can be conferred, but leaves the necessity of a previous examination untouched. No Act giving power to grant honorary degrees was passed until 1875, when an Act was passed to enable the Calcutta University to confer honorary degrees. That Act enables the University to grant any honorary degree, but it is thought desirable to confine the power to the grant of the degree of Doctor of Laws, in accordance with the ordinary practice of the Universities in England. Madras and Bombay have never had power to grant honorary degrees. It is now proposed to place the Universities at all the three Presidency-towns on the same footing with regard to these degrees.

2. With this view section 1 of the proposed Bill repeals Act XXI of 1875. By the Act establishing the Universities, the power to confer degrees is granted to the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor and Fellows, in whom, therefore, the power to grant honorary degrees is also vested by section 2 of the Bill. An honorary degree is not, however, to be granted to any person unless the Vice-Chancellor and not less than four of the other members of the Syndicate recommend the grant and the Chancellor confirms the recommendation.

AMENDMENT OF THE CALCUTTA PORT IMPROVEMENT ACT.

THE HON. MR. REYNOLDS presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend Bengal Act V of 1870. He said:—"I beg to give notice that at the next meeting of the Council I propose to move that the report be taken into consideration and that the Bill be passed. The Port Commissioners are anxious that the Bill should become law with as little delay as possible, but I do not propose to bring forward any motion to-day, as I wish to avoid anything which might have the appearance of hurrying the measure through the Council, and I should like the fullest consideration to be given to the Bill before Hon. Members are asked to come to a vote upon it. I say this especially because, in some quarters at least out-of-doors, there seems to be much misapprehension of the real meaning and object of the Bill. I was reading this week an article in a Calcutta paper, in which this was described as a monstrous Bill, intended to give the Port Commissioners a monopoly of warehouse accommodation. Now this view is altogether a mistake, and there is no question of any monopoly at all. The Port Commissioners desire to build a warehouse to facilitate the storage and shipment of tea. This they are quite competent to do under the present la w, and the Bill has nothing to do with this part of the scheme. But they find that it will be for the convenience of the trade and the public that they should be allowed to provide accommodation in the warehouse for the sampling and sale of tea, and the object of the Bill is simply to give them power to provide this accommodation. It will be perfectly free to any one to use or not to use the warehouse as he thinks fit. There will be no monopoly or compulsion of any kind; and the Port Commissioners have not the least intention of becoming samplers or sellers of tea. Those are functions which can be much better performed by the gentlemen who make the tea trade their special business. All that the Port Commissioners propose to do by their Bill is to give these gentlemen facilities for conducting their business in the warehouse where it is expected that the tea will be stored, and from which it will be shipped. The Chamber of Commerce and the great majority of mercantile firms interested in tea think that this will be a great public convenience, and an advantage to the trade. The Port Commissioners are so satisfied of it that they are prepared to spend a sum of about eleven lakhs of rupees on the erection of the warehouse. But the use of the warehouse will be entirely optional, and it is quite a mistake to suppose that the Bill is intended to create any monopoly in favour of the Port Commissioners."

The HON. MR. CAITHNESS said he was not aware whether he would be in order in making any remarks at this stage of the Bill, but he should like to say a word or two then or at the next meeting of the Council.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT intimated that the Hon. Member might proceed with his remarks.

The HON. MR. CAITHNESS continued—With reference to the principle that was concerned in this Bill, he did not wish it to pass without making a few remarks. It appeared that there was a strong feeling in some quarters against the principle of this Bill, which he did not consider altogether desirable to be passed over without notice. He did not consider it judicious in principle that public bodies like the Port Commissioners should be empowered to enter into competition with private firms in what was essentially a commercial and trading transaction, that was, the storage, sampling, and sale of tea or other commodities. On principle, therefore, he thought that there was something to be said against the Bill, but in consideration of the importance of the tea interests and the great benefits which must arise from the facilities proposed to be given, the question was certainly deserving of further consideration. This matter had received great consideration at the hands of the Chamber of Commerce, who were best able to speak on the subject from their large experience and interest in it. The opposition which was first offered to the scheme had dwindled down, he believed, to two or three firms particularly interested in the storage and sale of tea, and as the Chamber of Commerce had withdrawn their opposition in favour of the scheme, which undoubtedly would afford great facilities to the interests concerned, he thought, on these grounds, the question of principle might be waived and he would therefore be disposed to vote in favour of the Bill.

JUTE-WAREHOUSES AND FIRE-BRIGADES.

THE HON. MR. REYNOLDS introduced the Bill to amend the law relating to Jute warehouses and Fire-brigades, and moved that it be read in Council. He said :—"The Statement of objects and reasons which has been circulated with the Bill explains the difference between the Act of 1872 and the Act of 1879 as regards the application of the funds raised under the Act, and the payment of the fire-brigade expenses. By the Act of 1872 the cost of the fire-brigade is to be met from the fees and penalties levied under the Act, and if there are any charges which cannot be defrayed from this source, they are to be paid by Calcutta and the Suburbs in the proportions of seven-tenths by the former and three-tenths by the latter, and such three-tenths must not exceed ten thousand rupees. But it is quite another thing to provide, as the Act of 1879 provides, that the entire charges of the fire-brigade shall be contributed in the above proportions, and that any surplus shall be applied in the reduction of the license fees. The receipts from fees in Calcutta and the Suburbs are about Rs. 22,000 in the former, and about Rs. 16,000 in the latter. But last year the Suburbs paid only Rs. 7,411 to the cost of the fire-brigade, while the charge against Calcutta was Rs. 17,595. Eighty per cent. of the fees in the Suburbs, which is the contribution contemplated by this Bill, would be Rs. 12,800: and this is a much more equitable sum for the Suburbs to pay than the amount which they contribute at present.

I stated, when moving for leave to introduce the Bill, that its two main objects were the inclusion of Howrah in the fire-brigade system of Calcutta, and a more equitable apportionment of the fire-brigade expenses between Calcutta and the Suburbs. The former of these measures was recommended last year by the Chamber of Commerce, on the occurrence of a serious fire at the Nasmyth Press Company's premises in Howrah. The receipts from fees in Howrah are between five and six thousand rupees a year: and though this sum is not large, it seems probable that it can be more usefully expended by bringing Howrah within the operation of the Calcutta fire-brigade, than by attempting to keep up an independent brigade on the other side of the river. The Municipal Commissioners of Howrah have for some time been aware that their fire-brigade apparatus is quite inadequate for the purpose for which it is maintained, and they are very anxious to obtain a steam fire-engine, but they have hitherto been unable to raise the necessary funds. By the amalgamation of their fire-brigade with Calcutta, they will certainly obtain better protection than they get at present. It will probably be possible to keep a steam fire-engine permanently stationed on the Howrah side; and even if this cannot at once be arranged for, the Howrah residents will get prompt assistance from Calcutta in case of need, instead of having to make special application for the help of the Calcutta engines.

With regard to the other point, the apportionment of the fire-brigade expenses, I hope I have made it clear to the Council that under this Bill each of the Municipalities will pay over a fixed proportion of its receipts under the Act, and the distribution of the charges into seven-tenths and three-tenths will be done away with, as well as the limitation of ten thousand rupees as the maximum which the Suburbs can be called upon to pay. There is nothing inequitable in this, for it does nothing more than redress the existing inequality. The Suburbs will pay more to the fire-brigade than they pay at present; but it is only reasonable that they should do so, and as the number of warehouses in the Suburbs increases, the receipts under the Act, and consequently the contribution to the fire-brigade, will increase in proportion.

The sections of the Bill which empower the Local Government to make orders for regulating the fire-brigade, and which explain the powers of the fire-brigade in cases of fire, are reproduced from the present Act. Section 22 is nearly the same as section 21, the only alteration being the omission of mention of licenses to manufacture fire-works. This omission is necessary, because the manufacture of fire-works will be dealt with in the Bill relating to explosives, which is now before the Council of the Governor-General. Section 24 gives the Chairman of the Municipality in Howrah the same powers in Howrah as the Commissioner of Police exercises in Calcutta and the Suburbs. These powers must be exercised either by the Chairman as head of the Municipality, or by the Magistrate as head of the Police. In Calcutta these two functions are united in the same person. It may be a question for the Select Committee which of the two authorities should have the power in Howrah. It will perhaps be more convenient that the powers should be exercised by the Chairman, as the Magistrate is more frequently obliged to be absent from the sudder station.

I now come to section 26 of the Bill, which deals with the appropriation of the existing balance. There is at present a balance of about Rs. 22,000 standing to the credit of the Jute Warehouse Fund in the accounts of the Suburban Municipality. As this balance consists of surplus fees levied in the suburbs, it might at first sight seem proper that it should either be expended on the fire-brigade, or be refunded to the suburbs, and that Calcutta can have no claim to share in it. But this would not really be an equitable course to pursue. A surplus has accumulated because the suburbs have paid less than their fair share of the cost of the fire-brigade, while Calcutta has paid more than its fair share, and has had to make up a deficit from its General Municipal Fund. Calcutta, the suburbs and the fire-brigade have all a claim to share in this surplus, but it would be a difficult matter to specify in law the shares which each should receive. The Bill therefore proposes to leave the distribution to the discretion of the Lieutenant-Governor, and I do not think that any better means than this can be devised. It may perhaps be said that the holders of licenses in the suburbs ought to have some part at least of the surplus refunded to them, but I cannot admit that they have any such claim. The surplus has accrued, not because fees in the suburbs have been too high, but because the law did not allow the amount levied to be expended upon the purposes for which it was raised.

I hardly think there is any other section of the Bill regarding which I need detain the Council with any other remarks. I may perhaps notice that section 32 gives the Lieutenant-Governor a discretion to declare what quantities of jute, cotton, or other substance shall be deemed to be small quantities such as the law need not interfere with. The present Act specifies what is a small quantity of jute, but says nothing about the corresponding quantities of other substances. If instead of leaving the whole question to the discretion of Government, the Select Committee think it better to say that four maunds of jute shall be deemed a small quantity, and that the Lieutenant-Governor may declare what quantities of other substances shall be deemed small quantities, I shall make no objection."

The HON'BLE AMEER ALI said he wanted, with His Honor the President's permission, to make one or two observations with reference to what might be considered rather minor points of the Bill, but to which he attached some degree of importance. He had mentioned his views to the Hon. Member in charge of the Bill, and he had promised that they would be taken into consideration when the Bill was referred to a Select Committee. He did not therefore intend to detain the Council by making any lengthy remarks with reference to those provisions on this occasion, but he hoped the Hon. Member would not think him discourteous if he took this opportunity to explain why he attached so much importance to two of the provisions of the Bill to which he would now refer. The first of these provisions was contained in the last clause of section 20, which provided that nothing in that section should exempt any officer of the police or of the fire-brigade from liability to damages on account of any acts done by him without reasonable cause. To his mind the words "reasonable cause" were likely to hamper a good deal the police and fire-brigade officers engaged in the duty of putting out fires, if they were called upon to consider, before taking action, whether they had or had not any reasonable cause for doing the acts which they considered necessary. Therefore he hoped that in Committee these words would be sufficiently explained, or other words substituted, shewing that, if a man acted in the bonâ fide belief that the acts which he did were required in the due execution of his duty, it would not have the effect which MR. AMEER ALI was afraid would result from the wording of the provision as it stood.

The other provision to which he also wished to call the attention of the Council was section 30, which provided that, whenever a person was arrested under the powers conferred by section 29 and taken to a police station, the officer in charge of such station should, as soon as conveniently might be, cause him to be conveyed before some Magistrate having jurisdiction in the matter. He had mentioned this also to the Hon. Mover of the Bill. The expression "as soon as conveniently may be" was a very wide one, and on the analogy of other Acts, such as the Police and Opium Acts, in which generally speaking arresting officers were obliged to take the man arrested within twenty-four hours before a Magistrate, he would suggest that the time should be limited, and that probably it would be better to restrict it to twenty-four hours.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The HON. MR. REYNOLDS moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon. Mr. Allen, the Hon Mr. Caithness, the Hon. Bhudeb Mookerjee, and the Mover, with instructions to report in three weeks. He said he was much obliged to the Hon. Member (Mr. Ameer Ali) for calling attention to these two sections of the Bill. The sections as they stood in the Bill were reproduced from the former Act. They were not altered, because no instance had been brought to notice of any difficulty or inconvenience having arisen from the present wording of the law, and therefore he thought there was no necessity to make any change in the Bill. But he agreed very much with the remarks which had fallen from the Hon Member, and he would promise that those observations should be fully considered by the Select Committee.

The HON. MAHOMED YUSUF said that, before the Bill was referred to a Select Committee, he wished to make a few observations with reference to one or two sections of the Bill. The sections to which he referred were sections 16, 17, and 27. Sections 16 and 17 dealt with the application of the funds which were to be levied on account of license fees and penalties. In the Statement of objects and reasons appended to the Bill, he found that less than 20 per cent. of the receipts was sufficient to meet the cost of inspection and superintendence of warehouses. Then section 16 provided that the license fees and penalties levied under the Act were to be applied in the following manner, viz. 20 per cent. to the payment of the costs of inspection, any balance therefrom being credited to the Municipal Fund; and by section 17 the remaining 80 per cent. was to be devoted to the maintenance of an efficient fire-brigade by the Commissioner of Police.

He submitted for consideration whether these provisions should be allowed to remain, or whether they required any alteration; because, although it appeared that at present the actual cost of inspection was less than 20 per cent. of the collections, it might be that such actual cost might hereafter increase, but notwithstanding such a probable contingency, the provisions of the Bill would limit the expenditure for such purpose to 20 per cent., and in the same way, although the whole of the 80 per cent was at present directed towards the maintenance of the fire-brigade, no doubt on the understanding that the whole of it would be necessary for the purpose, still it might hereafter turn out that the whole of the 80 per cent was not necessary for the maintenance of the fire-brigade: what then was to become of the surplus in the hands of the Commissioner of Police? He therefore submitted whether it was not desirable that the provisions of the Bill might be altered, so that, after meeting the actual cost of inspection and the maintenance of the fire-brigade, the balance, if any, should go to the Municipal Fund.

Then as to section 27. The general word "commodity" used in the section was very wide. He was aware that, notwithstanding the general import of the word, the Local Government would not extend the Act by making it applicable to cases where it should not apply. He was quite confident that the Local Government would not include any commodity which did not properly come under the spirit and general purview of the Act. He did not in the least imply any want of confidence in the Government or expect any improper inclusion of any article which should not be included. But he at the same time thought it his duty to draw attention to the use of such a general term as had been used in the section under consideration, and he believed that with a view to secure precision in a legislative enactment, and to leave no place for argument as to its real meaning and intention, and in order to remove all doubt and ambiguity from it, the use of a general expression liable to misconstruction should be avoided. He submitted for consideration whether it was at all necessary to retain the expression in addition to the terms already found in the section. The section already contained the expression "any other fibre," which meant any other fibre such as jute and cotton, and that was quite enough. Was it necessary in addition to this to use the word "commodity"? and while the Council was considering the point regarding the use of general expressions, it was well to bear in mind the case of the Suburban Municipality, which was enabled in consequence of general expressions of this kind to make golpatta houses the subject of a license for keeping inflammable articles. If that was so, nobody could say what might not be contended to be included within the word "commodity," although there was no doubt that the intention of the Legislature was to include only articles such as jute and cotton.

In section 29 it appeared to him that there was an erroneous reference to section 24, probably due to a misprint. The section gave power to arrest persons committing certain offences in respect of which penalties were provided in various sections of the Bill. But in section 24 no penalty was provided; that section merely providing that certain powers conferred by the Bill on the Commissioner of Police in respect of Calcutta and the Suburbs should be exercised in the Municipality of Howrah by the Chairman of the Commissioners. This was clearly an oversight and would of course be remedied.

These were the provisions of the Bill to which he wished to draw the attention of the Hon'ble Mover and the Select Committee.

The HON. MR. REYNOLDS said, with regard to the observations which had been made by the Hon. Member with reference to sections 16 and 17 of the Bill, that he was not prepared to accept the principle that the Commissioners should be allowed to apply such portion as they thought necessary of the receipts from jute licenses towards the cost of inspection and superintendence. It had been a subject of complaint that one of the Municipalities concerned had defrayed what ought to be considered general expenditure from the proceeds of the Jute Fund, and in proposing to allow 20 per cent for the cost of inspection and superintendence, he was actuated by the conviction that 20 per cent of the receipts would be a fully sufficient amount to allow for the purpose, that sum being decidedly more than the present percentage of expenditure. Although this matter would be considered by the Select Committee, speaking for himself he entertained a strong feeling that the principle of allowing the Commissioners to charge such amount as they thought proper against the cost of inspection and superintendence, would be a wrong one.

Then, with regard to section 27, he might say that the word "commodity" was reproduced from the present law. He believed it was introduced originally with the object of including such articles as hay, straw, and wood. That question had been a good deal discussed, but he believed it was now generally admitted that only fibres, such as flax, hemp, jute, and cotton, ought to be brought within the application of the Act.

With regard to section 29 he was responsible for the reference to section 24, which he thought necessary. But he might be mistaken, and no doubt the matter would be considered by the Select Committee.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said he did not know what rules prevailed in this Council as to giving publicity to Bills introduced, but he thought that, with regard to a Bill of this sort, special arrangements should be made to send copies of the Bill to the Chairmen of the Municipalities concerned with a view to the submission of any objections, remonstrances or suggestions which the members of those municipalities might desire to bring to the notice of the Select Committee.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 17th instant.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

The Canal Revenue Reports for 1881-82, and the Chief Engineer's Note on the same.

THE capital invested (direct charges) in Irrigation Works in Bengal up to the end of the year 1881-82 amounts to Rs. 5,48,10,043, divided as follows :—

	Rs.
Productive publicworks	5,24,57,980
Imperial ordinary works	8,30,624
Provincial works	15,21,489
Total ...	5,48,10,043

The receipts from the projects classed as productive public works for the year and the two immediately preceding are shewn in the statement below—

GRAND TOTAL ...	12,56,809	10,19,371	10,94,112

The outstanding balances on account of water-rates compared with those of the year previous are as follows :—

	1st April 1881.	1st April 1882.
	Rs.	Rs.
Orissa	43,586	1,14,142
Midnapore	92,974	1,81,701
Sone	4,64,261	4,36,849
Total ...	6,00,821	6,82,692

The results of the year's operations shew (including interest and all indirect charges) a deficit of Rs. 19,22,213 against Rs. 23,06,111 in 1880-81; or, excluding interest, but including all indirect charges, a profit of Rs. 1,52,975 against a loss of Rs. 31,353 in the previous year. This comparatively favourable result is partially due to the rate of interest payable to the Supreme Government on works executed from loan funds having been reduced from 4½ to 4 per cent., but it is also largely owing to increased receipts from the Sone canals. The net receipts for the year from the Western Main Series of the Sone Project—the capital expenditure on which has been Rs. 1,59,92,879—were Rs. 2,76,564, against interest charges amounting to Rs 6,04,022; so that on parts of the irrigation works the returns have begun to bear a very appreciable ratio to the burden they cause to the provincial finances.

The collections in Midnapore and Orissa were not satisfactory, mainly owing to the low prices for rice which continued to prevail. Since the close of the year under review considerable progress has been made in realizing the arrears in Orissa, but in Midnapore the difficulties which impeded collections are only just beginning to be surmounted. The Chief Engineer adverts at length to certain cases in which the collection establishments in this district were charged with oppressive acts in realizing the water-rates due. The matter was brought to the personal notice of the Lieutenant-Governor when on tour and a searching enquiry by the Collector and Superintending Engineer followed. The allegations made were completely disproved; but in the mean time collections almost ceased, and low prices, the prevalence of malarious fever, and the time taken up in issuing leases in place of those which expired, have militated against the realization of the arrears, which had accumulated. The system which was last year introduced in Shahabad, under which an experienced Deputy Collector was placed in direct charge of the collecting department, has been specially successful, having received much personal attention and supervision from the Collector of the district: the amount received during the year for water-rates was Rs. 5,30,706, against Rs. 3,09,980 in that preceding, and for the first time since irrigation operations were commenced, there is a decrease in the balance remaining to be collected at the close of the year.

The working expenses, direct and indirect, amounted to Rs. 11,03,834, against Rs. 10,50,728 in 1880-81; the excess is wholly in Orissa and Midnapore, there having been a decrease—notwithstanding the increased receipts—of Rs. 14,015 in the charges on account of the Sone Canals; heavy floods in Orissa which necessitated special repairs to the embankments on the Byturnee river, and larger expenditure on the dredging plant used on the Midnapore Canal were the chief causes of the increase.

The areas irrigated year by year since 1879-80 are shewn below—

			1879-80.	1880-81.	1881-82.
ORISSA	Khureef	...	105,186	112,171	126,611
	Rubbee	...	3,616	4,877	5,408
	Perennial	...	236	173	264
	Total	...	109,038	117,221	132,278
MIDNAPORE	Khureef	...	100,054	103,862	104,149
	Rubbee	...	124	.....	285
	Total	...	100,178	103,862	104,434
SONE	Khureef	...	41,132	134,208	119,389
	Rubbee	...	62,266	50,290	36,795
	Perennial	...	27,158	23,127	21,891
	Total	...	130,556	207,625	178,075
	GRAND TOTAL	...	339,772	428,708	414,787

The decrease in the irrigated area occurs wholly in Behar, there being a slight increase due to revision of existing leases in Midnapore and Orissa. The falling off in the area watered by the Sone Canals may, for the most part, be ascribed to seasonable rainfall which, in Shahabad, was 6·17 inches in the khureef season, and 1·41 inches in the rubbee season, more than in the previous year. The decline in rubbee irrigation is, however, partially due to the substitution of khureef for rubboe crops wherever irrigation can be secured, and is observable, though in a less degree, in Orissa.

Considerable progress, more especially in the Arrah Division, has been made in procuring leases for a term of years Up to the close of the year, agreements for five years had been entered into for 43,240 acres. It is to the extension of this system that relief must be looked for in the mass of detail, which necessarily attends the issue of upwards of 100,000 separate demands. The Lieutenant-Governor recognizes the improvement which, it is on all sides admitted, has been made in the assessments; there is, however, still much room for progress, more especially in securing the attendance of the putwaris and villagers interested when the measurement is being made. In the Nasrigunge sub-division, the Sub-divisional Officer Mr. C. Taylor has made a substantial advance in this direction—95 per cent. of the measurement papers in that sub-division being attested by the putwaris.

The navigation receipts of the year, amounting to Rs. 3,42,876, exhibit a gratifying excess of Rs. 63,892 over that preceding: this increase occurs chiefly in the receipts from the canals comprising the Sone Project, but with the exception of the Tidal Canal there has been development everywhere. The receipts from the transport service, which are included in the above figures, reached Rs. 91,606 against Rs. 67,387 in 1880-81. It is contemplated to gradually transfer this service to private enterprise, and a beginning has already been made, the Calcutta Steam Navigation Company having from the 1st January of the current year, taken over the steamers on the Midnapore Canal.

The tollage collections since 1876-77, the year in which traffic was commenced on the Sone Canals, are shewn in the statement following:—

Toll collections.

	Orissa.	Midnapore.	Hidgellee.	Sone.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1876-77	22,881	67,651	44,572	4,852	1,39,956
1877-78	33,884	1,06,917	60,971	26,774	2,28,5[illegible]6
1878-79	57,042	77,340	59,723	29,332	2,23,437
1879-80	62,389	91,861	44,918	27,604	2,26,772
1880-81	41,297	77,143	53,338	39,819	2,11,597
1881-82	53,219	98,060	45,848	54,143	2,51,270

The results of the year's working are the most successful yet experienced, and though up to the present time irrigation works in Bengal have failed to defray the charges for interest payable to the Government of India, the returns are increasing, and warrant the expectation that eventually the Orissa and Sone Canals will cease to be a burden to the province. Estimates for extending the distributary system in Orissa have been submitted to the Government of India, and as at present 106 of the 214 miles of canal in that province are absolutely without any means of distributing the water they carry over the country they are supposed to irrigate, it is hoped that sanction will not be withheld. If accorded, it may reasonably be expected that the new distributaries will be as successful as those now existing, in which case the receipts will suffice to cover the interest charges on the entire capital expended. The Sone Canals require time to develop; the largest proportion of the revenue is at present derived from the Arrah Canal and its branches, and there is no reason why irrigation should not be equally developed on the remaining canals as their advantages become better known.

The thanks of the Lieutenant-Governor are due to Mr. P. Nolan, Collector of Shahabad, for the great improvement made in the realizations in Shahabad, and to Baboo Chunder Narain Singh, Deputy Collector, under whose immediate supervision the collections were made. His Honor's acknowledgments are also due to Lieutenant-Colonel Heywood, R.E, Mr. J. C. Vertannes, and Mr. R. H. Rhind, Superintending Engineers, for the efficient administration of their circles throughout the year, as well as to Mr. Odling who has most successfully managed the Arrah Division of the Sone Circle.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

H. C. LEVINGE,

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 80, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The direction of the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

METEOROLOGICAL OFFICE, INDIA,
The 5th February 1883.

HENRY F. BLANFORD,
Meteorological Reporter to the Govt. of India.

Report of Fluctuation of Traffic on the Eastern Bengal Railway for the month ended 25th November 1882.

Report on Goods Traffic for the month ended 25th November 1882.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY COMPANY, TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE, SEALDAH TERMINUS.

Dated Calcutta, the 20th January 1883.

From—W. INNES, ESQ., Traffic Superintendent, Eastern Bengal Railway Company,

To—The Agent, Eastern Bengal Railway Company.

I BEG to forward the usual comparative statement of traffic for the month ended the 25th November last, from which it will be seen that the gross weight carried over the railway during that period was 18,40,408 maunds, or 19 per cent. over the figures for the corresponding period of 1881.

The principal fluctuations are as under :—

Increases.

Dyeing materials ... ... 6,028 Mds.

This increase is principally due to turmeric, owing to a greater demand for export consequent on higher prices in the market.

Gunny-bags ... ... 16,168 Mds.

This large increase is attributable to the abundant crop of the raw material and to the reduced rates of freight on consignments from Northern Bengal State Railway.

Gram and pulse ... ... 14,148 Mds.

This increase is principally due to traffic in rice from Port Canning, Calcutta and South-Eastern State Railway to Tramway stations.

The traffic from Port Canning is being drawn to the Railway in consequence of the facilities now afforded a the jetties for shipment.

Hides and skins ... ... 4,719 Mds.

Owing to the higher prices in the market, consequent on reduced rates of freight to Europe, merchants in the mofussil have been induced to send forward their stocks more freely.

Jute, screwed ... ... 56,407 Mds.

Do., unscrewed ... ... 2,18,560 "

Net increase ... 2,74,967 "

As stated in a previous report, this season's crop is somewhat later than last. That, together with abundant crop, explains this large increase.

Seeds ... ... 4,383 Mds.

This increase is principally in linseed, and is attributable to a brisk market.

Tea ... ... 5,574 Mds.

This increase appears to be the result of decreased despatches in previous months.

Tobacco ... ... 6,400 Mds.

The traffic in this staple is, as will be seen from the statement, steadily on the increase in consequence of the reduced rate of freight that has been in force for some time.

Decreases.

Oil ... ... 2,449 Mds.

This decrease is attributable to increased despatches last month.

Salt ... ... 32,182 Mds.

This decrease is explained by the very heavy despatches of this staple for several months previous to the one under review.

Sugar ... ... 3,743 Mds.

The decrease in this staple is due to a dull market.

[First publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 9th February, 1883, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. III OF 1883.

An Act to repeal Act XXVII of 1854.

Preamble.

WHEREAS Act XXVII of 1854 (to amend the law relating to the Názim of Bengal) provides for the service and execution of processes within the precincts of the palace of the Názim at Murshidábád, through the Superintendent of the affairs of the Nizámat, or other officer discharging like functions;

And whereas by an indenture dated the first day of November, 1880, and made between His Highness Sayyad Mansúr Alí, Nawáb Názim of Bengal, of the first part, the Secretary of State for India in Council of the second part, and certain other persons of the third part, the Nawáb Názim of Bengal has, for certain valuable considerations in the indenture mentioned, relinquished and retired from the Nizámat and Súbahdári of Bengal, Bihár and Orissa, and his position as Názim and Súbahdár of Bengal, Bíhár and Orissa, and his right as Nawáb Názim for the time being to the authority, dignities, stipend, pay, allowances, properties, privileges and rights thereof, or in any wise thereunto annexed or appertaining or therewith enjoyed, and all right and title to interfere or intermeddle hereafter in any way, directly or indirectly, with anything concerning the said Nizámat and Súbahdári;

And whereas, in consequence of the arrangements made by the said indenture, the office of Superintendent of the affairs of the Nizámat has been abolished, and there will in future be no officer discharging the like functions, and it is therefore expedient to repeal Act XXVII of 1854; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Repeal of Act XXVII of 1854.

1. Act XXVII of 1854 is repealed.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 2nd February, 1883:—

No. 3 OF 1883.

A Bill to authorize the Universities of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to grant certain honorary degrees.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the granting of honorary degrees, and to give to the Universities at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay the power of granting the degree of Doctor of Laws to persons who have not undergone a previous examination;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Repeal of Act XXI of 1875.

1. Act No. XXI of 1875 (an Act to authorize the University at Calcutta to grant honorary degrees) is repealed.

Power to confer honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

2. If the Vice-Chancellor and not less than four of the other members of the Syndicate for the time being of any of the Universities at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay recommend that an honorary degree be conferred on any person, on the ground that he is, in their opinion, by reason of eminent position and attainments, a fit and proper person to receive such a degree, and if the Chancellor of the respective University confirms the recommendation, the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor and Fellows for the time being of the University may confer on that person the degree of Doctor of Laws, without requiring him to undergo any examination.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

BY Acts II, XXII and XXVII of 1857, by which the Universities of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras were respectively established and incorporated, power is given to grant degrees only after examination, and Act XLVII of 1860 only extends the number and description of degrees which can be conferred, but leaves the necessity of a previous examination untouched. No Act giving power to grant honorary degrees was passed until 1875, when an Act was passed to enable the Calcutta University to confer honorary degrees. That Act enables the University to grant any honorary degree, but it is thought desirable to confine the power to the grant of the degree of Doctor of Laws, in accordance with the ordinary practice of the Universities in England. Madras and Bombay have never had power to grant honorary degrees. It is now proposed to place the Universities at all the three Presidency-towns on the same footing with regard to these degrees.

2. With this view section 1 of the proposed Bill repeals Act XXI of 1875. By the Act establishing the Universities, the power to confer degrees is granted to the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor and Fellows, in whom, therefore, the power to grant honorary degrees is also vested by section 2 of the Bill. An honorary degree is not, however, to be granted to any person unless the Vice-Chancellor and not less than four of the other members of the Syndicate recommend the grant and the Chancellor confirms the recommendation.

NOTIFICATION.

THE following rules in regard to the regulation of the strength and cost of Cantonment Police are issued for general guidance :—

Cantonment Police.

I.—The payment of the Cantonment Police will be made from the Regular Police budget and by the District Superintendent of Police.

II.—The administration of the Cantonment Police, which is by law a portion of the police force of the province, is vested in the District Superintendent of Police, who will be ex-officio a member of the Cantonment Committee.

III.—No increase or decrease in the strength and cost of the Cantonment Police shall have effect without the sanction of the Local Government.

IV.—Any proposals affecting the strength and cost of the Cantonment Police, or for forming a Cantonment Police where none now exists, shall be referred by the District Superintendent of Police through his official superiors to the Local Government, and shall ordinarily be accompanied by the recorded concurrence or opinion of the officer commanding the station. Should the officer commanding the station wish for any alteration, he will forward his proposals to the District Superintendent, who will treat them in the above manner.

V.—The orders of the Local Government will be conveyed through the Police Department, and a copy will be forwarded at the same time to the Quartermaster-General for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

VI.—Where any new or increased charge on account of Cantonment Police is rendered necessary, the Local Government will communicate with the Quartermaster-General in view to any remarks that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief may desire to offer for the consideration of the Local Government before the final orders are given.

NOTIFICATION.

The 26th January 1883.—Under the provisions of section 69 of Act III of 1877, the Lieutenant-Governor directs that the following revised rule be substituted for rule 114, which was published under notification dated the 19th June 1882, in the Calcutta Gazette of the 28th idem :—

"Rule 114.—Every Registrar shall submit to the Inspector General, before the 1st March of each year, an indent in quadruplicate, in the prescribed form, for all register-books and other registration forms, including the forms prescribed by the Accountant General, Bengal, which will be required for his own office and for those of the Sub-Registrars subordinate to him, during the 12 months from the 1st October to the 30th September following. When it is desired that the supply of register-books, &c., should be forwarded to any sub-registry office direct instead of being sent through the office of the Registrar to whom the Sub-Registrar is subordinate, an intimation to that effect should accompany the Registrar's indent, and the indents of such Sub-Registrar should be submitted separately in quadruplicate with the Registrar's endorsement, instead of being embodied in the Registrar's indent. A supply of new register-books required to be opened on the 1st January of each year should be included in this annual indent.

CUSTOM HOUSE NOTICE.

Notice.

TO MASTERS OF NATIVE VESSELS.

IN accordance with a Resolution of the Government of Bengal in the Marine Department, dated 13th January 1883, regarding the exhibition of lights on native craft, it is hereby notified that the larger or sea-going craft, such as buggalows, must be provided with a small box, protected with the proper coloured shade, large enough to receive a light fitted on each bow, the red and green lights being permanently and separately fixed. Open cargo boats and other smaller craft are allowed to exhibit the necessary red and green lights by hand.

2. On and after the 1st April 1883, the master of every native craft will be required to produce to the Collector of Customs, before the grant of a port clearance, a certificate signed in Calcutta by the Deputy Conservator and Harbour Master, and at the out ports by the Port Officers, showing that they are provided with the proper lights, and have the necessary appliances for fixing and exhibiting them in their proper positions, that the men in charge know the sides on which the green and red lights should be shown, and that there is on board each vessel a copy of the rules of the road at sea, in a language understood by the masters.

Calcutta, the 10th February 1883. (885—1) G. H. SIMMONS, for Vice-Chairman.

Forest Department, Bengal, Sunderbuns Division.

NOTICE.

ONE teak, one deodar log, and thirty-one pieces of pine are now lying at the Government Timber Depôt of Tangara khal station, and twelve teak, one sal, and two deodar scantlings at the sub-station of Tangara khal.

Any person having claim upon the same is requested to come forward and prove his claim within two months from this date to the officer in charge of the depôt, or at the office of the undersigned, and after paying salvage, &c., upon the logs to remove the same.

No claims will be admitted after two months from this date, when the timber will be sold for the benefit of Government.

G. W. STRETTELL,
Dy. Consr. of Forests, Sunderbuns Divn.

Dated Calcutta, the 10th January 1883,
No. 3, Hungerford Street.

Government Cinchona Febrifuge.

THIS preparation is an efficient substitute for Quinine and can be purchased by Government officers for public and charitable purposes, and by any one taking twenty pounds at a time, from the Superintendent, Botanical Garden, Calcutta, for cash only, at the following rates:—per four ounce tin, Rs. 4 ans. 8; per eight ounce tin, Rs. 8 ans. 8; per pound tin, Rs. 16 ans. 8. The general public can be supplied by the Superintendent, Botanical Garden, for cash only, at the undernoted rates:—per four ounce tin, Rs. 5 ans. 8; per eight ounce tin, Rs. 10 ans. 8; per pound tin, Rs. 20. This medicine is also sold by the principal European and Native druggists in Calcutta. Postage eight annas per 4 and 8 oz. tins, and twelve annas per pound tin, in addition to the foregoing rates.

Notice.

RESOLUTION ON THE ANNUAL REPORT ON EDUCATION FOR 1881-82.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT EDUCATION.

Calcutta, the 13th February 1883.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

The Report of the Director of Public Instruction on Public Instruction in Bengal for the year 1881-82.

The report, which is submitted by Mr. Croft, who was Head of the Education Department throughout the year, has reached the Government considerably after the prescribed date. The delay is sufficiently accounted for by the pressure of work thrown upon the Director of Public Instruction by the Education Commission and by the Committees appointed by the Government of India for the revision of educational forms and for the consideration of the subject of European education. Before his report was ready for submission, the Director was able to furnish the Government, for incorporation in the Provincial Administration Report, with such a summary of the year's results as sufficed to present a correct statement of the general course of Public Instruction in this Province during 1881-82. That statement, however, was necessarily brief, and cannot be considered a satisfactory substitute for the detailed review of the working of the department which the system of administration requires.

2. The Bengal educational system is divided into three great classes—primary, secondary, and university education. There are, besides technical schools, schools for girls and for children of European extraction, which lie somewhat outside this classification; but for the purpose of an outline of the system, these schools may be ignored. Each of the three great classes of primary, secondary, and university education is in its turn sub-divided according to the character of the instruction imparted in the schools comprised in it. In the lowest, or primary class, the division is into upper and lower primary schools, the latter again being sub-divided into higher and lower sections, according as the pupils can or cannot read a printed book. This lower section of the lower primary schools is the bottommost step in the scale of organized education in these provinces.

In the lower primary schools the teaching consists of the first four rules of arithmetic according to the English method, mental arithmetic according to the native method, writing, and reading a simple printed book. In the upper primary schools the preceding course is taught, but their curriculum aims also at imparting a fair knowledge of the vernacular language of the province, of arithmetic and zemindary accounts, some knowledge of Euclid, of the history and geography of Bengal, and of the elements of Physical Science. There is thus between the two descriptions of schools no hard-and-fast line of demarcation: all upper primary are genuine lower primary schools in addition to being something else.

The transition between one class of school and the next higher is as easy and gradual as between descriptions of schools within the same class. The secondary class of schools comprises three descriptions—high and middle English, and middle vernacular. The middle vernacular schools are the lowest of the class, and in them the curriculum differs from that of the upper primaries only in the fuller character of the instruction imparted and in the addition of an English class, which it is optional with the pupils to attend. The middle English school, again, is an improvement on the middle vernacular, the English subject being now compulsory; while the high English school, teaching the course for the University Entrance Examination, preserves touch with all inferior grades by having classes suited to the requirements of pupils of every lower stage of educational development. Finally, crossing the boundary into the domain of university education, we find that the second class college teaching up to the First Arts standard improves on the instruction given in the high English schools, while the first class college teaching the full B. A. course is the ultimate and full development of the instruction imparted in all inferior grades of schools.

It is perhaps open to enquiry whether there may not be a certain waste of power and needless expenditure of funds in this reproduction in each higher grade school of every class of instruction given in all below. Where various grades of schools co-exist in the same locality, it may be a question whether the competition of the present system produces more benefit than would follow from a more definite and consistent division of labour. That is a consideration, however, which it is unnecessary to do more than glance at here; it will no doubt receive such attention as it deserves from the Education Commission which is now sitting.

Not only does the existing gradation of schools facilitate the passage of pupils from a lower class of school to a higher, but the transition for meritorious pupils is also still further facilitated by the provision of scholarships. Marked proficiency in the course of study taught in the lower primary schools qualifies for a scholarship of Rs. 2 per month tenable for two years at any upper primary school, or at those schools of the secondary group in which vernacular is the basis of instruction. In like manner excellence in the upper primary course is rewarded by a scholarship of Rs. 3 tenable also for two years at any middle vernacular or middle English school.

The subjects of study in the middle vernacular and middle English schools are the same, the distinctive difference between the two grades being the greater attention paid in the latter to English, and possibly a better finish in the vernacular instruction also. Excellence in the middle vernacular school course entitles to a scholarship of Rs. 4, and in that of the middle English school course to a scholarship of Rs. 5, both tenable at any Government or aided school. Finally, 152 junior scholarships of Rs. 20, Rs. 15, and Rs. 10 in value, and tenable for two years, reward the most successful students at the University Entrance Examination, while 49 senior scholarships of Rs. 25 and Rs 20 in value, tenable for a similar period, are within the reach of the most proficient students at the First Arts Examination. All the above are Government scholarships, but many more founded by private munificence are awarded either at the university or at the departmental examinations.

The preceding remarks indicate in outline what the system of public instruction in these provinces is. The following extract from the Director's report will show the agency by which that system is supervised and controlled :—

The Director is responsible to Government for the state of education of every kind—collegiate, secondary and primary. Collegiate education is under his immediate control; secondary and primary education under that of the Circle Inspector and the Magistrate respectively. The Circle Inspector is the chief local administrative officer of the Department, who is immediately responsible for the state of secondary education in his circle. It is also his duty to watch and report on the progress of primary education. The Joint Inspector occupies within his division the position of a Circle Inspector, subject to certain limitations of authority with regard to appointment in zillah schools and the distribution of grants-in-aid—matters which are reserved for disposal by the Inspector. The duties of an Assistant Inspector are not rigidly defined; but the Inspector whose assistant he is may employ him in duties as varied as those of a Joint Inspector, or may delegate to him certain departments of work. The Magistrate, with whom the District Committee is associated as a consultative body, is immediately responsible for the state of primary education, including the administration of the primary grant, the award of lower primary scholarships, and the control of the local training school for gurus, where such exists. He is also an ex-officio visitor of schools of every class in his district; and his suggestions and criticisms are to receive the careful consideration of the Inspector or the Director. The duties of the District Committee, as limited by present orders, relate to the supervision of the zillah school, so far as regards its finances and discipline, the maintenance of the building, the attached hostel, and other questions which can conveniently be dealt with by a committee on the spot. The Deputy Inspector is the local educational officer entrusted with the immediate supervision of schools of all classes in his district, with the exception of the zillah school and the first-grade normal schools, both of which institutions are placed, in respect of the appointment and promotion of masters and the regulation of studies, under the orders of the Circle Inspector. The Deputy Inspector is, therefore, subordinate to the Magistrate as regards primary, and to the Circle or Joint Inspector as regards secondary, education. Under recent orders, however, the Deputy Inspector is declared to be more closely concerned with secondary education, his responsibility for the condition and progress of which has lately been insisted on; his duties with regard to primary education being limited to general supervision and control, and to seeing that the orders issued to him by the Magistrate are carried out by the Sub-Inspectors. The duty of Sub-Inspectors is mostly confined to the inspection and examination of primary schools, whether for rewards or for scholarships, under the Deputy Inspector's general supervision. They are, however, sometimes authorised to visit secondary schools, and to report on their condition to the Deputy Inspector or the Circle Inspector.

Such, in brief, being the general plan and system of the Department of Public Instruction in Bengal, the results of that system's working during the last year may now be exhibited. Those results, while satisfactory from the point of numbers, are otherwise, on the whole, less successful than in the previous year. They show that, while there has been a large increase in attendance at school, there has been a falling off in educational progress as tested by examinations. This is, of course, no conclusive proof of deterioration in the quality of the instruction imparted, as other causes besides indifferent teaching may produce unsuccessful examinations. But the fact being as stated, it behoves the Director to examine its meaning and trace its causes.

The following table compares the number of schools of all sorts and of pupils attending them for the last three years :—

3. Classified according to their entire or partial dependence on Government assistance, or their entire independence of such aid, the statistics shewn in the preceding table will stand thus—

Class of Institution.	1879-80.		1880-81.		1881-82.
	Schools.	Pupils.	Schools.	Pupils.	Schools.	Pupils.

These figures show a gain during the year under report of 178,156 pupils, and this gain is contrasted by the Director with the gains which previous years have brought; thus—

	Schools.	Pupils.
In 1878 a gain of	4,740	52,049
„ 1879 „	7,060	86,307
„ 1880 „	6,098	91,323
„ 1881 „	8,131	109,459
„ 1882 „	10,572	178,156

Mr. Croft is of opinion that the general accuracy of the returns for the last year are strikingly confirmed by the results of the recent census. He states that the number of persons described in the census returns as under instruction in Bengal is 1,035,668; and he observes that, as this figure lies midway between the numbers borne on the departmental returns for the years 1880-81 and 1881-82, a guarantee of the accuracy of these returns is thereby afforded, and also an indication that the department now embraces nearly all existing schools. The Lieutenant-Governor has not yet received the detailed results of the late census to which Mr. Croft appeals; but assuming that the figures supplied to the Director are correct, and remembering that the figures of the report under review are twelve months later than the census statistics, Mr. Rivers Thompson considers the Director's conclusions to be fairly probable. Of course they are open to obvious objections, but still the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to receive such evidence of the general accuracy of the educational returns in this province, because recent occurrences made him somewhat doubtful of the correctness of the statistics of primary education in Bengal. The numbers, however, that we now have to deal with are so enormous that an error which may appear trivial in the aggregate figures becomes very serious in the district details; and there are unfortunately strong reasons for supposing that such errors do exist. Indeed the Director himself, more clearly perhaps than any one else, recognizes the small statistical value to be attached to the returns of primary instruction; but he thinks that the submission of such returns teaches the village gurus lessons in school organization. It may be so; but recent disclosures make the Lieutenant-Governor glad to think that in the Local Government Boards a means will be found for closer supervision than at present exists over the class of chief gurus and sub-inspectors who are now responsible for the submission of these returns. Assuming, however, that the returns, if not quite accurate, afford at all events an indication of what the correct figures are, it may be observed that if the number of children of school-going age be estimated as usual at 15 per cent. of the whole population, then 1 boy in 5, and 1 girl in 118, are at school. The Bengal Provincial Committee of the Education Commission have recently found reason to believe that 12 per cent. would more accurately represent the actual facts than 15 per cent.; if their estimate be correct, it would appear that 1 boy in 4, and 1 girl in 95, are actually attending school. Allowing for possible inaccuracies, these proportions are encouraging, and creditable to the recent administration of this great department.

4. The estimated cost of the department to the Government for the year is compared in the following table with the expenditure :—

Budget head of Expenditure.	Sanctioned estimate.	Actuals.
	Rs.	Rs.
Direction and inspection	4,48,200	4,46,321
Government colleges, general and special...	4,71,100	5,05,859
Government schools	6,53,000	6,65,475
Grants-in-aid—

For primary instruction	5,00,000	4,87,196
Scholarships	1,60,000	1,61,408
Miscellaneous	37,700	28,984
	26,90,000	27,37,684
Less receipts ...	5,12,000	5,47,964
Net Government expenditure ...	21,78,000	21,89,720

The receipts of the year were thus in excess of the estimate by Rs 35,964, and the charges by Rs. 47,684. The excess of expenditure over income was fully met from the surplus balances at the credit of various Government schools for which no provision is made in the budget. On the whole, the forecast of expenditure made before the commencement of the year was fairly accurate, the chief exceptions being in the case of the estimates for salaries of professors and grants-in-aid, which were exceeded by large amounts. In justice to the department, however, it must be said that these estimates were considerably reduced after their submission by the Director of Public Instruction.

5. The total expenditure of the Department from all sources, and the proportion of it borne by the Government in the two past years, is given below. The following figures for Government expenditure differ somewhat from those given in the preceding paragraph, owing to the inclusion in the former of the cost of, and receipts from, medical education, charges for school buildings, and other matters not included in the annual estimates :—

(a) Inclusive of expenditure on indigenous pathsalas, tols, and maktabs.

The advance noticed last year in the proportion of the expenditure on education met from private sources continued throughout the period under review, the proportion being 58·6 per cent. against 57 5 per cent. in 1880-81, and 53·9 per cent. in 1879-80. The last-named year was the first in which the Government had contributed less than half of the total cost of education in these provinces. The proportion of expenditure on each class of education which fell upon Government was as follows:—Collegiate education, 52·86 per cent.; secondary education, 29·04 per cent.; primary education, 23·76 per cent.; female education, 28·98 per cent ; special education, 60·3 per cent.

6. It is gratifying to observe that, though the progress made is slow, the proportion of Mahomedan to Hindu students continues to advance. The percentage of the former to the latter is now 22½ against 20 per cent. in 1881 and 18½ per cent in 1880. The proportion among the different classes of schools, exclusive of indigenous schools, varies from 1·8 in the professional colleges to 25·1 in the lower primary schools. The proportion increases steadily as the lower grades of education are reached. The Lieutenant-Governor has recently given his careful consideration to the question of Mahomedan education, which was prominently brought before him in a memorial presented by the National Mahomedan Association, and he has submitted proposals to the Government of India which, if sanctioned, will, he believes, tend to make higher education more popular with Mussulmans. At the same time Mr. Rivers Thompson is fully aware that any measures which can be taken to this end by the Government can do but little to raise the status of the Mahomedan community generally. It is to their own efforts, and to their own readiness to avail themselves of the educational advantages offered by the Government to all classes of its subjects alike, that the Mahomedans must look for advancement. Other branches of the community have learnt this lesson and have availed themselves of these advantages, and to this alone can be attributed the fact that the Mussulmans have as a body been outstripped in the race in which they were at one time the most prominent competitors.

7. The only change of importance which took place in the constitution of the controlling staff of the department was the appointment of Assistant Inspectors of Schools for the Presidency and Patna Divisions, in which the work had become too heavy for the Inspectors. The appointment of Assistant Inspectors is reported to have been attended with marked success wherever those officers have been employed. The supervision of secondary education by Inspectors and their Assistants appears from the return of inspections made to have been fairly attentive in most divisions, though a complaint is made of the amount of clerical work devolving upon these officers, whereby detention at head-quarters is necessitated. The Lieutenant-Governor endorses the view that Inspectors and Assistant Inspectors ought to spend not less than 15 and 20 days respectively in the month in the interior of their charges, and he would be glad to receive a report from the Director of Public Instruction regarding the amount of assistance which the Inspectors would require to enable them to do their duty fully in this respect.

The Director of Public Instruction discusses the manner in which an effective control of primary education can best be secured. The large increase in the number of pathsalas under the direct control of the department has increased the work of the Sub-Inspectors to such an extent that the system of central examinations has in most districts become the rule rather than the exception. Such examinations, though they may be conducted with the greatest care, are of course less effective than examinations held at the schools themselves, and therefore the question of the best means of supplementing the deficiencies of the inspecting staff has become one which calls for decision. Any large addition to the number of Sub-Inspectors could only be made by such an increase of expenditure as the Lieutenant-Governor is not prepared to sanction. As observed by the Director of Public Instruction, "it may be broadly assumed that, if the number of Sub-Inspectors in those districts in which primary schools abound were doubled and even quadrupled, it would still be impossible to secure such frequent inspection of the pathsalas as would seem to be required." This remedy thus, in the Director's opinion, stands practically self-condemned, and according to him it is on the extension, under careful supervision, of the chief guru system that Government must rely for the future. That system is thus explained in the following interesting extract from the Report:—

"An auxiliary inspecting agency in the shape of chief gurus, model gurus, or inspecting pandits, has been introduced into some districts and divisions, and it is between these two methods of increasing the agency of inspection that the choice now practically rests. Each system has its recommendations. Sub-Inspectors are better educated, more directly under the control of higher authority, their time more exclusively devoted to the work of inspection. Chief gurus are cheaper, more intimately acquainted with the circumstances of their narrower charge, more closely connected with the pathsala system. The chief guru is generally the ablest pathsala teacher in his neighbourhood, and he has to supervise about 30 pathsalas lying within a distance of five miles from his school. He is paid a small allowance of one anna for each visit to a pathsala situated in his beat. He draws no salary from Government beyond what is paid by way of stipend to the pathsala of which he is the teacher. He has to distribute his time between teaching his own pathsala, which is to serve as a model for the whole neighbourhood, and inspecting those subordinate to him, with which by long habit he is thoroughly familiar. His main income being that derived from his own pathsala, he is under little temptation to devote undue time to inspection. The chief gurus in some districts are reported to have inspected a large number of pathsalas in situ, and whatever estimate may be formed of the value of such inspection from a professional point of view, it serves in any case to keep the pathsalas at work, and their teachers under some wholesome check. The special merit claimed for the system is that the chief is a man of the same social status as the other gurus, and has means and opportunities of influencing not only the gurus, but also the parents of pupils. He is also an actual teacher, acquainted with the requirements of the pathsalas and familiar with their customary ways; and while the experience and ability which have led to his selection as chief guru enable him to speak with authority in his dealings with the subordinate gurus, his influence is naturally exerted in the direction of retaining and confirming all that is most valuable in the course of pathsala instruction. The object of Government being to raise and strengthen the indigenous system of education, and not to replace it by a foreign system of its own devising, the employment of agents, drawn from the general body of gurus, to assist it in carrying out that policy, tends to establish a more intimate connection between Government and popular education, while it strengthens the confidence of the people in the system, and offers a definite object of ambition to the best of the indigenous teachers."

The proposals of the Director of Public Instruction on this question of strengthening the inspecting agency for primary schools are not yet mature, and the Lieutenant-Governor will await their submission before further considering the case or expressing an opinion upon it. There can be no doubt that, whatever system may be adopted, it will have to accommodate itself very much to the arrangements in contemplation for the establishment of Union Committees and Local Boards, in connection with the measures for the introduction of Local Self-government

8. University Education.—The total number of students under instruction in the colleges of Bengal at the close of the year was 2,745, showing an increase of 219 as compared with 1881. Of these 1,305, or nearly half, attended Government colleges, 895 aided colleges, and 545 unaided colleges, the figures in the previous year being 1,260, 808 and 458 respectively. The increase was thus most marked in the case of the unaided colleges, and was due to an addition of two to the number of these institutions—the Maharaja's college at Burdwan, and the Albert College in Calcutta, with 52 and 42 students respectively. The General Assembly's College had the largest number of pupils on its rolls (484), while the Presidency College (374), the Metropolitan Institution (341), the Dacca College (290) and the Free Church College (221) came next. With the exception of the Krishnaghur College, where the malarious fever which pervaded the Nuddea district seriously affected the numbers, no institution showed a very marked decline. The Lieutenant-Governor notices with great satisfaction that 4 out of the 24 colleges in Bengal,—namely the Metropolitan Institution, the City College, the Albert College at Calcutta and the Maharaja's College at Burdwan,—are all supported entirely by private munificence. While the Lieutenant-Governor is truly desirous to maintain the interests of high English education in this province, he yet welcomes the indication thus afforded by these independent institutions, established and supported by private liberality, that the cost of that education will not remain the heavy charge that it now is on the public funds.

The expenditure on collegiate education, which in 1881 was Rs. 4,56,125, rose in the year under review to Rs. 5,19,123, the larger portion of the increase being borne by the Government. It is true that the average total cost of each student in the Government colleges diminished slightly during the year under review, being Rs. 321 against Rs. 325 in the previous year, but the share in this borne by the Government rose from Rs. 215 to Rs. 217. In aided colleges the average cost of each pupil fell from Rs. 193 to Rs. 185, the share borne by the Government being Rs 28 against Rs. 32 in the previous year. This is so far well, but still it must be remembered that the amount available for educational expenditure in Bengal is necessarily limited, and with the spread of education it is essential that this amount should be expended as far as possible in support of primary education, that is, the education of those who cannot afford to educate themselves. The great advantages of a higher education, and the difficulties under which many of those who would avail themselves of it labour, owing to want of means, are fully recognized by the Government; but it is impossible that the State should undertake to provide those advantages on a more liberal scale than it is at present doing. In the interests of the province at large any increase in the demand for collegiate education must be met by the persons who desire to profit by it.

The Director of Public Instruction gives statistics which show the numbers of the successful candidates at the Entrance Examination, who afterwards start on a regular college career. It is impossible here to review these figures in detail; but it may be noted that, out of 1,026 candidates who passed the Entrance Examination in December 1881, 87 per cent. pursued a course of studies at the University. The second-year Arts class of March 1881 consisted of 855 students, of whom 806, besides 27 teachers, presented themselves at the F. A. Examination in December 1881. Of these, 295 were successful, and no less than 271 are now included in the third-year class, while some have joined the Medical College. Two hundred and eighty-three candidates presented themselves at the B. A. Examination of January 1882, of whom 95 passed. Of these, 65 are now reading for the M. A. degree. "These figures," the Director of Public Instruction observes, "confirm the experience of past years, and show that, of the successful candidates at the Entrance Examination, about 90 per cent. become members of Colleges, and that almost all who pass the F. A. Examination read on for the degree." It is, however, interesting to note that, while the proportion of Bachelors of Arts reading for the M. A. degree was hitherto less than half, it has in the year under review risen to slightly more than two-thirds.

9. University Examinations.—The results of the F. A. Examination were creditable to the colleges concerned, though the proportion of successful to unsuccessful students was less than last year. Government Colleges sent up the largest numbers for examination, and they were rewarded with the largest proportionate measure of success. Unaided Colleges had a larger percentage of successful students than aided institutions. Dacca has been the most fortunate college at this examination, and next in order of merit come the Presidency, the General Assembly's, and the Metropolitan Colleges.

10. At the B. A. Examination also the aggregate results were less favourable than in the preceding year. The successful students numbered 126 out of 295 in 1881, while last year only 95 students passed out of 309. The Government Colleges as usual did best, and on this occasion the aided colleges came next. From figures given by the Director, it appears that 63 per cent. of candidates reading the A or literature course and 34 per cent. of those reading the B or science course, failed in mathematics. It has now been decided that mathematics shall not in future be a compulsory subject for candidates electing the literature course, while English poetry will be excluded from the science course. The Lieutenant-Governor has little doubt as to the wisdom of this change, which will enable candidates to devote themselves more seriously to the line of study which they may select, and will save them from failure to secure a degree, owing to ignorance of uncongenial subjects. He notices the confirmation of the view which the results of the last examination for the Bachelors degree affords, that the science course is selected by the most competent students.

11. Sixty-seven candidates appeared at the M.A. Examination, of whom 47 competed for honors and 20 for the ordinary degree. Of the former 19 passed, while six only of the candidates for the ordinary degree were successful. The Presidency College appeared to most advantage at this examination; the Hooghly College came next, followed in order by the Dacca, Free Church, General Assembly's and Patna Colleges. These results, as observed by the Director, compare unfavourably with those for 1881, when 19 candidates out of 24 took honors, and 10 out of 22 passed for the degree. The Director attributes the diminished percentage of success with some probability to the fact that the increasing competition among graduates leads some, presumably inferior, men to read for the M.A. degree who would formerly not have done so.

12. Secondary Education.—The following table shows the comparative numbers of high English schools, and of the pupils attending them, during the year under review and the previous year:—

	1880-81.		1881-82.
	Schools.	Pupils.	Schools.	Pupils.
Government	48	13,867	51	14,795
Aided	98	12,485	104	14,187
Unaided	72	16,256	62	16,615
Total ...	218	42,558	217	45,597

The abolition of the Nizamat Fund and the consequent transfer to Government of the college and school formerly supported from it account for an increase of two in the number of Government schools. The third school situated at Taki in the Sunderbuns owes its existence to the public spirit of Babu Rajmohan Ray Chaudhuri, the local zemindar. Various additions to, or transfers from, the other classes have taken place during the year, and some schools have also been abolished. The net result, however, is that the number of high English schools has decreased by one only, while the number of pupils has risen by 3,039, the average attendance at each school being 210 against 195 in 1880-81. The Lieutenant-Governor views with satisfaction the increasing popularity of high English schools, especially in Behar, where the backwardness of the people in English education has been put forward as one of the reasons entitling Beharis to special consideration in the matter of Government employment. At the same time Mr. Rivers Thompson is of the opinion that the growing demand for English learning should not be met by indefinite extensions of the accommodation now afforded by zillah schools; but that endeavours should be made, by limiting the numbers admitted to those schools, to give free play to the efforts of private enterprise, and to the healthy spirit of competition which it engenders. At Dacca and some other places, the Lieutenant-Governor visited private schools which were in the number of pupils, in the character of the instruction imparted, and in the healthy tone which pervaded them, in no way inferior to the Government schools which existed close by. To such laudable efforts to provide the people with education suited to their wants, and to strike out a new, honourable, and remunerative profession for the many able graduates who now find no market for their talents, the Lieutenant-Governor desires to afford every possible encouragement. He would have it understood that he is not disposed to view with favour any extension of existing accommodation in Government high schools, unless there be no probability that in the particular locality private enterprise will not supply what is wanted. It is perhaps premature yet to expect that private institutions should everywhere supply adequate substitutes for zillah schools, but that is the consummation to which the Lieutenant-Governor, alike in the interest of the tax-payers, of the educated classes and of those in need of instruction, confidently looks forward. The day will come when the official connection of Government with education will be restricted to the Collegiate institutions.

13. Entrance Examination—In all 2,105 candidates appeared at the Entrance Examination from 208 schools, and of these 1,026 or nearly half were successful. These results were less satisfactory than those of the previous year, when 1,184 candidates passed out of 2,031; but the smaller proportion of successful candidates may have been due rather to causes connected with the examination than to any falling off in the acquirements of candidates. The former year is generally believed to have been an easy one for Entrance candidates. The highest percentage of success was attained by the Government schools, from which 58 per cent. of the competitors passed; the unaided schools being more successful than those in receipt of Government grants. The comparatively greater success of the unaided schools is explained by the Director as lying in the circumstance that, while the principal unaided schools of the country are situated in the town and suburbs of Calcutta, Dacca, Moorshedabad, and a few other places where they have acquired deserved popularity and success, the aided schools are generally found in smaller centres of population, and cannot compete successfully with urban schools. The whole of the Government schools sent candidates to the examination, and all, except those at Purulia, Julpaiguri and Motihari, passed some of their pupils. Among the collegiate schools the Hindu and Hare Schools, and the Dacca and Hooghly Schools, have retained their places at the head of the list, while the Patna School, which last year stood tenth on the list, has this year risen five places. The Lieutenant-Governor will await the report of the Director of Public Instruction on the proposal to transfer this school, which is chiefly attended by Musulmans, to the centre of the Mahomedan portion of the city. The Krishnagur School again fell somewhat in consequence no doubt of the severe fever prevailing in the Nuddea district. The comparative success of the Calcutta Madrasa, which passed 10 out of 15 pupils, and stood ninth on the list, is gratifying.

An increase in the number of pupils attending the Mozufferpore and Noakholly zila schools has raised them to the first class, while the Commilla school, of which the numbers have fallen below 300, now belongs to the second class. The total number of first class zila schools is now 13, of which six are situated in Behar—an indication of the intellectual progress of that province, which appears the more satisfactory when it is considered that aid has been given to private English schools at Arrah, Gya, and Chupra. In point of success at the examination, the Mymensingh and Beerbhoom schools stand at the head of the list of first class zila schools. Of the second class schools Barasat, Bankura, and Commilla were the most successful, while Balasore was the best of the smallest class of schools. The Director notices the fact that the Jessore and Baraset Schools, which have adopted a vernacular constitution for their lower classes, are achieving increased success both in the Vernacular and English departments. "The system," says Mr. Croft, "has the support of the most experienced officers of the Department; and though it is desirable to gain some further experience of its working in those schools into which it has been actually introduced, its extension to other schools appear to be only a question of time. Some officers go so far as to maintain that the teaching in all subjects up to the Entrance standard should be in the vernacular, English being taught throughout as a language only. There is much to be said in favour of such a system, as most nearly according with the true theory of education in this country, and as being most likely to advance the standard not only of school, but of subsequent University education. Its adoption in schools would not be open to the objection which must be raised against its extension to colleges, on the ground, namely, that suitable vernacular text-books in the higher branches of study neither exist nor are in any way called for. Those who aim at a University degree must qualify themselves for it in every subject through the medium of English, and of English only." On the interesting and important question thus referred to, the Lieutenant-Governor would be glad to receive, at a convenient opportunity, a further and more detailed communication from the Director.

14. The number of aided schools in the Presidency and Burdwan Divisions remained unchanged, being 32 in the former and 37 in the latter. Judged by the test of the Entrance Examination these schools were fairly successful. In the remaining divisions there are few aided schools. The report notices specially the case of the schools of this class in the Orissa Division, of which there are at present only two—the Loknath school and the European school at Cuttack. The Lieutenant-Governor notices with pleasure the interest displayed in the former school by the Secretary, who is the mother of the Mahashay of Loknath, himself a successful candidate at the examination. "This lady's interest," says the Joint-Inspector, "in the welfare of the school continues unabated, and forms a gratifying exception to the indifference one is accustomed to meet with in women of her class." The Joint-Inspector insists strongly, and in the opinion of the Director of Public Instruction, rightly, on the necessity for raising some of the sub-divisional middle schools in Orissa to the status of high schools in order to keep up the supply of students for the Ravenshaw College. The proposal commends itself to the Lieutenant-Governor, but he will await a fuller development of the Director's recommendations.

The absence of returns from some of the unaided schools leaves their number to some extent uncertain; but so far as returns have been received, there appears to be 62 schools of this class, of which 22 are situated in Calcutta, 14 in the Presidency Division, 11 in the Burdwan Division, 7 in the Dacca Division, 5 in the Patna Division, and 1 each in the Rajshahye, Bhagulpore, and Orissa Divisions. These numbers are encouraging as an earnest of future progress.

15. Of the 2,105 candidates at the Entrance Examination, it appears that, while 1,468 took up Sanskrit as their second language, 315 only presented themselves for examination in Bengali. The number of candidates in Bengali has decreased steadily for some years, in consequence of that language not forming a part of the F. A. Examination course, and time spent on it being therefore thrown away for the purpose of the subsequent University examinations. This is a matter of importance on which the Lieutenant-Governor would desire to have further information. The Bengali language has of late years been greatly improved in force, in richness, and in aptitude for purposes of literary expression; and anything resembling discouragement of it in a Bengal University calls for explanation. The number of candidates in Persian rose from 57 to 100, in consequence, no doubt, of an increase in the number of Mahomedan candidates. On the results of the Entrance Examination, 152 junior scholarships of the value of Rs. 20, Rs. 15, and Rs. 10 a month were awarded. Of these scholarships, of which a certain number are allotted to each Commissionership, 94 were awarded to candidates passing in the first division against 117 in the previous year; while eight were given to candidates passing in the third division against one in the previous year. As the Director of Public Instruction observes, this circumstance affords an indication (which is clearer than that supplied by the mere numbers passing the examination) of the failure of schools, especially those in backward tracts, to come up to the standard as fully as in the previous year.

16. Middle English Schools.—The ten Government schools included under the head of Middle English Schools are nearly all institutions of an exceptional character. They include the schools for Maghs and Chakmas at Rangamati and Brindaban in the Chittagong Hill Tracts, the Bhootea boarding school and the zila school at Darjeeling, the school for Europeans at Kurseong, the Collinga branch school attached to the Calcutta Madrasa, model schools at Bogra and Patna, the model school attached to the Calcutta Normal school, and the Nasiriganj school in Shahabad supported from the Estates Improvement Fund. The number of aided schools of the middle English class rose from 455 to 479, while the number of unaided schools rose from 123 to 138. These changes were produced by the abolition of old and the establishment of new schools, and by transfers of schools from one grade to another. It is observed by the Director of Public Instruction that the line between middle English and middle Vernacular schools is not very clearly defined, and that schools from temporary causes constantly pass from one to the other class. The teaching of English may cease for a time owing a decline in the support given to the English class, or an English class may be added to a school to meet a demand, without entitling the institution to recognition as an English school until it has been successful in the scholarship examination. The review given in the report of the progress of the middle English schools in each division is chiefly remarkable as showing that nearly all schools of this class have adopted what is known as a vernacular constitution; that is, they have chosen the vernacular as the language for imparting instruction, teaching English as a language only. The Lieutenant-Governor is convinced of the wisdom of this choice, believing with the Director that "it will hardly be questioned that the 39,000 pupils in middle English schools under their present constitution, according to which they receive all substantive instruction in the vernacular, learning in addition a moderate amount of English as a language only, are getting a far better training than the 32,000 pupils of 1878, when all subjects were taught through English, and therefore badly taught, by teachers who were themselves unacquainted with that language." An opinion has been expressed by one district officer of experience that in his district the demand for middle English schools is increasing every year, and that, "unless technical schools are provided as outlets, the mere scholastic element, already too great, will breed political discontent." To this the Director makes the following reply:—

"It is a trite saying that discontent is the mother of progress; and if boys who have received a fair vernacular education are filled by such education with the desire of improving their lot in life, and if they find that desire stimulated by the further acquisition of a useful, however elementary, knowledge of English, I do not see in the circumstances any great ground for sorrow or alarm. On the contrary, if it is admitted (as it probably will be) that the mental faculties of the students are strengthened and developed by the additional education thus imparted, such an enlargement of their field of view may lead them to demand additional facilities for that very technical instruction, the absence of which is now rightly deplored, and also to co-operate with Government in providing it. It is not the spread of English education that checks professional or industrial enterprise. The Medical College and the Engineering College, besides the growth of numberless other arts and trades, are sufficient to show that educated Bengal takes readily to a great variety of pursuits that uneducated Bengal would not so much as look at. The national wealth and prosperity are increased by education, even by that English education which is sometimes decried as the source of indefinite political evils. The fact is, attention is fixed on the few who go from office to office seeking for situations and not finding them—men who have in many instances failed in their school or college career, and who would fail equally in any walk of life; in their case it may be conceded that disappointment and discontent are their normal lot. But, in the argument that I am considering, no attention is paid to those (and they are the majority) who, having profited by such education as may have been open to them, enter quietly into the complex life of the nation, and do their part towards keeping the economical machine at work, without attracting to themselves any special notice. But after all it is rather late in the day to discuss questions like this. I can understand objections to education on the ground that it is bad, but not on the ground that it is high. Again, I can understand objections to a system of education on the ground that its different parts are not in due proportion; for example, that primary is sacrificed to high education, or high to primary; or, again, as in the present instance, that technical education is not sufficiently pushed, compared with general education. So far I am quite at one with Mr. ———; but I cannot ignore the difficulties that beset the question which he raises. To be of any real utility, technical instruction requires, as a condition of its growth and development, the existence of industrial centres, in connection with which corresponding schools may be opened. Such centres exist on the Continent of Europe, where technical schools abound; they do not exist, except in a few large towns, in any part of Bengal. The development of technical education in this country needs all the care and thought that can be given to so vitally important a subject; but meanwhile it may be useful to remember that practically all the scholars throughout Bengal, who now receive a general education in any form above the barest rudiments, belong to those classes of society with whom a liberal education, as that has been from time to time understood, is a tradition of centuries. It should hardly be thought less useful or necessary at a time when it is proposed to give the people a largely increased share in the local government of the country."

In the general tenor of these remarks the Lieutenant-Governor entirely agrees. He has no sympathy with an obscurantist policy in matters of education, believing such a policy to be opposed to the true interests of the British Government in this country; and he sees no objection to the increase of middle English schools, provided that education in English in these institutions is, as now, made to follow, and not to take the place of, sound vernacular instruction. The Lieutenant-Governor also fully recognizes the need of technical instruction for India. Prominent success has already marked the establishment of the Seebpore College, near Calcutta, and similar results may attend the institution of the Industrial school at Patna. As Mr. Croft, however, states, the growth of such education is beset by great difficulties in any country where industrial centres are few and unimportant. The establishment of these centres is a question of the future; but meantime Mr. Rivers Thompson is not without hope that, if the attention of foreign countries could be attracted to the indigenous trades and manufactures of India, this want of great industrial centres might be, to some extent, counteracted. If a demand for the products of Indian industries could only be created, new lines of profitable employment, in accordance with the customs of the country and the genius of its people, would be established. From this point of view the Lieutenant-Governor looks forward with much interest to the forthcoming International Exhibition, the success of which may prove the origin of great advantages to the country.

17. Of the 627 middle English schools, 359 sent between them 962 candidates to the Middle English Scholarship Examination, of whom 683 were successful— a satisfactory result, when it is remembered that the examination was adapted to the changed constitution of the large majority of the schools.

18. Middle Vernacular Schools.—An increase of 11 and 22 respectively in the number of Government and aided middle vernacular schools, and a falling off of 11 in that of unaided schools of the same class, caused a total increase of 22 in the number of schools of this class, of which 1,050 were in existence at the close of the year, attended by 56,441 pupils. The increase of Government schools was due to the opening of seven model schools in backward districts, and to the inclusion in the returns for the first time of 4 schools in the Tributary Mehals of Orissa. Such falling off as is apparent in the number of aided and unaided schools is mainly due to a re-classification, few schools having been closed during the year.

19. At the Middle Vernacular Scholarship Examination, 3,350 candidates appeared from 1,002 schools, of whom 2,175 were successful, showing some improvement as compared with the previous year, when 931 schools competed and 2,004 candidates out of 3,500 passed.

20. The following table given by the Director is interesting as showing the progress made by middle schools, both English and Vernacular, since their reorganization of the Scholarship Examination in 1878:—

	Number of competing middle schools.	Number of middle scholarship candidates.	Number passed.
1878	1,152	3,665	2,135
1879	1,191	3,466	2,015
1880	1,278	4,496	2,587
1881	1,361	4,312	2,858

In furtherance of the object of the change made in 1878, a revised set of Middle Scholarship Rules have been issued since the close of the year.

21. Primary education.—Under the head of Primary Education are now included the schools formerly known as "lower vernacular" (and now as "upper primary") and lower primary schools or pathsalas. In the earlier paragraphs of this Resolution a brief reference was made to the course of study in these schools. It may, however, be well to mention here in more detail that in the upper primary schools the curriculum consists of—(1) the vernacular language; (2) the history and geography of the Lower Provinces; (3) arithmetic, inclusive of zamindari and mahajani accounts; (4) the first book of Euclid; (5) elementary notions of physics; and (6) the Sanitary Primer. In lower primary schools the course includes—(1) a vernacular adaptation of Chambers' Rudiments of Knowledge; (2) handwriting and the reading of manuscript; (3) arithmetic up to the first four rules, simple and compound, on the European method; (4) subhankari or rules and formulæ for mental arithmetic on the native system; (5) bazar accounts, zamindari accounts, and simple mensuration; and (6) the Sanitary Primer. The lower primary schools no longer include indigenous pathsalas, tols and maktabs, which have in no way adopted the departmental standard. These are now classed as schools of special instruction—a very unsatisfactory designation including, as it does, in one class institutions so totally different in their character as the Engineering College at Seebpore and the most backward village school. Some such term as "indigenous," or "extra-departmental education" should be devised under which to class tols, maktabs, and indigenous pathsalas, which do not conform to departmental standards. Excluding from the class of primary schools all those indigenous institutions, we still find that the number of primary schools increased from 43,400 in 1880-81 to 50,788 in 1881-82, the number of pupils having risen in the same period from 760,886 to 880,937. Of the primary schools existing at the close of the year, 1,944, attended by 68,598 pupils, belonged to the upper primary class. The proportion of upper primary schools to that of all primary schools was therefore 3·8 per cent., and that of the pupils attending them to that of all pupils receiving primary instruction 7·7 per cent.

22. Upper Primary Schools.—The total number of the upper primary schools showed an increase of 243 with 9,280 pupils. The number of Government schools of this class rose from 9 to 18 by the inclusion of nine schools situated in Angul and Banki. Aided schools rose from 1,632 to 1,847, the increase being most marked in the Bhagulpore, Dacca, Chittagong, and Rajshahye Divisions. There was a small increase from 60 to 79 in the number of unaided schools. At the Upper Primary Scholarship Examination 2,813 candidates competed from 1,140 schools, of whom 1,716 passed; the most successful divisions in this respect being Burdwan with 523 successful candidates out of 672, Orissa with 268 out of 300, and Dacca with 210 out of 271.

23. Lower Primary Schools.—The number of these schools in existence at the close of the year was 48,844 with 812,339 pupils against 41,699 schools with 701,568 pupils in the previous year. The system of payment by results was during the year adopted in Bogra, and will be introduced into Pubna and Julpaiguri in the course of the current year. It is to some extent in force in Lohardugga, and Darjeeling is now the only district in which it has not been nominally introduced. Of the good results of the system generally there can be no doubt, and these results are most noticeable in the Orissa, Burdwan, and Chittagong Divisions, where the number of pupils under instruction varies from 25 to 29½ per thousand of the population. In the Presidency and Dacca Divisions the numbers are not so large, but further progress is anticipated. In Behar it is believed by the Director of Public Instruction that the system is approaching the limits of its development. In the Rajshahye and Chota Nagpore Divisions, where the numbers attending schools recognized by the Education Department are small, it is believed that many indigenous schools exist. This belief is certainly supported in the case of Rajshahye, by the fact that, while the departmental returns showed only 63,147 pupils under instruction, the census returns gave the number at 102,445. The Magistrates of Rungpore and Fureedpore believe that few indigenous schools exist in their districts; but the census returns, which showed 23,695 and 27,972 pupils respectively under instruction in these districts, while only 12,621 and 19,571 appear on the departmental returns, indicate that this view is to some extent incorrect, though it is possible that a considerable amount of private instruction is given to children at home. The total amount spent by Government on pathsala education was Rs. 3,47,245 as stipends to gurus, and Rs. 25,786 as rewards to pupils. There is a general agreement among inspecting officers that the payment of rewards to gurus by the Government has led to a falling off in the private contributions towards the maintenance of village schools. The Joint-Inspector of Orissa observes that "the people in many cases withhold payment of the school fees, when they see that their teacher has earned a lump sum from Government in the shape of rewards for results, and this they generally do during the last quarter of the year." In the Darjeeling Terai also the introduction of a one-anna educational cess has led to a large falling off in the receipts from fees. That the efforts of Government to improve the primary schools of the country should have led to any extent to a cessation of exertion toward the same end on the part of the people themselves is a matter for regret, and the Director should carefully consider the best method of dealing with this state of things.

24. The Lieutenant-Governor is gratified to observe the good results which have already followed the efforts of the Educational Department to popularize instruction among the Sonthals. Formerly, with the exception of schools established by missionaries, which, though excellent so far as they went, were necessarily few and inadequate to the wants of the people, no schools existed for the education of Sonthal children. A scheme has now been sanctioned for the opening of Sonthal schools in the Government estate of the Damin-i-Koh, and it is hoped that should the experiment, as there is every reason to believe, prove successful, it may be found possible to extend it to other portions of the Sonthal country. Independently, however, of this scheme, the special attention of educational officers has succeeded in raising the number of Sonthal children under instruction in the Bhagulpore Division from 2,170 to 6,444 during the past year. These figures do not comprise the Sonthal converts under the instruction of Christian missionaries.

25. The want of a proper system of audit of primary school expenditure has been brought prominently to notice, since the close of the year, by defalcations detected in the Bhagulpore Division, which have led to the conviction of the Deputy Inspector and a Circle Sub-Inspector of that district of embezzlement of public funds. That attention on the part of the Magistrate and District Committee would have sufficed to prevent fraud is apparent from the success which attended the efforts of Mr. Hopkins, when Magistrate of Purneah, to devise a simple method of accounts. It is, however, obviously desirable that uniformity should obtain in a matter of this kind, and that rules should be laid down to ensure not only the prompt payment, to the persons entitled to receive them, of the sums drawn from district treasuries, but also to secure the submission of authentic bills. Both these points call for urgent attention.

26. The report contains the usual details regarding the progress of primary education in each division. In the Burdwan Division there are now 326 upper primary and 9,211 lower primary schools, attended by 10,040 and 187,448 boys respectively: in the previous year the figures were 318 upper primary schools with 10,436 pupils, and 8,437 lower primary schools with 184,410 pupils. The proportion of children at school to those of school-going age is now one in 2·4 against one in three in the previous year. Fifteen pathsalas, now attended by 476 pupils, were established for the benefit of the Sonthals of Beerbhoom during the year. Of these, ten are under the management of Sonthal-speaking Bengalis, and the remainder under that of Bengali-speaking Sonthals. The Commissioner prefers the former arrangement, because the Bengali taught by Bengalis is naturally more correct than that acquired from Sonthals, and because Bengali teachers "are more intelligent and methodical than it seems at present possible for any man of Sonthal race to be." The Lieutenant-Governor admits the force of these arguments, but it must at the same time be borne in mind that the object of these schools is not to produce Bengali scholars of Sonthal blood, but to give to the Sonthals the rudiments of a practical education, and to render them sufficiently conversant with Bengali to be able to hold their own in their ordinary dealings with their landlords and with the Bengalis with whom they are thrown in contact. The Lieutenant-Governor is not disposed to believe that Sonthals are of necessity unintelligent or unmethodical, and it must not be forgotten that examples of intelligence and method are likely to be more effectual with the Sonthals generally when exhibited by teachers of their own race than when set by foreigners. For the present, no doubt, the difficulty of obtaining competent Sonthal teachers precludes their employment on a large scale; but it may fairly be anticipated that this difficulty will decrease with the spread of education.

In Hooghly the system of giving tiffin money to pathsala pupils attending examination has been discontinued, and books have been substituted for money as prizes. The Lieutenant-Governor was always very doubtful of the advantages of the system, and the change introduced in Hooghly seems to him entirely for the better. The attention of all Magistrates is therefore invited to the following remarks made by the Commissioner of Burdwan on the subject, and they are requested to report through the Director whether a similar change should not be introduced in their districts.

"My attention was drawn in the course of the year to the unreal character of the examination for pathsalas, and I requested the Magistrate to reconsider the system of examinations and the distribution of rewards. The Magistrate in consequence drew up a set of rules designed to make these examinations a real test of the progress achieved by the pupils during the year, and not, as they had hitherto been, a pic-nic followed by a scramble for pice. The evil of giving tiffin-money was that lots of boys came for the sake of the tiffin, and the examiners thought, with mistaken kindness, that every boy who took the trouble to come so far ought to be paid for his trouble, whether he deserved a reward for progress or not. The evil of sending out the money beforehand was that the examiners, knowing how much they had to spend, spent it all, whether the pupils deserved so much or not; and in order to leave out as few as possible, they sub-divided the rewards so much as to give each recipient a mere trifle. Now the amount not being known beforehand, the real merits of the candidates are tested, and the Magistrate sends out the money after deciding on the report. These meetings will in future be less joyful and amusing, but I hope more earnest and real than they were before"

27. In the Presidency Division the number of upper primary schools rose from 320 with 12,867 pupils to 349 with 14,268 pupils, and that of lower primaries, aided and unaided, from 2,933 with 86,237 pupils to 3,300 with 95,672 pupils. Of the boys of school-going age 4·2 are said to be at school. In the 24-Pergunnahs a change was effected in the manner of payment of gurus, with a view to prevent the appearance at examination of what the Director terms "mushroom schools," i.e. schools started just before and closed just after the annual examinations. The payment of a moiety of the rewards to the gurus is now deferred till six months after the examination and after a local inspection. A system somewhat similar to the chief guru system of Behar has been introduced into this district by the establishment of stipendiary pathsalas to serve as models for the rest. The teachers of these institutions "assist the Sub-Inspectors by giving notices of examination to the other gurus, finding out unaided pathsalas, and teaching the gurus the mode of keeping registers and preparing returns." The spread of this system might perhaps be encouraged with advantage in other districts. The lamentably heavy mortality from fever and cholera in Nuddea caused a falling off in the numbers attending school in that district, which it may be hoped is only temporary. In the Dacca Division primary education made considerable progress during the year, the number of upper primary schools having risen from 173 with 6,592 pupils to 211 with 8,670 pupils, and that of lower primary schools from 2,252 with 61,660 pupils to 3,334 with 78,811 pupils. Of the children of school-going age, one in 4·7 is said to be at school. In Mymensingh a modification of the chief guru system has been introduced with great advantage. The primary schools inspected have increased both in number and efficiency. The interest displayed in the pathsala examinations is said to be keen, and it is gratifying to learn that gurus failing to show good results have in some cases been turned out by their employers. In the Chittagong Division the number of upper primary schools rose from 87 with 3,127 pupils to 108 with 4,605, and that of lower primary schools from 2,351 with 51,020 pupils to 4,602 with 95,860 pupils, no less than one in every 2·4 boys of school-going age being at school. If these figures are trustworthy, the result is exceedingly creditable to the division. The increase indeed is so enormous that, if there be no mistake in the figures, some special causes were probably at work, of the nature of which the Lieutenant-Governor would wish to be informed. In Tipperah the number of stipendiary schools has been reduced from 294 to 272, the money thus set free being utilized for rewards. The conditions on which the stipends are paid, viz. that fees are taken from the boys, that the guru is to be competent and to teach the standard of the school, and that the people shall provide a house, furniture, and diet expenses for the guru, seem well calculated to promote the efficiency of the stipendiary schools, and to secure a sufficient amount of interest in education on the part of the inhabitants of the district. Inspecting pandits resembling chief gurus have also been appointed for each thana. The Rajshahye and Cooch Behar Division remains backward in the matter of education, only one boy in 9·5 being at school, though the advance from 1,725 primary schools with 42,015 pupils to 1,851 with 49,407 shows that some progress is being made. In the Julpaiguri district an attempt is being made by the Deputy Commissioner to establish ploughing classes in connection with the pathsalas, with a view of improving cultivation and of removing the idea prevalent among the jotdars of the Terai that education unfits their children for agricultural work In Darjeeling some hill schools are under supervision of the Scotch Mission, and have made considerable progress. It is stated that there is reason to believe that the inclusion of religious teaching in the course of study serves in some cases to discourage parents from sending their children to school; but it can hardly be expected that Christian missionaries will devote their time to the work of education among uncivilized tribes, unless some religious instruction form portion of the school course. The Lieutenant-Governor had understood that to the various Bhuddist monasteries and hermitages in this district schools were attached. He would be glad in future reports to learn the extent and character of the instruction given in those schools, and the value of Llamas to the Department as teachers.

28. In the Patna Division, where the chief guru system is in force in every district, the number of upper primary schools has risen slightly from 240 to 248, but a slight falling off has taken place in the number of pupils from 8,556 to 8,450, the loss being attributed to the conversion of some of the best schools of this class into middle vernacular schools. The total number of lower primary schools in existence at the close of the year was 9,933 with 111,607 pupils, against 9,757 with 111,490 pupils at its commencement. These figures do not, however, represent the real increase, as no less than 664 schools in the district of Gya were transferred from the lower primary class to that of "indigenous schools." The extension of the chief guru system led to the transfer of nearly half the unaided pathsalas to the aided list. Altogether one boy in 7·6 is at school in the division. In the Bhagulpore Division education is said to have made considerable progress, and one boy in 6·8 is at school. The number of upper primary schools rose from 202 with 6,795 pupils to 254 with 8,662 pupils, and that of lower primary schools from 6,649 with 66.277 pupils, to 7,250 with 73,151 pupils. Recent disclosures, however, have made the Lieutenant-Governor doubt the accuracy of statistics of education in Bhagulpore. Some progress is being made in the education of Sonthals in the portions of the Bhagulpore Division which lie outside the limits of the Sonthal Pergunnahs. In the Jamui and Sudder sub-divisions of Monghyr there are 175 Sonthals at school, and 347 in the Banka sub-division of Bhagulpore. Large numbers of Sonthals have recently emigrated into the Barinda or eastern portion of Malda, and it is hoped that the efforts which are now being made for the education of the other aboriginal people of that tract may be successful with the Sonthals also. In the Sonthal Pergunnahs the number of upper primary schools rose from 20 with 704 pupils to 24 with 934 pupils, while that of lower primary schools advanced from 690 with 9,231 pupils to 830 with 14,457 pupils, 40 and 23 respectively being under the management of the Church Missionary Society and Indian Home Mission, and 767 under native management. Besides Sonthals, 234 Paharias were at school.

29. In the Chota Nagpore Division there was an advance from 31 to 46 in the number of upper primary schools, and a decline from 972 to 953 in that of lower primary schools. The latter was not caused by any falling off in the number of pupils, which rose from 26,193 to 27,088, but by an extension of the grant-in-aid system, which led to the transfer of some unaided schools to the aided list, and probably also to the increased popularity of the schools which had proved their efficiency by success at the Scholarship examinations. Except in Manbhoom, the system of payment by results has not been introduced to any great extent, though it is said to have been in force in Hazareebagh for five years with poor results—a fact which would seem to indicate rather want of energy in its application than defects in the system itself, for there is no reason apparent why it should be less successful in this division than elsewhere in the province. In Hazareebagh it is proposed to introduce the chief guru system, which will probably be productive of good effect. The particulars given regarding progress made in the education of the aboriginal tribes in the Singbhoom district is scanty; but it is stated that Kol villages have in some instances applied for schools—a demand which the Lieutenant-Governor hopes that it may have been found possible to meet.

30. The progress of education in the Orissa Division continues satisfactory. Of the boys of school-going age, one in 2·5 is at school; and the number of upper primary and lower primary schools rose from 145 with 3,395 pupils to 149 with 3,757 and 6,737 with 74,559 pupils, to 7,621 with 86,395 pupils. The increase was most marked in Cuttack, and is there ascribed to an increase in the number of inspecting pandits. In the Tributary States a considerable increase has taken place in the number of schools under the supervision of the Educational Department; and though this fact does not imply the establishment of any large number of new schools, it is, it may be hoped, indicative of a noteworthy addition to the efficient teaching power of the mahals. Altogether 29,182 pupils from 8,196 primary schools appeared at the Primary Scholarship Examination, of whom 15,987 were successful. From the Patna Division alone 10,241 pupils appeared and 6,540 passed. Four thousand six hundred and thirty-six candidates, of whom 2,122 passed, competed from the Burdwan Division; 3,631, of whom 1,903 passed, from the Bhagulpore Division, and 3,192, of whom 1,725 passed, from the Orissa Division. Revised rules for the award of lower primary scholarships have been sanctioned since the close of the year.

31. European and Eurasian education.—The number of schools for Europeans and Eurasians, and the expenditure on them in the year under review and the previous year, are compared in the following table:—

	Number of schools.		Number of pupils.		Government expenditure, 1881-82.
	1880-81.	1881-82.	1880-81.	1881-82.
					Rs.

Unaided "	10	9	1,116	1,030	.....
	52	53	4,911	5,617	82,716

Of the 5,617 pupils, 3,147 are boys and 2,470 girls. Thirty-two of the schools, attended by 4,362 pupils, are situated in Calcutta; 24 of them, with 3,418 pupils, being aided and the remainder unaided institutions. The aided high schools remain six in number, but the Doveton school is not included among them, having lost its grant at the commencement of the year, and not having drawn the smaller grant subsequently sanctioned until after its close. In consideration of improvement now manifest in the condition of the school, the grant made to it has recently been renewed. The St. Xavier's School received a grant during the year. The unaided Calcutta High School ceased to exist owing to the death of the proprietor. A system of payment by results for European and Eurasian schools, which is fully described in the report, was sanctioned at the commencement of the year, and an examination was held with a view to its introduction in November and December 1881. The revised system has been introduced since the close of the year. Under it account will be taken of the average attendance of pupils as well as of their proficiency as tested by examination; and the grants, to avoid the hardship which might otherwise be caused by temporary fluctuations, will be calculated, as soon as it is practicable to do so, upon the results of two years' experience in each case. Some modification of the standard of examination contemplated in the scheme as originally framed has been rendered necessary to meet the recommendations of the Committee which has recently been sitting, under the orders of the Government of India, to consider the whole question of European and Eurasian instruction.

32. Of the European and Eurasian schools situated outside Calcutta, one only—the Convent School at Bankipore—was unaided during the year (it has since received a grant). Of the rest, one—the Kurseong boarding school—is entirely supported by the Government, and the remainder receive grants-in-aid, three being high schools, ten middle schools, and six primary schools. The most flourishing of the schools of this class are situated in the hills of the Darjeeling district. The St. Paul's School at Darjeeling has now 134 pupils, each pupil costing Government on an average Rs. 3-7-8 a month, against 107 pupils costing Rs. 4-15 in the previous year. Eight candidates from this school passed the Entrance Examination, and nine altogether are reading for the F. A. Examination—six being in the first-year and three in the second-year class. Two pupils went to England and passed the preliminary examination for Sandhurst. From the St. Joseph's Seminary, which has 51 pupils on the rolls, three competed and were successful at the Entrance Examination, two being placed in the first division and one in the second. The number of pupils at the middle English boarding school at Kurseong was 41 (28 boys and 13 girls), and the results of an examination held in November are reported to have been satisfactory. Seven schools are supported by the East Indian Railway Company with a grant-in-aid from the Government. Altogether 85 European and Eurasian candidates appeared at the Entrance Examination against 71 in the previous year, of whom 56 passed against 48.

33. Female Education.—A marked increase in the number of girls' schools and of girls under instruction is reported to have taken place during the year thus—

	1880-81.		1881-82.
	Schools.	Pupils.	Schools.	Pupils.
Government Schools	2	307	2	299
Aided "	731	15,849	963	17,996
Unaided "	107	3,607	77	2,723

34. The girls' schools supported by the Government are the Bethune School at Calcutta and the Eden School at Dacca. The former has 106 pupils, of whom six are matriculated students of the University, three studying for the B. A. and three for the F. A. Examination. Miss D'Abreu and Miss Abala Dass, who had passed the F.A. and Entrance Examinations respectively with first grade scholarships, have joined the Madras Medical College. The Eden School has 199 pupils, of whom three passed by the Middle English Scholarship and 11 by the Lower Primary Scholarship standard in 1881. Besides the schools already mentioned, there are in Calcutta four zenana agencies, two normal schools, three orphanages, and nine schools, all which are aided by Government for the promotion of female education among natives, and all but one of which are attended by native girls.

35. In the Presidency Division a decline has taken place in the number of pupils attending girls' schools from 5,171 to 4,807, though the number of such schools has risen from 173 to 192, but an increase from 2,855 to 3,168 in that of girls attending boys' schools, the net result being a decrease of 51 in the number of girls under instruction. The falling off was most marked in the district of the 24-Pergunnahs, in which it is said that many private schools were closed. The Lieutenant-Governor would be glad to learn the cause of this decline in one of the most advanced districts of Bengal. In the Burdwan Division the number of girls' schools rose from 75 with 1,689 pupils to 91 with 2,075 pupils, and that of girls attending boys' schools from 4,315 to 6,018. Liberal scholarships are given for girls in all the districts of this division except Beerbhoom. The scholarships are awarded on the result of the examination of the Uttarpara Sabha, which continues apparently to do good work in the promotion of female education. In the Dacca Division the number of girls' schools was 213 with 3,418 pupils against 132 with 2,441 pupils in the previous year; while the number of girls attending boys' schools rose from 2,879 to 4,651. Of the total number of girls under instruction in girls' schools, 14 are in the middle and 68 in the upper primary stage, while of those in boys' schools, 61 attend middle English, 264 middle vernacular, and 400 upper primary schools. In Backergunge two girls gained scholarships, one easily beating all the boy candidates. In the same district a Mahomedan girl passed the Scholarship Examination for the first time. In the Chittagong Division the number of girls' schools rose from 130 with 1,505 female pupils to 183 with 2,123 pupils, and that of girls attending boys' schools from 1,280 to 2,831. There was a falling off from 11 to 9 in the number of girls' schools in the Patna Division, and from 306 to 254 in the number of children attending them; but the number of girls reading in boys' schools rose from 1,870 to 2,148. Nearly the whole of the latter are to be found in the Durbhunga district, where liberal rewards are given for girls who have made any progress at all in education. It is a question for the consideration of the Local Committees of the other Behar districts whether similar means might not be taken in them to encourage female education. In the Bhagulpore Division there was an increase from 22 girls' schools with 329 pupils to 29 with 396 pupils, and the number of girls attending boys' schools was 518 against 311 in the preceding year. The Lieutenant-Governor is disposed to agree in the view expressed by the Assistant Inspector that, in places where female education is backward, the money available for its encouragement can best be spent on the promotion of the attendance of girls at boys' schools. In the Chota Nagpore Division, as in Behar, female education is backward. The number of girls attending girls' schools fell from 383 to 368, notwithstanding an increase from 13 to 14 in the number of such schools. Boys' schools were attended by 841 girls. In the Orissa Division there was also a falling off in the number of girls attending girls' schools from 883 to 823, but that of girls reading in boys' schools rose from 929 to 1,623. The large majority of the pupils were Hindus, 237 being Brahmins.

36. The following account of the progress made in the zanana agencies is reproduced as being of considerable interest:—

"Mrs. Monomohini Wheeler, Inspectress of Schools, has furnished progress returns of 1,841 pupils reading in zananas, or in schools mainly connected with zanana agencies The standards under which they were examined are the following:—The primary stage, lower section, is that of a pupil who can read little words, can distinguish the different letters composing the words, can write the alphabet neatly, can enumerate up to 50, and who has not gone beyond that standard. In the higher section of the primary stage, a pupil should at least be able to read little stories, to spell words with compound letters, to write easy sentences from dictation, and to write and count the numbers up to 1,000. If she can answer questions about the stories she has been reading, can write such stories from dictation, can read, spell, and explain compound words, can enumerate up to five figures, with ciphers, and do a simple addition sum, she is on the upper limits of the primary, and close to the middle stage. In the middle stage she should read Bodhodoy, write and spell well, and do addition and subtraction. If she further knows a little grammar and the definitions of geography, can write and spell faultlessly, can turn a piece of poetry into prose, and do a multiplication sum, she is approaching the confines of the upper stage. Applying these standards, Mrs. Wheeler reports that of the 1,841 female pupils examined, 1,381 are in the lower primary stage, 408 in the higher primary, 49 in the middle stage, and three in the upper stage. In the previous year, out of 2,192 examined, 1,862 were in the lower primary, 268 in the higher primary, 41 in the middle, and one in the upper stage. It is therefore evident that some progress has been attained during the last twelve months. Still the great bulk of the pupils are in the lower stage. The ages of the pupils examined varied from 4 to 40 in all the agencies except that of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, the maximum age of pupils in that agency being 14 years. In the schools under native managers the maximum age is 10 years. Again, of the 1,841 examined, 367 are found to have attended schools for periods ranging between two and four years, 452 between one and two years, and 362 under one year, no note being taken of 660 pupils, who were mere infants. The Inspectress would like to see the teachers visit the houses of their pupils, especially when girls are absent from school, as such a course would make the girls as well as their parents feel that the teachers take real interest in them. The Inspectress is also inclined to recommend the introduction of fees in girls' schools, and to discontinue the present system of giving prizes indiscriminately to all pupils, instead of to those only who show real progress in their studies. 'It would be a very good thing,' adds Mrs. Wheeler, 'if girls were followed up from school into the zananas. I know in some cases it is done, but these are very few. I think it should be the rule not to lose sight of a girl when she leaves school to be married. Of course if she goes right away where there are no mission agencies, she is quite out of reach, but so long as she is anywhere within reach of any mission, the mission in whose school she has been a pupil should, I think, make her over, as it were, to them. Perhaps it could not be done in every case; but, if it were the rule, I am certain much good would result, and the real requirements of zanana education be fulfilled, and the teachers also, I should think, be more satisfied with their work; for it is infinitely more pleasant to teach a young girl, who has been grounded in a school, than begin to teach a woman of 25 or 30, who has up to that time been quite innocent of any reading, writing or arithmetic.'

The Lieutenant-Governor approves Mrs. Wheeler's proposal to charge fees. A system of gratuitous education is in his opinion usually a mistake. When people have to pay for education, they strive to have their money's worth; in other words fees are an incentive to study. Mr. Rivers Thompson also approves the suggestion as to limitation of prizes. The practice is abused everywhere, both in boys' and girls' schools, and some check upon indiscriminate distributions is very desirable.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTION.

37. Law.—The number of Government colleges to which a law class is attached remained unchanged at seven, but the numbers of law students fell from 367 to 270. The loss was, however, more than made up by the opening of a law class with 190 pupils in connection with the Metropolitan Institution, where lower fees are charged than at the Government colleges. The classes continue self-supporting Pleadership classes have recently been opened in connection with the second class colleges at Chittagong and Midnapore. Out of 103 candidates at the B L. Examination, 67 were successful, but two only were placed in the first division.

38. Medicine.—The number of college students declined from 123 to 117, and that of the students in vernacular schools from 503 to 310. In the Medical College the year commenced with 123 students, 51 old students rejoined and 64 new pupils were admitted. At the close of the session 17 students, of whom seven were senior scholars and ten paying students, passed the M.B. or L.M.S. Examination, and 14 hospital apprentices, passed and left for regimental duties. Four native dhais passed in midwifery during the year against eight in the previous year. The Campbell Medical School showed a large falling off in the number of its pupils, from 244 to 149, in consequence of the enforcement of a higher entrance standard. It is said, however, that the result of the change has been that better students are turned out. The Dacca College showed an increase from 87 to 97 in the number of students, but the result of the examinations was not known when the report was submitted. The number of pupils at the Temple Medical School at Patna was 102 against 146 in the previous year, three being military and the rest civil students. Of the former two passed the junior examination, and of the latter 19 passed the final and 32 the junior examination. The number of students at the Cuttack Medical School was 30 against 26 in the previous year, and five passed the final examination for the diploma. The first examination was passed by 11 candidates against 3 in the previous year.

39. Engineering.—The number of students on the rolls of the Seebpore College at the close of the year was 170 as compared with 172 in the previous year. The year was remarkable for the general strike which occurred among the native students in consequence of the punishment inflicted on one of their number for carelessness and disobedience of orders. As the students adopted an attitude of insubordination, their expulsion became necessary, but this order was, on the tender of a suitable apology, subsequently modified to one of rustication for six months. The result, however, of the movement was a serious interruption to the studies of the students and a temporary decline in their numbers. Owing to the extension of the course from three to four years, no students presented themselves for the University examination. The engineering classes numbered 41 at the opening of the college in November. The same cause led also to a decline in the civil and mechanical overseer classes, which numbered 97 at the beginning of November against 105 in April. The results of the final examination were satisfactory. Out of 20 candidates 18 were successful, most of whom have already found employment. The results of the examination of the second and third-year students were good, but those of the first-year students less satisfactory, only 9 out of 16 having succeeded in passing. The health of the College showed considerable improvement. A volunteer corps, numbering about 50 members, was started in the College during the year, and an athletic club was opened for Europeans and natives alike.

40. Survey and Industrial Schools.—The Dacca Survey School showed a slight falling off in the number of pupils from 30 and 16 in the first and second-year classes respectively to 27 and 15. Fifteen out of the 17 students who appeared at the first-year examination qualified for promotion, and out of 23 candidates at the final examination 15 passed. At the Patna School the numbers in each class (nine in the second-year and 20 in the first-year) remained unchanged. At the final examination, out of nine candidates eight were successful, and nine out of ten first-year students qualified for the second-year class. The Lieutenant-Governor learns with satisfaction that the students have acquired a better knowledge of English, and that there is a larger demand than formerly for pupils of the school. The number of students at the Cuttack School was 43 against 44 in the previous year. All the 16 candidates at the final examination were successful. Industrial schools exist at Dehri, Ranchi, and Nawadi, which appear to be doing useful work.

41. School of Art.—This school, which numbered 77 pupils at the close against 80 at the commencement of the year, is reported to maintain its high standard of efficiency. The Art Gallery is popular, and on the 152 days during which it was open to the public it was visited by 3,478 pupils. The gallery was enriched by several new works of art; one—the Battle of Trafalgar by Luny—the gift of Lord Northbrook. "The Committee," says the report, "are greatly indebted to His Lordship, not only for this valuable gift, but for the trouble he has taken in selecting works of art for the gallery and for the unremitting interest he has shewn in its welfare."

42. Normal Schools.—There were 16 normal schools in existence at the close of the year. The vernacular mastership examination resulted in the award of certificates to 218 out of 251 candidates—44 being placed in the first, 63 in the second, and 111 in the third grade. The proportion of successful candidates was much higher than in the previous year, when 134 passed out of 250. All the passed pupils from Government schools at once obtained employment, and the supply of trained teachers is everywhere below the demand. This is especially the case in Behar. The largest of these schools are those at Hooghly and Patna, with 102 and 93 pupils respectively. The latter has 12 Mahomedan pupils, who are said to take as readily to Hindi as the Hindus. In Midnapore a normal school has been established for Sonthals, and is attended by 49 male and 30 female students. Of these 71 are genuine Sonthals, and the rest Bengalis and Uriyas.

43. Madrasas.—The total number of pupils attending the five mufassal madrasas and the Arabic department of the Calcutta Madrasa at the close of the year was 1,089 against 1,006 at its commencement. At the Central Examination of Madrasas 164 candidates appeared, of whom 88 were successful—34 being placed in the first, and 15 and 39 in the second and third divisions respectively. It cannot be said that these results are very satisfactory. Forty-one of the successful candidates came from the Calcutta Madrasa and 17 each from those at Dacca and Chittagong. The total number of students on the rolls of the Calcutta Madrasa at the close of the year was 1,123, of whom 253 belonged to the Arabic and 386 to the Anglo-Persian department. The Collinga Branch School had 484 pupils. The whole of the students of the Arabic department, and all but 13 of those in the Anglo-Persian department, are Sunnis. The Dacca Madrasa numbered 332 pupils at the close of the year against 315 at its commencement, 113 being entered in the Arabic and 219 in the English department. In the Rajshahye Madrasa the number of students is still small. The Chittagong Madrasa numbered 314 pupils at the close of the year, showing an increase of 48 as compared with the previous year. The number of pupils at the Hooghly Madrasa rose from 34 to 43, but it can hardly be said that it or the Rajshahye Madrasa has been successful.

44. Sanskrit Title Examination.—Fifty-three candidates entered themselves for the title examination, of whom 25 were successful. All the candidates except four were Bengalis, two being Uriyas and two Hindustanis. In Kavya (literature) 21 candidates appeared, of whom 14 passed. Out of 16 candidates in Smriti (law) three only were successful. One-half of the 16 candidates in Darsana (philosophy) passed. Four scholarships were founded during the year by the Maharaja of Burdwan and one each for Smriti and Darsana by Babu Mahini Mohan Ray and Raja Pramatha Bhusan Deb Ray respectively. At Dacca a voluntary association of pandits has been formed for the encouragement of Sanskrit learning. It has an income of Rs. 1,500, of which two-thirds are derived from subscriptions, and the remainder is contributed by Government. The association bestows titles on successful candidates.

45. Scholarships.—The Agricultural Scholarships of £200 a year to enable the holders to study at an English educational college were awarded to Babus Byomkes Chakravarti, M.A., and Giris Chandra Basu, M.A., lecturers at the Seebpore and Cuttack Colleges respectively. The amount expended by the Government on scholarships, exclusive of these two, was Rs. 1,69,788. Besides these, there are available for successful students a large number of scholarships founded by private individuals, many of which are of considerable value.

46. School-books.—By a Resolution of the 7th January 1882, the duty of preparing lists of text-books suited for use in each class of the middle English and vernacular schools was assigned to the Central Text-book Committee, whose number was augmented by an addition of five well-known native scholars. Sub-committees were appointed for the preparation of similar lists in Behar and Orissa. The Behar sub-committee, besides examining and approving the Hindi and Urdu text-books already in use, gave much assistance in passing there the press editions in Deva Nagri and in Kaithi of the Sanitary Primer. Eight school-books in Hindi were issued from the Patna Press during the year. The Inspector of Schools remarks on the necessity for establishing agencies for the distribution of school-books in Behar subordinate to the Central Agency at Bankipore. The Lieutenant-Governor would be glad to receive a further report on this subject from the Director, with such suggestions as Mr. Croft may wish to make. A grant of Rs. 3,400 was made by the Government for the management of the production of Uriya text-books on geometry, algebra, trigonometry, and botany, and books in all these subjects, except the last, have been submitted to the sub-committee for approval. A reward has been offered also for an agricultural primer in Uriya. The Lieutenant-Governor is glad to learn that the need now felt for cheap Uriya maps is likely to be met by the Calcutta School-book Society.

47. In conclusion, the Lieutenant-Governor desires to thank Mr. Croft for the care and ability with which he has presided over the management of the Department during the year. The past year has been one of especial difficulty for the Director, as, besides the regular work of the Department, much additional labour has been imposed on him owing to his position in the Education Commission and the Committee appointed by the Government of India to consider the question of European and Eurasian education. The Director acknowledges the great assistance he has received from Baboos Bhudeb Mukerjêa, C.I.E., and Radekha Prossonno Mukerjea. To these officers the thanks of Government are due as well as to the other officers, both European and Native, of the Department, for the efficient manner in which they have discharged their duties throughout the year.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

A. P. MACDONNELL,

Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal.

The results of observations at the Alipore Observatory are not rigorously comparable with the registers of past years (at the Park-street Observatory). The barometer is about 3 feet higher at Alipore, and, other things being equal, reads therefore ·003 lower. The diurnal range of temperature is also greater at Alipore, and the mean temperature apparently about 2·80° lower; and finally, the thermometer, which has furnished the record of temperature at the Surveyor-General's Office during the last 20 years and upwards, is found to read 0·6 higher than the Kew standard thermometer, which is the standard of reference at the present Observatory.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The direction of the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

PART IV.

Bill of the Bengal Council.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following report of the Select Committee, together with the Bill as amended by them, is by order of the President, published for general information :—

WE the undersigned members of the Select Committee on the Bengal Tramways Bill have the honour to make the following report.

We have considered a communication received from the Howrah Municipality.

We have also received a communication from the Magistrate of Rajshahye, who approves of the Bill.

We have struck out the word 'road' from the title and preamble of the Bill. The retention of the word might be considered to have the effect of restricting the operation of the Act to those tramways only which could be laid on existing public roads. But there may be many instances in which it may be desirable to carry tramways across places where there are no roads or where it may be necessary to diverge from existing roads.

We have considered a question which has been brought to our notice with reference to the last clause of section three, which requires that two-thirds of the members constituting a local authority should be present at the special meeting at which the resolution approving the intention to apply for permission to make a tramway is passed. It has been represented that this places it in the power of a minority of a little over one-third to stop such projects by staying away from the meeting or abstaining from voting. We have not, however, altered this provision of the Bill, for we think, in the consideration of a measure so important to the interests of any local authority as the construction of a tramway, it is proper that at least the proportion of members specified in the Bill should be required to meet for its discussion.

We have also considered a proposal that a proviso should be added to section three to release any local authority which may, before the passing of this Bill, have already passed a resolution approving the intention to apply for permission to make a tramway from the necessity of holding another meeting and passing another resolution in strict compliance with the terms of this section. But we have not thought it advisable to introduce such a proviso.

It has been brought to our notice that the maximum rates of fare prescribed in section twenty-three (twenty-four in the amended Bill), namely three annas for any distance not exceeding three miles and one anna per mile additional for greater distances, are only suitable for tramways laid in towns where the distances are short and the population large. For tramways laid in the country these rates might be insufficient. We have therefore altered the proviso in this section to the following form in order to admit of the maximum rates of fare being fixed for each tramway according to its circumstances :—

"Provided that the rate of fare for each person or parcel shall not exceed the maximum rate authorized in the order of the Local Government issued under section five."

We have made a corresponding alteration in section five.

We have struck out the latter portion of section thirty-three, which appears unnecessary, as being already provided in the Criminal Procedure Code.

We have omitted section thirty-six, which provided for the settlement of differences between promoters and local authorities or other persons affected by the works undertaken for the construction of tramways. The Advocate-General has expressed an opinion that the section in the form in which it is introduced in the Bill would be ultra vires, as ousting the jurisdiction of the High Court. We have considered whether it would be advisable to alter the form of the section so as to make it permissive only, but have decided that in this form it would not have the practical effect desired, and that it will be better to omit the section altogether from the Bill and leave the question of arbitration to be settled in the agreement which must be entered into between promoters and local authorities.

We have made a slight alteration in the wording of section forty-one (forty in the amended Bill) to extend its provisions to cases in which promoters may, without being absolutely insolvent, yet be unable to maintain and work tramways in such a way as to be to the advantage of the public.

In section forty-two (forty-one in the amended Bill), relating to the purchase of tramways, we have omitted the portion which specified the manner in which the value of the tramway should be calculated, and substituted the following words :—

"And the value to be placed upon the tramway shall be calculated in a manner to be settled in the agreement entered into between the promoters and the local authority and set forth in the said order of the Local Government."

We have made a corresponding alteration in section five to provide that the terms of purchase shall be included in the agreement referred to. We have added the following proviso to section forty-two :—

"Provided that the promoters and the local authority may, with the consent of the Local Government, provide in the said agreement for the sale and purchase of the tramway on the expiration of any shorter periods than those hereinbefore specified.

We have made several other amendments in the wording of some of the sections, and were commend that the Bill as now amended be passed.

CALCUTTA,
The 16th February 1883.

AMENDED BILL.

A Bill to authorize the making and to regulate the working of tramways in Bengal.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to facilitate the construction and to regulate the working of tramways within the territories subject to the Government of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal :

It is enacted as follows :—

Short title and commencement of Act.

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Bengal Tramways Act, 1883." It shall come into force from the date on which it may be published in the Calcutta Gazette with the assent of the Governor-General.

Interpretation.

2. For the purposes of this Act, the terms hereinafter mentioned shall, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, have the meanings hereinafter assigned to them.

"Local authority."

The term "Local authority" shall mean (1) bodies of persons for the time being appointed or elected to conduct the affairs of any municipality under Bengal Act V of 1876, or other law for the time being in force for the purpose of regulating municipalities in Bengal; (2) any Board, Committee, Department or other body or person in whom a road as defined by this Act is vested, or who have the power to maintain or repair such road.

"Area."

The term "Area" in relation to a local authority shall mean the area within the jurisdiction of such local authority.

"Municipality."

The term "Municipality" shall mean any place in which Bengal Act V of 1876, or any other law for the time being in respect of Bengal municipalities, is in force.

"Road."

The term "Road" shall mean any carriage way, being a public thoroughfare, and the carriage way of any bridge forming part of or leading to the same.

"Tramway."

The term "Tramway" shall mean a tramway constructed under this Act.

PART I.

Orders by the Local Government authorizing the construction of Tramways.

By whom orders authorising the construction of tramways may be obtained.

3. An order made by the Local Government authorising the construction of any tramways in any municipality or area may be obtained by—

1st.—The local authority of such municipality or area.

2nd—Any person, persons, corporation or company with the consent of such local authority.

And any such local authority, person, persons, corporation or company shall be deemed to be "promoters" of a tramway, and are in this Act referred to as "the promoters."

When applications for authority to construct tramways may be made.

Where the local authority consists of a body of persons, Board or Committee, no application shall be made to the Local Government for the purpose of authorising the construction of tramways in a municipality or area until a resolution, approving of the intention to make such application, shall be passed at a special meeting of the members constituting the local authority in such municipality or area.

Such special meeting shall not be held unless a month's previous notice of the same and of the purpose thereof has been given in the manner in which notices of meetings of such local authority are usually given, and such notice shall require that all objections to the proposed tramways shall be submitted for the consideration of the local authority before the date fixed for the special meeting.

Such résolution shall not be passed unless two-thirds of the members constituting such local authority are present and vote at such special meeting and a majority of those present and voting concur in the resolution.

Documents to be forwarded with application.

4. At the time of making an application for such order, the promoters shall also forward to the Local Government—

1st.—A memorial signed by the promoters descriptive of the undertaking.

2nd.—A copy of the proceedings and resolution of the special meeting held under the provisions of section three.

3rd.—A copy of the provisional agreement made between the promoters and local authority, where the promoters are not themselves the local authority.

4th.—An estimate of the proposed works, signed by the persons making the same.

5th.—All necessary maps, plans, sections, and drawings of the proposed work.

Local Government to determine on application and objection.

5. The Local Government shall consider the application and may, if it think fit, direct an enquiry as to the propriety of proceeding upon such application, and it shall consider any objection thereto that may be filed on or before such day as it may from time to time appoint.

Local Government may make and publish order.

Where it appears to the Local Government expedient and proper that the application should be granted with or without addition or modification, or subject or not to any restriction or condition, the Local Government may settle and make an order accordingly, and such order shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Form and contents of order.

Every such order shall empower the promoters therein specified to make the tramway upon the gauge and in manner therein described, and shall contain such provisions, fix such maximum rates of fare, and prescribe such penalties for default as (subject to the provisions of this Act) the Local Government according to the nature of the application and the facts and circumstances of each case thinks fit.

Where the promoters are not the local authority, the order shall set forth the agreement made between the promoters and the local authority, and one of the provisions of such agreement shall settle the manner in which the value of the tramway shall be calculated in the event of its purchase by the local authority under sections thirty-nine, forty or forty-one.

Power to revoke, amend or vary order.

6. The Local Government on the application of any promoters empowered by an order to construct a tramway may from time to time revoke, amend or vary such order by further order:

Provided that whenever the promoters are no the local authority, the Local Government shall before passing such order, call upon the loca authority to state any objection it may have tc such application.

Power to authorise joint work.

7. Subject to, and in accordance with the provisions of this Act, the Loca Government may, on a join application, or on two o more separate applications, settle and make ar order empowering two or more local authorities respectively, jointly to construct the whole or separately to construct parts, of a tram way, and jointly or separately to own the whole or parts thereof; and all the provisions o this Act, which relate to the construction o tramways, shall extend and apply to the construction of the whole, and the separate parts of such tramway as last aforesaid; and the form of the order may be adapted according to the circumstances of the case.

Local Government may in certain cases dispense with consent of local authority.

8. Where it is proposed to lay dowr a tramway in two or more areas, and any local author ity having jurisdiction ir any of such areas does not consent thereto, the Local Government may nevertheless make an order authorising the construction of such tramway if it is satisfied after enquiry that two-thirds of the length of such tramway is proposed to be laid in an area or areas, the local authority of which area or areas does consent thereto.

Promoters' powers to cease at expiration of prescribed time.

9. If the promoters empowered by any order under this Act to make a tramway do not, within the period prescribed in such order, complete the tramway and open it for public traffic; or, if the works are not substantially commenced within the latest date prescribed in such order for their commencement; or, if the works, having been commenced, are suspended without a reason sufficient, in the opinion of the Local Government, to warrant such suspension; the powers given by the order to the promoters for constructing such tramway, executing such works, or otherwise in relation thereto, shall cease to be exercised to the extent and in the manner specified in such order.

A notice inserted by the Local Government in the Calcutta Gazette to the effect that a tramway has not been completed and opened for public traffic, or that the works have not been substantially commenced, or that they have been suspended without sufficient reason, shall be conclusive evidence for the purposes of this section of such non-completion, non-commencement or suspension.

Payment of expenses when local authority are promoters.

10. When the local authority of any area are the promoters of any tramway, the expenses incurred by them in constructing and working such tramway under the provisions of this Act, including the expenses preparatory thereto, may be paid out of the funds under the control of such local authority.

11. When the local authority are not the promoters, they may fix and demand from the promoters such rent for the use of roads as may be agreed upon.

Rent for use of road when local authority are not promoters.

12. Any moneys received by any local authority by way of rent or tolls in respect of any tramway constructed and worked under the provisions of this Act may be applied by them to the purposes for which other funds under the control of such local authority may be applied.

Application of rent or tolls.

13. The Local Government may from time to time make, and when made, may revise, modify, annul or add to any rules it may be expedient to make for the purpose of carrying this Act into execution.

Power to make rules.

PART II.

Construction of Tramways.

14. Every tramway shall be constructed and maintained on such gauge and in such manner as may be specified in the order of the Local Government empowering the construction of such tramway, and before the work of construction is begun, the maps, drawings, and specification shewing the proposed construction of such tramway shall be submitted to the local authority and be approved by it, and the cars and carriages intended to run on the tramways shall also be of such construction and furnished with such brakes and other appliances as shall have been approved by such local authority.

Form in which tramways are to be constructed and maintained.

15. The promoters may from time to time, for the purpose of constructing and maintaining any tramways under this Act, open and break up the soil and pavement of any of the roads upon which the construction and maintenance of such tramway has been authorized by the order of the Local Government in that behalf, and therein lay sleepers and rails, and repair, renew, alter or remove the same; and may, for the purposes aforesaid, do in and on such roads all other acts which shall from time to time be necessary for constructing and maintaining their tramways:

Power to break up streets.

Provided that when the powers granted under this section shall be exercised by the promoters, who are not the local authority, such powers shall be exercised subject to the following regulations:—

1st.—They shall give to the local authority notice in writing of their intention to open or break up any such road, specifying the time at which they will begin to do so, and the portion of the road proposed to be opened or broken up. Such notice to be given at least seven days before the commencement of the work.

2nd.—They shall not open or break up or alter the level of any such road, except under the superintendence and to the reasonable satisfaction of the local authority, for which superintendence the promoters shall pay all reasonable expenses, unless the local authority neglect to give such superintendence at the time specified in the notice, or discontinue the same during the work.

3rd.—They shall not, without the consent of the local authority in writing, open or break up at any one time a greater length than a quarter of a mile in any one length and shall leave an interval of at least a quarter of a mile between any two such places at which they may open or break up such road.

4th.—They shall, with all convenient speed, and in all cases within two calendar months at the most, unless the local authority otherwise consent in writing, complete the work for which the said road shall be broken up, and fill in the ground, and make good the surface, and, to the reasonable satisfaction of the local authority, restore the road to as good a condition as that in which it was before it was opened or broken up, and clear away all surplus materials or rubbish occasioned thereby.

5th.—They shall in the meantime, when such road is opened or broken up, cause it to be fenced and watched, and to be properly lighted at night.

6th.—They shall make good all damage done to the gas and water-pipes, sewers, drains, culverts, bridges, and fences whether belonging to the local authority or to private individuals, by the disturbance there of, and shall not cause any interruption in the supply of gas in or through any main or pipe, or the flow of water through any pipe, drain, culvert, bridge or other waterway; if they fail to make such damage good, or to remove such interruption within reasonable time, the local authority may, without prejudice to the penalties payable under section twenty-nine, cause the same to to made good at the promoters' expense.

16. The promoters shall, at their own expense at all times, maintain and keep in good condition and repair, in such manner as the local authority shall direct, the rails of which any of their tramways shall for the time being consist, and so much of any road as lies between the rails of any tramway; and in the case of double lines or turnouts or sidings, the portion of the road between the tramways, and in every case so much of the road as extends eighteen inches beyond the rails of and on each side of any such tramway; and in the course of carrying out repairs, it shall not be necessary to give notice thereof to the local authority.

Promoters to keep the tramway roads in proper repair.

Promoters not to obstruct ordinary traffic.

17. In exercising the powers given to them by the last two preceding sections, the promoters shall arrange their work so as to afford the least possible obstruction to the ordinary traffic of the roads or to the ordinary means of approach to houses situated on either side of the roads, and so as to admit of as free and unrestricted entry at all times into the sewers, drains, culverts, and bridges for the time being in use, as is possible under the circumstances, and also so as to enable proper repairs to be made to water or gas pipes by the direction of the local authority.

Reservation of right of public to use roads.

18. Nothing in this Act, or in any bye-law made under this Act, shall take away or abridge the right of the public to pass along or across every or any part of any road along or across which any tramway is laid, whether on or off the tramway, with carriages not having flange wheels or wheels suitable to run on rails. But the right of the public shall not include the use of any new roadway, embankment or earthwork constructed or acquired for the special and exclusive use of the tramway.

Right of user only.

19. Notwithstanding anything in this Act contained the promoters shall not acquire, or be deemed to acquire, any right other than that of user of any road along or across which they lay any tramway.

PART III.

Working of Tramways.

No tramway to be opened without certificate from Engineer.

20. No tramway shall be opened for public traffic until the same has been inspected and certified by an Engineer or other officer, appointed in that behalf by the Local Government, to be fit for such traffic.

Local authority may lease or take tolls.

21. When a tramway has been completed under the provisions of this Act and certified to be fit to be opened for public traffic under the last preceding section, the local authority or other promoters may, subject to the provisions of this Act, place and run carriages on such tramway and demand and take tolls and charges in respect of the use of such carriages; or may, by lease, to be approved of by the Local Government, demise to any person, persons, corporation or company the right of user by such person, persons, corporation or company of the tramway, and of demanding and taking in respect of the same the tolls and charges authorised; or such authority may leave such tramway open to the public, and may in respect of such user demand and take the tolls and charges authorised.

Carriages how to be worked.

22. The cars and carriages of the promoters on the lines of the tramways shall be worked with such power, animal, mechanical or otherwise, as may be specified in the order issued by the Local Government under section six.

Promoters may use tramway carriages with flange wheels.

23. The promoters may use on their tramways carriages with flange wheels or wheels suitable for running on the prescribed form of rail, and, subject to the provisions of this Act, they shall have the exclusive use of their tramways for carriages with flange wheels, or other wheels suitable for the said form of rail.

Promoters may fix and demand fares.

24. The promoters shall have power from time to time to fix the rates of fares for carrying passengers and goods in the said cars or carriages, and may demand and take the same for every passenger travelling upon any of their tramways, or for the carriage of goods by their tramways:

Provided that the rate of fare for each person or parcel shall not exceed the maximum rates authorized in the order of the Local Government issued under section five.

Printed list of fares, &c., to be placed in carriages.

25. A printed list in English and the vernacular of the district, of all the fares and charges fixed under the authority of the last preceding section and a printed copy in the same languages of all bye-laws in force as hereinafter mentioned, shall be exhibited in a conspicuous place inside each of the cars or carriages used by the promoters upon any of their tramways.

Fares how to be paid.

The fares and charges fixed as aforesaid shall be paid to such persons at such places, upon or near to the tramways, and in such manner and under such regulations as the promoters may, by notice to be annexed to the list of fares, from time to time appoint.

Bye-laws by local authority.

26. The members constituting the local authority in a municipality or area in special general meeting may, subject to confirmation thereof by the Local Government, from time to time, make such bye-laws as to the rate of speed, number of passengers, and mode of use of the tramways as the convenience and safety of the public may require, and as are not inconsistent with this Act or any rules framed under section twelve.

The promoters may make certain bye-laws.

27. The promoters may, subject to confirmation as aforesaid, from time to time, make such bye-laws—for preventing disturbances, or the entry of persons suffering from infectious diseases, or the commission of any nuisance in or upon any carriage, or in or against any premises belonging to them; and for regulating the travelling in or upon any carriage belonging to them:

Provided that such bye-laws are not inconsistent with this Act or with any rules or bye-laws framed under sections twelve and twenty-six.

Publication of bye-laws.

28. All rules and bye-laws made under sections thirteen, twenty-six, and twenty-seven shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette, and such rules and bye-laws when so published shall, until repealed or altered, be of the same effect as if they had been inserted in this Act.

PART IV.

Offences.

Penalty for failure of promoters to comply with provisions of this Act.

29. If the promoters, not being the local authority, fail in any respect to comply with the provisions of sections fourteen, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, twenty, and twenty-two of this Act, they shall for every such offence (without prejudice to the enforcement of specific performance of the requirements of this Act, or to any other remedy against them), upon complaint of any person injuriously affected thereby, be liable to a penalty not exceeding two hundred rupees, and to a further penalty not exceeding fifty rupees for each day during which any such failure continues after the first day on which such penalty is incurred.

Penalty for obstructing promoters in the exercise of their power.

30. If any person wilfully obstructs any person acting under the authority of the promoters in the lawful exercise of their powers in setting out or making, laying down, repairing or renewing a tramway, or injures or destroys any mark made for the purpose of setting out the lines of the tramway, he shall for every offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees, and shall also be liable to pay such damages as may be awarded in respect of such injury by any competent court.

Penalty for interfering with tramway.

31. If any person without lawful excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on him) wilfully does any of the following things, namely—interferes with, removes or alters any part of a tramway of the promoters, or of the works connected therewith; does or causes to be done anything in such a manner as to obstruct any carriage using the tramways; or knowingly aids or assists in the doing of such thing, he shall for every such offence be liable (in addition to any proceedings by way of criminal charge or otherwise to which he may be subject) to a penalty not exceeding one hundred rupees.

Penalty for avoiding payment of proper fare.

32. If any person travelling or having travelled in any carriage of the promoters avoids or attempts to avoid payment of his fare, or if any person having paid his fare for a certain distance knowingly and wilfully proceeds in any such carriage beyond such distance and does not pay the additional fare for the additional distance, or attempts to avoid payment thereof, or if any person knowingly and wilfully refuses or neglects on arriving at the point to which he has paid his fare to quit such carriage, every such person shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten rupees.

Servant of promoters may arrest persons avoiding payment of fare.

33. It shall be lawful for any servant of the promoters, to arrest and take to the nearest police-station any person who shall be discovered in committing or attempting to commit any such offence as in the last preceding section mentioned, and who shall refuse to give his name and residence, and is unknown to such servant and the police officer in charge of the said police-station, on receiving a complaint that an offence under this Act has been committed, shall, if such person still persists in refusing to give his name and residence, cause the said person to be taken before a Magistrate with the least possible delay not exceeding twenty-four hours.

Carriage of dangerous or offensive goods.

34. No person shall be entitled to carry or to require to be carried on any tramway any goods which may be of a dangerous or offensive nature, and if any person send by any tramway any such goods without distinctly marking their nature on the outside of the package containing the same, or otherwise giving notice in writing to the book-keeper or other servant of the promoters with whom the same are left at the time of such sending, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees for every such offence, and it shall be lawful for the promoters to refuse to accept or carry any parcel that they may suspect to contain goods of a dangerous or offensive nature, or to require the same to be opened to ascertain the fact.

Penalty for breach of bye-laws.

35. Any person offending against any bye-law made under the provisions of this Act shall forfeit for every offence any sum not exceeding twenty rupees to be imposed in such bye-laws as a penalty for such offence.

PART V.

Miscellaneous.

Promoters to be responsible for all damages.

36. The promoters shall be answerable for all accidents, damages, and injuries happening through their act or default, or through the act or default of any person in their employment by reason or in consequence of any of their works or carriages, and in all cases where the promoters are not the local authority they shall save harmless the local authorities and their respective officers and servants from all damages and costs in respect of such accidents, damages, and injuries.

Power for the local authority or police to regulate traffic on roads.

37. Nothing in this Act shall limit the powers of the local authority or the police to regulate the passage of any traffic along or across any road along or across which any tramways are laid down, and such local authority or police may exercise their authority as well on as off the tramway, and with respect as well to the traffic of the promoters as to the traffic of other persons.

The local authority shall not be liable to pay to the promoters any compensation for loss of traffic occasioned by the reasonable exercise of such authority.

Reservation of power over roads.

38. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to prevent the local authority or any corporate body or persons in the exercise of the powers conferred upon them under any law for the time being in force from opening, breaking up, widening, altering, diverting or improving any of the roads, bridges, drains or culverts traversed by the tramways for the purposes for which they may now lawfully open, break up, widen, alter, divert or improve the same: Provided—

(1) that they shall cause as little detriment or inconvenience to the promoters as circumstances admit;

(2) that they may (if absolutely necessary, but not otherwise) order the temporary stoppage of traffic on the tramways or any of them on giving twenty-four hours' previous notice in writing to the promoters;

(3) that before they commence any work, whereby the traffic on the tramway will be interrupted, they shall (except in cases of urgency, in which cases no notice shall be necessary) give to the promoters notice of their intention to commence such work, specifying the time at which they will begin to do so; such notice to be given eighteen hours at least before the commencement of the work;

(4) that in the event of their so interfering with or stopping the running of any tramway under this section, an abatement proportioned to the length of road over which and time during which running is stopped, shall be made from the rent (if any) reserved and payable by the promoters;

(5) that any alteration of the position of any of the tramways, or the making good of any injury or damage that may be occasioned thereto by reason of such widening, alteration or improvement, shall be executed by the promoters at the expense of the local authority.

Discontinuance of Tramways.

Tramways to be removed in certain cases.

39. If at any time after the opening of any tramway for traffic, the promoters discontinue the working of such tramway or of any part thereof for the space of three calendar months (such discontinuance not being occasioned by circumstances beyond the control of such promoters, for which purpose the want of sufficient funds shall not be considered a circumstance beyond their control), and such discontinuance is proved to the satisfaction of the Local Government, the Local Government if it think fit may by order declare that the powers of the promoters in respect of such tramway or the part thereof so discontinued, shall from the date of such order be at an end, and thereupon the said powers of the promoters shall cease, and determine unless the same are purchased by the local authority in manner by this Act provided. Where such order has been made the engineer or other officer appointed on that behalf by the Local Government may at any time after the expiration of two months from the date of such order remove the tramway or part of the tramway so discontinued, and the promoters shall pay to such engineer or officer the cost of such removal and of the making good of the road by such engineer or officer. Such cost to be certified by such engineer or officer whose certificate shall be final and conclusive. And if the promoters fail to pay the amount so certified within one calendar month after delivery to them of such certificate or a copy thereof, such engineer or officer may without any previous notice to the promoters (but without prejudice to any other remedy which he may have for the recovery of the amount) sell and dispose of the materials of the tramway or part of the tramway removed, either by public auction or private sale, and for such sum or sums and to such person or persons as such engineer or officer may think fit; and may out of the proceeds of such sale make and reimburse himself the amount of cost certified as aforesaid and of the costs of sale, and the balance (if any) of the proceeds of the sale shall be paid over by the said engineer or officer to the promoters.

Inability of Promoters.

Proceedings in case of inability of promoters.

40. If at any time after the opening of any tramway it appears to the local authority, or to the Magistrate of the district in which such tramway is situate, that the promoters of such tramway are insolvents, or that they are unable to maintain such tramway, or work the same with advantage to the public, the Local Government, upon a representation to that effect made by such Magistrate or local authority, may direct an enquiry by a referee into the truth of the representation, and if the referee shall find that the promoters are such insolvents or that they are unable to maintain such tramway or work the same with advantage to the public, the Local Government may by order, declare that the powers of the promoters shall at the expiration of six calendar months from the making of the order, be at an end, and the powers of the promoters shall cease and determine at the expiration of the said period unless the same are purchased by the local authority in manner by this Act provided, and thereupon the engineer or other officer appointed on that behalf by the Local Government may remove the tramway in like manner, and subject to the same provisions as to the payment of the costs of such removal, and to the same remedy for the recovery of such costs in every respect as in cases of removal under the next preceding section.

Purchase of Tramways.

Local authority to have right of purchasing tramway after 21 years.

41. The local authority shall have the right of purchasing the tramway with the plant, buildings, stores, rolling stock, and everything connected therewith upon the expiration of twenty-one years from the date of the order of the Local Government authorising the construction of such tramway upon declaring its intention so to do in writing not less than six months before the expiration of the said twenty-one years, and shall have a renewed right of purchase at the end of every seven years after the expiration of the said twenty-one years upon similar notice being given, and the value to be placed upon the tramway shall be calculated in a manner to be settled in the agreement entered into between the promoters and the said local authority and set forth in the order of the Local Government:

Provided that the promoters and the local authority may, with the consent of the Local Government, provide in the said agreement for the sale and purchase of the tramway on the expiration of any shorter periods than those hereinbefore specified.

C. H. REILY,

Offg. Asst. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Legislative Dept.

THE following report of the Select Committee, together with the Bill as amended by them, is, by order of the President, published for general information :—

WE, the members of the Select Committee appointed to report upon the Bill for the general control of Coolies in Hill Municipalities, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill.

We are of opinion that it is unnecessary to leave it to the discretion of the Executive Government to define the class of persons to be brought within the provisions of the proposed law as coolies, nor do we consider it necessary to provide for the extension of the law to any class of municipalities.

We have restricted the operation of it to the control of porters and dandeewallahs in the Darjeeling and Kurseong Municipalities, and we have modified the title accordingly. We are not aware that any necessity for legislation of this kind is felt elsewhere than at Darjeeling and Kurseong, or in regard of servants and labourers of any other classes than those which we have specified.

We have considered whether the Bill should be confined to coolies engaged for the job or for the day, or whether it should include coolies hired for a longer period, or as monthly servants. We understood that much of the inconvenience which the Bill is intended to remedy arises from the misconduct of servants of this latter class; and we have accordingly made the Bill applicable to them. But we do not propose that they should come under its penal sections, and we have only required them to be registered and licensed, and have provided that their licenses may be withdrawn if they desert their employment or are guilty of gross misconduct. A similar rule is in force in many towns, and we understand that in the Municipality of Simla all servants without exception are required to be registered and to take out licenses for which fees are charged.

The Bill therefore, as we have now recast it, applies to coolies of two different classes. We require both classes to be registered and licensed, but in other respects we draw a marked distinction between the two. Coolies who work as monthly servants or engage themselves for periods exceeding twenty-four hours are liable to have their licenses withdrawn by order of the Chairman of the Municipality in case of misbehaviour. If they still wish to continue working, they must do so as coolies of the other class. This class consists of coolies who work by the job or by the day, and we consider that for them more stringent regulations are necessary. We require such a coolie to wear a badge; to carry a table of rates; to accept hire when called upon to do so; to limit his demand of payment to the rates authorized by the Municipal Commissioners, and to be sober and civil in his behaviour while employed or waiting for employment. We do not allow the license of such a cooly to be cancelled by the Municipal Commissioners, but only on his conviction before the Magistrate of an offence made punishable by the Act or by the general law.

We have made some minor changes in the Bill. In section 7 (now section 5), we have extended the period allowed from three to twenty-four hours. We have omitted the section requiring a registered coolie to give notice of his change of residence, and also the section which imposes an increased penalty for second and subsequent offences. We think that these provisions can be dispensed with, and we desire to make the Bill as simple and as lenient as is compatible with the attainment of the object for which it was introduced. We have omitted the section which declares the registrar's book or table of distances to be conclusive evidence of all distances therein entered, as we think it doubtful whether such a section might not be held to conflict with the Indian Evidence Act. We have also struck out the section giving the Municipal Commissioners power to make bye-laws under the Act, as we believe that the Bill as it stands includes all provisions which are necessary.

The changes which we have made are all in the direction of limiting the application of the Bill as originally drafted, and we therefore think that the republication of the Bill is not necessary. We recommend that the Bill be passed as now amended.

AMENDED BILL.

A Bill for the registration and control of Porters and Dandeewallas in the Darjeeling and Kurseong Municipalities.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the registration and control of porters and dandeewallas in the Darjeeling and Kurseong Municipalities: It is enacted as follows:—

Interpretation.

1. In this Act the term "Coolie" shall be limited to porters and to dandeewallas, and other persons employed in carrying, drawing or propelling any vehicle.

The term "Commissioners" means the Commissioners of the Municipalities of Darjeeling or Kurseong constituted under the Bengal Act, V of 1876, or other Act for the time being in force for the regulation of Municipalities.

Commencement.

2. This Act shall come into force in the Darjeeling and Kurseong Municipalities respectively when extended thereto by an order of the Lieutenant-Governor published in the Calcutta Gazette. Such order shall specify the date on which this Act shall commence in such Municipality, and shall operate to extend the provisions of this Act to such Municipality according to its tenor.

The Lieutenant-Governor may at any time cancel or modify an order made under this section.

Publication of order.

3. The Commissioners shall, within fifteen days of such publication, cause a copy of the order to be deposited in the office of the Commissioners, and a copy shall be posted up in a conspicuous position at such office, and in such other places as the Commissioners may direct; and a public proclamation of such order shall be made throughout such Municipality by beat of drum.

Commissioners to appoint a registering officer.

4. The Commissioners at a meeting shall, for the purposes of this Act, appoint a registering officer.

Licensing and registration of coolies.

5. Every coolie personally working for gain within the limits of such Municipality shall take out a license and shall thereupon be registered by the registering officer appointed under the last preceding section, who shall keep a register in which he shall enter the name and residence of every such coolie, and every person applying shall at all reasonable times be furnished with a certified copy of such particulars on payment of a fee of eight annas:

Provided always that the provisions of this section shall not apply to any coolie who is hired beyond the limits of the Municipality for a period of time not exceeding twenty-four hours, but who performs a portion of the work imposed by such hiring within such limits.

Period of license.

6. The year of registration shall commence on the first day of January of each year, and every license granted on any date within that year shall subject to the provisions of sections 12 and 20 remain in force to the thirty-first day of December next following and no longer.

Details of license.

7. Every license granted by the registering officer shall specify the number of the license, and the name and place of abode, and age of the coolie to whom such license is granted, and shall further state whether such coolie is licensed to work as—

(a) a monthly or other servant for a fixed period of time exceeding twenty-four hours, or

(b) a coolie empowered to work by the job, or for any period of time not exceeding twenty-four hours.

Every license shall bear date on the day on which the same shall be granted.

Licensed coolie to wear badge.

8. The registering officer shall, at the time of granting the license to any coolie empowered to work by the job, or for any period of time not exceeding twenty-four hours, deliver to him a metal badge, upon which shall be marked or engraved a number corresponding with the number of such license. Every coolie to whom such badge is delivered shall at all times, while waiting for hire, or during the performance of his duties as such coolie, or while attending before any Magistrate, carry such badge exposed to view.

Penalty for omitting to wear badge.

9. Whenever any coolie empowered to work by the job, or for any period not exceeding twenty-four hours shall omit to wear such badge exposed to view as aforesaid, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five rupees.

Rates of hire to be made and published.

10 The Commissioners at a meeting may, with the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor, make and publish in such manner as they think fit an order specifying the rates of hire in respect of all coolies empowered to work by the job, or for any period not exceeding twenty-four hours. Such rates shall include rates calculated according to distance as well as rates calculated according to time and such rates may from time to time be varied with the like sanction:

Provided that the list of rates calculated according to distance shall include rates in respect of such places situate beyond the limits of the Municipality as may from time to time be determined upon by the Commissioners.

A table of the rates of hire legibly written or printed in the English, Urdu, and Bengali languages shall be affixed in some conspicuous place within the limits of the Municipality, and a copy of the same, or such portion thereof as may be deemed sufficient, shall be given to every coolie at the time of registration.

Every order made under this section shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Coolie entitled to payment according to rates fixed, subject to special agreements for lower rates.

11. Every such coolie shall be entitled to receive payment for his hiring in accordance with the rates specified in the order mentioned in the last preceding section:

Provided that nothing in this Act contained shall prevent any such coolie from being bound by any contract into which he may enter to receive payment at a rate lower than that fixed by such order.

Registration of coolies when engaged as monthly servants.

12. Any coolie engaged as a monthly servant, or for some other fixed period of time exceeding twenty-four hours, who shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Chairman of the Commissioners, to have deserted from such employment without reasonable cause during the period of his engagement; or to have been guilty of gross misconduct during such period of time;

or to have wrongfully prevented or endeavoured to prevent any other coolie from accepting employment, shall be liable to have his license withdrawn or suspended for such period as the Chairman may direct.

Penalty for certain offences committed by registered coolies.

13. Every coolie empowered to work by the job, or for any period not exceeding twenty-four hours, who shall, without reasonable excuse, refuse to accept hire within the limits of such Municipality at the rate fixed for such hiring; or desert from his hiring before being discharged therefrom;

or demand more than the proper rate fixed for such hiring; or be drunk or make use of insulting or abusive language during the period of, or while waiting for, such hiring; or wrongfully prevent, or endeavour to prevent, any other coolie from being hired;

or fail to produce his table of rates when required to do so, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten rupees, or in default of payment to imprisonment not exceeding one month.

Penalty for being unlicensed or lending license to another.

14. Any coolie who shall work as such without being duly registered and licensed, and any coolie who, having a license in force, shall transfer or lend the same, or allow the same to be used by any other person, shall be liable upon conviction in respect of any one of such offences, to a penalty not exceeding ten rupees, or in default of payment to imprisonment not exceeding one month.

Coolie entitled to have new badge on loss or obliteration of former one.

15. Whenever the writing on any badge shall become obliterated or defaced, so that the same shall not be distinctly legible, and also whenever any badge shall be proved, to the satisfaction of the registering officer, to have been lost or mislaid, the coolie to whom the license relating to any such badge shall have been granted, shall deliver such badge (if he shall have the same in his possession), and shall produce such license to the registering officer, and such coolie shall then be entitled to have a new badge delivered to him upon payment of such sum of money, not exceeding one rupee, as the registering officer shall from time to time appoint.

Penalty for neglecting to deliver up badge, lending badge, &c.

16. Upon the expiration or other determination of any license granted to a coolie under this Act, such coolie shall deliver such license, and in the case of a coolie empowered to work by the job, or for any period of time not exceeding twenty-four hours, the badge relating thereto, to the said registering officer; and every such coolie who, after such expiration or determination as aforesaid, shall wilfully neglect for one week to deliver the same to the said officer; and also every coolie who shall use, or wear, or detain any badge which shall have ceased to be in force, or other than such as shall have been delivered to him under the provisions of this Act, and every coolie to whom any badge shall have been delivered as aforesaid, who shall lend such badge to any other person, and every person who shall wear or use the badge of any other coolie, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty of five rupees, or in default of payment to imprisonment not exceeding one week It shall be lawful for the registering officer, or for any person employed by him for that purpose under the authority obtained as prescribed by section twenty-three of this Act, to prosecute any coolie so neglecting to deliver up his license or badge at any period, within twelve calendar months, after the expiration of the license.

Penalty for using or having a counterfeit badge.

17. Every coolie or other person who shall, for the purpose of deception, use or wear, or have any badge resembling any badge granted under the authority of this Act, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten rupees, or in default of payment to imprisonment, not exceeding one month. And it shall be lawful for any police officer, or any person employed for that purp se by the registering officer, to seize and take away any such badge, or any badge used for the purpose of deception as aforesaid, wheresoever the same may be found, and to deliver the same to the registering officer.

Penalty for not depositing lost or unclaimed property.

18. Every coolie empowered to work by the job, or for any period of time not exceeding twenty-four hours, who shall be in possession of any lost or unclaimed property, shall within twenty-four hours carry such property, if not sooner claimed by the owner thereof, to the nearest police-station, and shall there deposit and leave the same with the sub-inspector or other officer on duty, and any such coolie making default herein, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five rupees, or in default of payment to imprisonment, not exceeding one week.

Conviction to be endorsed on coolie's license; Penalty for failing to produce.

19. Whenever any coolie shall be summoned to appear before any Magistrate to answer any charge preferred against him under this Act, he shall carry with him his license, and produce the same if required so to do; and any coolie who shall on such requisition fail to produce such license, shall for every such offence be liable to a fine not exceeding five rupees. It shall be lawful for any Magistrate, on conviction of any coolie of any offence under this Act, to endorse on such license the nature of the offence, the date of the conviction, and the penalty inflicted.

Revocation or suspension of coolie's license on his conviction of any offence.

20. It shall be lawful for any Magistrate before whom any coolie shall be convicted of any offence, whether under this Act or under any other law in force, to revoke the license of such coolie, or to suspend the same for such time as the Magistrate shall think proper, and for that purpose to require the coolie, or any other person in whose possession such license and the badge (if any) thereto belonging shall then be, to deliver up the same; and every coolie or other person who, being so required, shall refuse or neglect to deliver up such license and such badge, or either of them, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten rupees, so often as he shall be so required and refuse or neglect as aforesaid: and the Magistrate shall immediately send every license and every badge delivered up to him under this section to the registering officer, who shall cancel such license if it has been revoked by the Magistrate, or, if it has been suspended, shall, at the end of the time for which it shall have been suspended, re-deliver such license with the badge (if it shall have come into the possession of the registering officer) to the coolie to whom it was granted.

Penalty for refusing to pay legal fare.

21. If any person who shall have hired any coolie shall refuse to pay such coolie, or any authorized agent on his behalf, the proper sum payable for such hiring, it shall be lawful for any Magistrate to order payment of such sum and also such compensation as shall seem reasonable, and in default of payment such sum and compensation may be recovered in the same way as fines are recoverable under any Act for the time being in force for the regulation of Municipalities.

Jurisdiction.

22. Offences punishable under this Act, shall be triable by any Magistrate having jurisdiction in the place where the offence is committed, but such Magistrate shall be subject to the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure as to the amount of fine or imprisonment he may inflict:

Provided that the provisions of this section shall not apply to section twelve of this Act.

Disposal of fines.

23. All penalties and fines to be levied under this Act shall be placed to the credit of the Municipal Fund.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 9th February, 1883, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. III OF 1883.

An Act to repeal Act XXVII of 1854.

Preamble.

WHEREAS Act XXVII of 1854 (to amend the law relating to the Názim of Bengal) provides for the service and execution of processes within the precincts of the palace of the Názim at Murshidábád, through the Superintendent of the affairs of the Nizámat, or other officer discharging like functions;

And whereas by an indenture dated the first day of November, 1880, and made between His Highness Sayyad Mansúr Alí, Nawáb Názim of Bengal, of the first part, the Secretary of State for India in Council of the second part, and certain other persons of the third part, the Nawáb Názim of Bengal has, for certain valuable considerations in the indenture mentioned, relinquished and retired from the Nizámat and Súbahdárí of Bengal, Bihár and Orissa, and his position as Názim and Súbahdár of Bengal, Bihár and Orissa, and his right as Nawáb Názim for the time being to the authority, dignities, stipend, pay, allowances, properties, privileges and rights thereof, or in any wise thereunto annexed or appertaining or therewith enjoyed, and all right and title to interfere or intermeddle hereafter in any way, directly or indirectly, with anything concerning the said Nizámat and Súbahdári;

And whereas, in consequence of the arrangements made by the said indenture, the office of Superintendent of the affairs of the Nizámat has been abolished, and there will in future be no officer discharging the like functions, and it is therefore expedient to repeal Act XXVII of 1854; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Repeal of Act XXVII of 1854.

1. Act XXVII of 1854 is repealed.

R. J. CROSTHWAITE,
Addl. Secy. to the Govt. of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of His Excellency the Governor General on the 16th February, 1883, and is hereby promulgated for general information :—

ACT No. IV OF 1883.

An Act to amend the Indian Railway Act, 1879.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Indian Railway Act, 1879, in manner hereinafter appearing; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title. Commencement.

1. This Act may be called the Indian Railway Act, 1883; and it shall come into force at once.

New sections substituted for section 5 of Act IV of 1879.

2. For section five of the said Act the following sections shall be substituted, namely :—

Railway when to be opened.

"5. A Railway, or portion or extension of, or addition to, a Railway, shall not be opened for the public conveyance of passengers until the Railway Administration has given to the Governor General in Council notice in writing of the intention of opening the same, and until the Governor General in Council has by order sanctioned the opening of the same.

Governor General in Council may appoint Inspecting-officers.

"5A. The Governor General in Council may from time to time appoint, by name or by virtue of their office, officers to be Inspecting-officers under this Act.

Sanction not to be given until after report by Inspecting-officer.

"5B. (1) The sanction referred to in section five shall not be given until an officer appointed under section 5A has, after inspection of the Railway, portion, extension or addition, as the case may be, reported to the Governor General in Council that in his opinion the opening of the same would not be attended with danger to the public using it.

"(2) Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, the Governor General in Council may, in any particular case or in any particular class of cases, by special order, confer on any officer appointed under section 5A power to sanction the opening of a Railway, portion, extension or addition, if in the officer's opinion the opening of the same will not be attended with danger to the public using it.

"(3) In such case it shall not be necessary to make the report required by sub-section (1); but the Governor General in Council may by order cancel the sanction given under sub-section (2), or direct that the sanction shall be subject to such conditions as he thinks fit.

"(4) The sanction given under this section may be either absolute or subject to such conditions as the Governor General in Council, or the officer appointed under section 5 A, as the case may be, thinks necessary for the safety of the public.

"(5) When sanction for the opening of any Railway, or portion or extension of, or addition to, any Railway is given subject to conditions, and the Railway Administration fails or neglects to fulfil, or comply with, those conditions, the sanction shall on the failure or neglect forthwith be deemed to be void, and the Railway, or portion, or extension, or addition, as the case may be, shall not be used unless and until sanction is again obtained under this section for the opening thereof.

When alterations affecting safety of passengers are made in Railway, sanction to be again obtained for opening.

"5C. If, after a Railway has been opened as hereinbefore provided, any portion of it is so altered by the Railway Administration as to cause danger to, or affect the safety of, passengers carried thereon, the portion so altered shall not be used for the public conveyance of passengers, unless and until sanction is obtained, in accordance with the provisions of section 5B, for the opening of it.

Powers of Inspector of Railways.

"5D. (1) Every officer appointed under section 5A shall, for the purpose of the inspection, be deemed to be a public servant within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code, and XLV of 1860 shall, subject to the control of the Governor General in Council, have the following powers, namely :—

"(a) he may enter on and inspect any Railway or portion thereof which has been opened for the public conveyance of passengers, or any rolling-stock used thereon;

"(b) he may, by an order in writing under his hand, require the attendance of any Railway-servant whom he thinks fit to call before him and examine for the said purpose, and may require any such servant to answer, or furnish returns regarding, such inquiries for the said purpose as he thinks fit to make;

"(c) he may require and enforce the production of all books, papers and documents belonging to or in the possession of any Railway Administration which in his opinion are necessary for the said purpose.

"(2) Every Railway Administration whose Railway or rolling-stock is being inspected under this Act shall afford all reasonable facilities for making the inspection to the officer making it.

Governor General in Council empowered to close Railway.

"5E. When, after inspecting any Railway or portion of a Railway, or any rolling-stock used thereon, any officer appointed under section 5A reports to the Governor General in Council that in his opinion the use of the Railway or portion or of any specified rolling-stock will be attended with danger to the public using it, the Governor General in Council may, by order, direct that the Railway or portion be closed for the public conveyance of passengers, or that the rolling-stock so specified shall no longer be used, as the case may be.

Re-opening of Railway.

"5F. (1) When a Railway or portion of a Railway has been closed under section 5E, it shall not be re-opened for the public conveyance of passengers unless and until it has been inspected, and its opening sanctioned, in accordance with the provisions of section 5B.

"(2) When the Governor General in Council has directed under section 5E that any rolling-stock shall not be used, the rolling-stock shall not be used unless and until an officer appointed under section 5A reports that it is fit for use and the Governor General in Council sanctions its use."

Amendment of, and addition to, section 8.

3. In section eight of the said Act, in clause (d), the word "and" shall be omitted, and after clause (d) the following clause shall be, and be deemed to have always been, inserted:—

"(dd) for regulating the conduct of the Railway-servants, and".

New section to be substituted for section 21 of Act IV of 1879.

4. For section twenty-one of the said Act the following section shall be substituted:—

Penalty for opening or re-opening Railway in contravention of sections 5 and 5F, and keeping open after order under section 5E.

"21. Any Railway Administration opening or using, in contravention of section five, section 5B, or section 5C, any Railway, or any portion or extension of, or addition to, a Railway, or keeping, in contravention of an order of the Governor General in Council under section 5E, any Railway or portion thereof open, or re-opening, in contravention of section 5F, sub-section (1), any Railway or portion thereof, or using, in contravention of section 5F, sub-section (2), any rolling-stock, shall forfeit to Government the sum of one thousand rupees for every day during which the Railway, portion, extension or addition remains open or is used in contravention of any of those sections or of the order of the Governor General in Council, as the case may be, or during which the rolling-stock is so used."

PART VI.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 2nd February, 1883 :—

No. 3 OF 1883.

A Bill to authorise the Universities of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay to grant certain honorary degrees.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the granting of honorary degrees, and to give to the Universities at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay the power of granting the degree of Doctor of Laws to persons who have not undergone a previous examination;

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Repeal of Act XXI of 1875.

1. Act No. XXI of 1875 (an Act to authorize the University at Calcutta to grant honorary degrees) is repealed.

Power to confer honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

2. If the Vice-Chancellor and not less than four of the other members of the Syndicate for the time being of any of the Universities at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay recommend that an honorary degree be conferred on any person, on the ground that he is, in their opinion, by reason of eminent position and attainments, a fit and proper person to receive such a degree, and if the Chancellor of the respective University confirms the recommendation, the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor and Fellows for the time being of the University may confer on that person the degree of Doctor of Laws, without requiring him to undergo any examination.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

BY Acts II, XXII and XXVII of 1857, by which the Universities of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras were respectively established and incorporated, power is given to grant degrees only after examination, and Act XLVII of 1860 only extends the number and description of degrees which can be conferred, but leaves the necessity of a previous examination untouched. No Act giving power to grant honorary degrees was passed until 1875, when an Act was passed to enable the Calcutta University to confer honorary degrees. That Act enables the University to grant any honorary degree, but it is thought desirable to confine the power to the grant of the degree of Doctor of Laws, in accordance with the ordinary practice of the Universities in England. Madras and Bombay have never had power to grant honorary degrees. It is now proposed to place the Universities at all the three Presidency-towns on the same footing with regard to these degrees.

2. With this view section 1 of the proposed Bill repeals Act XXI of 1875. By the Act establishing the Universities, the power to confer degrees is granted to the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor and Fellows, in whom, therefore, the power to grant honorary degrees is also vested by section 2 of the Bill. An honorary degree is not, however, to be granted to any person unless the Vice-Chancellor and not less than four of the other members of the Syndicate recommend the grant and the Chancellor confirms the recommendation.

AMENDMENT OF THE PORT IMPROVEMENT ACT.

THE HON. MR. REYNOLDS moved that the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend Act V of 1870 be taken into consideration in order to the settlement of the clauses of the Bill.

He said that since he gave notice at the last meeting of the Council of his intention to bring forward this motion to-day three memorials against the Bill had been presented to the Council and circulated to Hon. Members. Of these one was from Messrs. Carritt and Company and other tea brokers, another was from the British Indian Association, and the third from some 200 persons who described themselves as land owners and traders in Calcutta. He should be the last person to attempt to dissuade the Council from giving the fullest consideration to any expression of public opinion on this or any other question; but he thought, he might say, he would have had no difficulty in getting twice the number of signatures to a memorial in favour of the Bill if he had thought it necessary to do so. He would therefore ask the Council not to count the number of signatures to the memorials before them, but to weigh the argument and statements advanced in them. He would first take the memorial of Messrs. Carritt and others, all of whom were tea-brokers. These gentlemen performed the useful and necessary function of intermediate agents between the producers and the purchasers of tea. He admitted that the Port Commissioners in their proposal for the construction of a tea warehouse had not specially had the interests of tea-brokers in view, but rather the interests of the growers and consumers of tea. He would even go further and admit that if this Bill could by any possibility injure any one it might be those brokers who had godowns of their own for the storage of tea. He had been told that this was the case with Messrs. Moran and Messrs. Thomas, and he had also been told (though in this he might have been misinformed) that this was not the case with the other firms who had signed the memorial. But, however that might be, the argument put forward by these gentlemen was a perfectly straightforward one, and from their point of view a perfectly justifiable one. It appeared to him that their remark about what they called vested rights was somewhat out of place. He could not admit that the fact of the possession of a godown by one person gave the owner a vested right to prevent others from having godowns. But the argument in the memorial was simply this: "Do not force this Bill because it will be injurious to our interests." He did not believe that this Bill would have any such injurious effect as was alleged; but, under the circumstances, he would ask the Council dispassionately to weigh the two sides of the question. On the one side there was a great public improvement and convenience, and on the other side they had an objection from a handful of monopolists, who thought that this public improvement would interfere with the profits which they at present enjoyed. He did not mean to use the word monopolists in any invidious or offensive sense, but he believed it was the fact that these firms practically enjoyed a monopoly of the tea-broking business in Calcutta, and it was certainly the fact that the signatures to this memorial could be counted on the fingers of one hand. The other two memorials he would take together, because they were substantially and fundamentally the same. The first remark he had to make with reference to these memorials was that the greater part of them was really outside the four corners of the Bill before the Council. He had already explained, and he found he must explain again, that this was not a Bill to enable the Port Commissioners to erect a tea warehouse. The Port Commissioners were quite competent under the law as it stood to build a tea warehouse, and they had no necessity to come to the legislature to enable them to do that. The Bill was intended to give them power to provide accommodation for the sampling and selling of tea which they did not possess at present in a warehouse which they already had power to construct. He would refer again to this part of the arguments of the memorialists, but he would remark here that the matter was really outside the question before the Council. Then there was the question of the Strand Bank lands and the alleged promise given by Lord Dalhousie in 1853. That again was irrelevant to the question before the Council, and it was fully considered and discussed and decided a few months ago when the Port Commissioners made an application for permission to erect warehouses at Juggernath Ghât. This being so, he thought it was hardly reasonable that a question which had been so recently discussed and decided should be revived in connection with a Bill with which it had really nothing to do. Lord Dalhousie only said that the erection of elevated buildings on the Strand Bank was not then contemplated, and it was forcing language to contend that that was an absolute pledge that no Government should at any time for all eternity erect or permit to be erected buildings of such a nature. Great changes had taken place within the last 30 years, and many things which were not contemplated under Lord Dalhousie were not only contemplated but carried out under Lord Ripon. There was another remark which he must make with reference to this part of the question. It appeared to be assumed that the tea warehouse was to be erected on the Strand Bank land which the Port Commissioners rented from the Government. He wished to say that that was not the case. The Port Commissioners paid about Rs. 38,000 for the Strand Bank lands which were rented from the Government, and they had expended large sums of money and made large improvements upon those lands, and had no doubt made a profit from them. But it was not proposed to erect the tea warehouse upon any part of those lands, but on the Armenian Ghât site, upon lands which had been made over by the Government to the Railway Company, and which were purchased from the Company by the Port Commissioners at a cost of more than four lakhs of rupees; and he might almost say that it would be inequitable if the Government, after allowing the Port Commissioners to purchase these lands for the express purpose of erecting a tea warehouse, were now to turn round and say to them that they would not allow them to erect this warehouse.

But the main argument of these two memorials undoubtedly was not merely that this Bill ought not to pass, but that the Port Commissioners ought not to erect a tea warehouse at all. As to what was said about interference with private capital, he thought it was rather late in the day to bring forward such a plea. There was not a single improvement which the Port Commissioners had carried out within the last 12 years on the river bank, which had not involved an interference with private capital. When the Port Commissioners built jetties they interfered with the owners of cargo-boats. When they constructed a tramway they interfered with the owners of hackeries. These acts of interference with private capital had been carried out to the immense advantage and improvement of the port. With regard to the tea warehouse he was fully prepared to meet the memorialists on their own ground, and to assert, in the most forcible language, that there could absolutely be no work in which the Port Commissioners could more legitimately employ their enterprise and their capital than in building a warehouse for the storage and shipment of tea. It was their business to provide accommodation for goods landed and to be shipped, and there was no article which more emphatically fell within the category of goods to be shipped than tea did. Almost the whole produce of the tea gardens (at any rate on this side of India) was exported as soon as possible after it was ready for the market. The trade in tea was not a stationary or diminishing one, nor was it small or insignificant. It at present amounted to about 600,000 chests, and each chest containing 80lb., the total came up to nearly 50 millions of pounds per annum. The trade was rapidly increasing, and the consumption of Indian tea in England was extending, and new markets were being opened out in Australia and the United States, and he saw no reason to doubt that the present export might before long be doubled. It was this trade, already large and daily expanding, which the Port Commissioners desired to benefit and accommodate by the warehouse which they proposed to construct. They had no personal interest to serve in the matter. They did not even expect that the warehouse would bring in a large profit to the revenues of the Port Trust. But they had no doubt that it would pay the expenses of its construction and maintenance and leave a small margin of profit, and that at the same time it would be a great advantage and convenience to an important and growing branch of the industry of the country.

THE HON'BLE THE ADVOCATE-GENERAL said that before this motion was put he desired to make a few remarks upon it. The ground upon which the motion was supported had been stated clearly and properly by the Hon. Member in charge of the Bill upon a previous occasion, that the projected measure would be a great public convenience and advantage to the tea trade. The opposition which had been raised contained amongst others the following grounds:—Interference with, or injury to, private rights; injury to the owners or lessees of tea warehouses, and a doubt as to whether the undertaking would be successful in practice. The statement of the Hon. Member to which he had adverted had not been, in Mr. Paul's opinion, directly traversed, namely that it had not been directly stated that the projected measure would not be a great public convenience and advantage to the tea trade. It might be conceded that injury to private interests would result from the passing of the Bill, but he apprehended that the statement and admission of such injury did not carry the question sufficiently far. It must be shewn that, while private interests would be injured, public interests would not be sensibly advanced. Private interests must of necessity yield to public utility and public benefit; and the true principle in legislating on these and cognate matters was the balance of convenience over inconvenience—advantages over disadvantages. When the subject under discussion was viewed in that light, he thought the opposition altogether failed.

He would for a moment glance at the principal facts connected with the question under consideration. It was proposed that godowns or tea warehouses should be built near the jetties or places of shipment. When that had been done the tea chests would be conveyed from the railway terminus direct to such godowns or warehouses, either upon the tramway of the Port Commissioners or in carts. That operation would save double cartage from the railway terminus to private godowns, and from thence to the jetties or places of shipment, so that the cost of transit would be diminished, and the chances of breakage would be lessened. These results were surely advantages to the tea trade and public benefits. He for one would not discourage or hamper private enterprise by public opposition;—on the contrary he was one of those who would afford protection in all matters of private enterprise and native industries, especially in the earlier stages of their development. But in the present case private enterprise could not by any possibility accomplish the contemplated purpose. The land required for the desired object must of necessity be in the vicinity of the jetties, and that land belonged to the Port Commissioners. Now, the view that he had just put forward lay so evidently on the surface of this enquiry as hardly admitted of any doubt, but if support were needed he could go further and refer to the observations which fell from the Hon. Member opposite (Mr. Caithness) at the last meeting, when he said that the Chamber of Commerce had withdrawn their opposition in favour of the proposed scheme.

When the bridge was constructed across the Hooghly, doubtless the interests of boatmen, who had theretofore conveyed passengers and goods across the river, almost without competition, were materially affected and their daily gains suffered considerable diminution. Had these people objected to the construction of the bridge on the score of injury to their private rights savoring of vested interests, would their complaint or opposition have been attended to? Clearly not. The immediate and ready answer would have been that the proposed bridge was a work of great public utility; that it would be a great improvement and the means affording expeditious and cheap transit for passengers and goods, and would protect them against the risks and accidents of the river. Now in point of principle was there any difference between that case and the present one? He certainly held that there was not. The high rates of carriage or freight materially impeded the commercial prosperity of this country. He had reason to believe that if the rates of freight and carriage in regard to various articles of commerce by railway and otherwise were reduced, and put on a level with the ruling rates in other countries, India would be able to compete successfully with those countries, and especially with those countries where the distances were as great as they were in India. For instance if the railway freight or cost of transit of wheat in India were reduced to the rates prevailing in America, and railways extended in various directions, he believed that the production of wheat in India would be considerably increased; and as the cost of production in this country is apparently less than in America, India would, in all probability, be able to feed the whole of England or at all events to contribute to do so to a great extent. The saving in the expense of transport and carriage was an important desideratum in commercial transactions, and as the present Bill professed to contribute to that end, he thought it ought to have the cordial support of the Council.

COLONEL the HON. S. T. TREVOR said that, after the exhaustive statements made by the Hon. Mover of the Bill, and by the Hon. and learned Advocate-General, in favour of this measure, it was perhaps hardly necessary for any one else to speak in favour of it. But considering that the objections which have been raised have been against the principle of the Bill, he would like to state the reasons why he thought the principle of the Bill was quite sound.

He was a thorough advocate for legitimate private enterprise, and should be very sorry to give his vote in that Council to any Bill which he thought would interfere with it. He invited the Council to see how far that could be said with truth about this Bill. The particular enterprise which the Port Commissioners were entrusted to carry on was that of providing the port of Calcutta with suitable appliances and accommodation for facilitating the landing and shipping of goods, and for carrying on export and import business generally. In English ports these facilities were afforded in docks, which were created and managed entirely by private enterprise, that was to say by Joint-Stock Companies and Railway Companies. If any such companies were engaged in any such enterprise in Calcutta, it would be a legitimate complaint to make that the creation of a Port Trust by Government to do what such companies were already doing, was an interference with private enterprise. But no such companies existed here, and it was because there seemed to be no prospect of their soon existing, and because the improvement of the port could no longer be delayed that the Port Trust was created by Government twelve years ago. The question then arose—was there any limit to be put on the powers and operations of the Port Commissioners because it was a quasi-Government institution; or should they be permitted and encouraged to introduce here, to the fullest extent which their means and the circumstances of the port allowed, all those improvements and appliances for facilitating trade which the growing experience of every day shewed it to be advisable to adopt in other ports? In his opinion there should be no such limit. The very reason for the existence of the Port Trust was that all suitable and necessary improvements and appliances should be introduced into the port, and if the Commissioners failed to act up to the requirements of the day, it would be a legitimate ground of complaint to the trading community, and producers generally, that their interests were neglected. In all docks in England, warehouse accommodation was always provided, where the processes of sampling and bulking and selling were carried on. The economy of handling goods was there reduced to a science. The railway carried goods to the very door of the warehouse, and steam or hydraulic cranes then came into play to lift the goods to any part of the building. An incredible amount of work was got through in this way in a very short time, and at very small expense. The capital invested in providing all these facilities was content with comparatively small dividends. Now, if it could be shewn that in Calcutta facilities of this sort existed through the agency of private enterprise, it might be urged with propriety that this Bill should not be passed, and that the Port Trust should not have powers given them which might put them in a position of competition with it. But such facilities did not exist, and it was impossible in the present circumstances of the port that they could exist, unless they were provided by the Port Trust, or in the Port Commissioners' premises; for the Commissioners were in possession of the river bank and the jetties and the railway, the proximity of which to each other was essential to the purpose. What did exist was a vested interest in the old methods by which the business of the port had hitherto been carried on. Those old methods involved expenses and charges which, while they were a profit to agents, were a source of very appreciable loss to a much larger class of persons interested, namely, producers and consumers. It was inevitable that with the increase of trade in crowded centres, such as the business part of Calcutta was now growing, these old methods must give way, and be superseded by new and scientific methods of handling, moving, and disposing of goods, so as to economise time, trouble, and expense. This was not interference with private enterprise. It was progress. And the progress of the past in this direction was nothing to what the progress of the future must be to keep pace with the development of railways in this country. It was a mere accident of the present stage of affairs that the business of providing for the expansion of the port was in the hands of a quasi-Government institution like the Port Trust.

But as time went on, he hoped they would have private enterprise started to supplement their operations, when the present limits of the port were insufficient for the trade of Calcutta. It would be no encouragement to the growth of such private enterprise to stunt and limit the operations of the Port Trust, and so ensure their failure. On the contrary, the greater the success of the Port Trust, the greater would be the encouragement to private enterprise to undertake a share in the future expansion of the accommodation of the port.

His Honor the President said that before putting the motion to the Council he wished to say a few words. Apparently there was no opposition in the Council to this measure, and he could only regret that some of those gentlemen who had opposed it out of doors were not amongst them to state their own views in person. The Government had often been charged in this country with too little regard for public opinion, and with an absolute and arbitrary desire to pass such measures as they wished without any regard to outside views. He wished to show that in this case the Government had been entirely guided by a constitutional regard for law on the one side, and eventually had adopted the views represented by the Chamber of Commerce as to the great advantages which this measure would afford. The first proposal which emanated from the Port Commissioners on the subject was dated more than a year ago, in the time of Sir Ashley Eden. The proposal then was for the provision of accommodation for the purpose of the sampling and selling of tea, and for sanction to the erection of a building for the purpose. It struck the Lieutenant-Governor that under the terms of the law as it stood the power to do so was not available to the Port Commissioners, though they thought it was. He therefore referred the question for the opinion of the learned Advocate-General, Mr. Paul, who distinctly declared that the Port Commissioners had not the power under the law as it stood. On the 22nd February 1882 Mr. Paul recorded an opinion that it was quite clear that the construction of the proposed tea warehouse at Armenian ghat for the purposes contemplated was not authorized by section 39 of Act V of 1870. With this clear exposition of the law Sir Ashley Eden had no resource but to tell the Port Commissioners that they could not carry out their intention while the law remained as it was. However the Port Commissioners were not satisfied with this reference to the law adviser of the Government as to the correct expression of their own intention; and, in their letter of the 8th June, which came before His Honor, they stated their views at considerable length. In deference to the position of the Port Commissioners in this place he thought it right again to submit their second reference to the Government Advocate-General, which office was then filled by Mr. Phillips in the absence of Mr. Paul. Mr. Phillips recorded the same opinion, and nothing was left for the Government but to tell the Port Commissioners that, under the existing state of the law, they could not do what they wanted. But in forwarding their second remonstrance, as he might call it, they brought to His Honor's knowledge a fact that had not before been very certain, namely, that the great majority of the mercantile community in Calcutta were favourably disposed to the action proposed to be taken by the Port Commissioners in this matter; and they forwarded a letter from the Secretary to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, in which that opinion was very clearly recorded. For the satisfaction of the Council he would read a paragraph from that letter bearing upon the point:

Mr. Wood said—

"The Committee now find that there has been a change of opinion on the subject. The result of the reference just made shows that while one-third of those interested adhere to their original opposition to the construction of the warehouse, a majority of two-thirds are in favour of the project."

Further the letter from the Secretary went on to say that—

"The large majority of the members of the Chamber are in accord with their own views in favour of the warehouse, and trust that this will help to strengthen the minds of the Commissioners in pressing their proposal upon the acceptance of the Government. But while the Committee thus lend their support and the support of the Chamber to the scheme, and are confident that by judicious and careful management of details it will realise all that is expected of it, they only do so on the clear understanding that their use should be optional, because they are strongly opposed to anything in the shape of pressure or compulsion that would interfere with the perfect freedom of the firms engaged in the tea industry to conduct their business as they may think fit."

Here, then, the Council had the fact that those who had a right to advise the Government in such a matter as dealing with the commercial interests of the city were entirely in favour of the project which the Port Commissioners wished to bring forward; and the Government, and His Honor for his own part, could have no hesitation in saying to the Port Commissioners that, though they could not do what they wanted under the law as it stood, he was quite ready to support and favourably entertain any proposal which they might make to amend the law, in promotion of the general commercial interests of the town and place. Hence the Bill and hence the proposal now before the Council to pass this Bill into law. It seemed to him quite clear that under it the use of the warehouse would be perfectly optional, and its advantages to the mercantile community would be very great, and therefore he had no hesitation in supporting the motion. Whatever private interests were affected, the case was one where "to the public good private respects must yield."

The motion was agreed to and the Bill was then passed.

BENGAL TRAMWAY.

COLONEL the HON. S. T. TREVOR presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the making and for regulating the working of road Tramways in Bengal. He said he did not propose to carry the Bill to any further stage on the present occasion, and he could hardly say when it would be possible to do so, as it was necessary under the rules of the Legislative Department to submit the Bill, which contained certain penal clauses, to the Government of India before it could be finally passed. The Bill contained the usual penal clauses, which were considered necessary for the protection of the public and the promoters of the undertaking; those clauses were almost identical with the corresponding provisions of the Calcutta Tramways Act, and he did not therefore anticipate any objection being raised against them.

The Council would see from the report of the Select Committee that some changes had been made in the Bill. The word "road," both in the preamble and title, had been struck out. It was considered that the retention of the word would have the effect of restricting the operation of the Act to those Tramways which were constructed on public roads already existing, whereas it might be found necessary to diverge from existing roads or carry them across places where there were no roads. Another alteration which had been made was in section 23. The Bill as drafted fixed the maximum rate of fare at 3 annas for any distance not exceeding three miles; but it was pointed out that those rates would only be suitable for Tramways in towns where there was a large population, and would not be suitable for long lines of Tramways, such as the Himalayan Tramway and others of that description. The section had therefore been amended to meet this state of things. Section 36, which provided for the settlement of differences between promoters and local authorities or other persons affected by the works undertaken for the construction of Tramways, had been struck out altogether. He had mentioned a doubt as to the propriety of retaining this section when he introduced the Bill, and the learned Advocate-General had since expressed the opinion that it ought not to be retained in the Bill, as it ousted the jurisdiction of the High Court. The last clause of the draft Bill, as introduced, fixed the manner in which the calculation of the value of a Tramway, when purchased by a local authority, should be made. The Select Committee had decided on omitting that clause and substituting for it a provision to the effect that the value to be placed on the Tramway should be calculated in such manner as may be settled in the agreement entered into between the promoters and the local authority and set forth in the order of the Local Government. It was considered that a certain limit should be fixed beyond which it was not desirable to postpone the power of purchase. That limit was fixed at 21 years, and beyond that period at intervals of seven years afterwards. It was also thought desirable that the promoters and local authorities should have the power to fix any shorter interval than that. There was one question brought forward with regard to section 3 where it provided that a majority of two-thirds must be present and vote at a special meeting at which a resolution approving of their intention to construct a Tramway was passed, and it was represented that this placed it in the power of a small minority, of a little over one-third, to prevent the establishment of Tramway by staying away or abstaining from voting. But after full consideration of the question it was decided that in a matter so important to the interests of a local authority, it was proper that the proportion of members which the Bill provided should be required to meet for its discussion. Another proposal which was also considered was that in some instances, as in the case of Patna, the local authorities had already met and passed a resolution in favour of the project submitted to them, and it was thought that if the proposal in the Bill was passed, it would be necessary to meet and do the work over again which had already been done, and thus cause unnecessary delay. This matter was also fully considered, and it was decided not to introduce any such proviso. It might be that the agreement which had been entered into would not be legal in the absence of any law on the subject, and it would perhaps really complicate matters instead of advancing them, so the Bill had been allowed to stand as it was. He could not say when the Bill would be brought forward again, because it would be necessary to await the answer of the Government of India on the reference which had been made to them.

THE HON. MR. MACAULAY presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the general control of Coolies in Hill Municipalities, and in doing so he said that he did not propose to make any motion at that stage of the Bill, as the measure contemplated the infliction of penalties which must, under the standing orders, be submitted to the Government of India before the Council passed the Bill. He might mention, however, that the postponement of the Bill would be attended with advantage in one respect. Only that morning a memorial from the British Indian Association on the subject of the Bill had been laid before the Council and Members of Council would have an opportunity of considering it before being called upon to pass the Bill. Had the memorial been submitted to the Select Committee they would have been able to have seen that a great many of the objections which had been brought forward had been based upon a misconception of the measure as originally drafted. Some of the other objections had also been provided for by amendments in the scope of the Bill which had been made by the Select Committee. It was proposed not to attempt to define "coolies," as that might perhaps be a difficult task, and the Bill had therefore been restricted in its scope to porters and dandeewallas who were engaged in conveying passengers and loads within the limits of municipalities. He thought there could be no doubt that there would be no chance of coolies working in tea plantations being brought under the control of this measure. It was also proposed, without attempting to lay upon any one the duty of defining a "hill municipality," to say that the Bill should only extend to the Municipalities of Darjeeling and Kurseong. The Select Committee did not consider that the Bill should be republished, but he thought that under present circumstances it would probably be well to republish the Bill for general information.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 24th instant.

LIBERALITY OF BABOO GOPAL CHUNDER SIRKAR.

No. 88, dated Calcutta, the 16th February 1883.

From—C. S. BAYLEY, Esq., Officiating Under-Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal General Department,

To—The Commissioner of the Bhagulpore Division.

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 83J, dated the 11th ultimo, in which you report the offer of Baboo Gopal Chunder Sirkar, a pleader of Bhagulpore, to provide two silver medals for annual competition in the Bhagulpore Zillah School. It is proposed that of the two medals which are to be purchased from the interest accruing from a sum of Rs. 1,000 deposited for the purpose, one should be awarded in the name of the donor, and the other in that of his deceased son, Basanta Kumar Sirkar, to the boys of the first three classes of the school who stand foremost at a special examination to be held every year in the Sanskrit text of the Hitopadesa by Vishnu Sarma, in the English translation of the Upakramanika by Rajkrishna Banerjee, and in English essay-writing. In case, in any year, no boys attain a sufficient high standard, the money value of one or both the medals will be made over to the Committee for the management of the Bhagulpore Charitable Dispensary, to be expended for the purposes of that institution.

2. The Lieutenant-Governor accepts the offer, and desires that an expression of his thanks may be conveyed to Baboo Gopal Chunder Sirkar for his liberality. The promissory note which the donor intends to make over should be endorsed to the Comptroller-General. The Accountant-General will be instructed to open a Trust Fund account, called the "Gopal Chunder Sirkar and Basanta Kumar Sirkar Medal Fund," the Vice-President of the District Committee of Public Instruction, Bhagulpore, being constituted the administrator of the fund.

No. 83J, dated Bhagulpore, the 11th January 1883.

From—G. N. BARLOW, Esq., C.S.I., Commissioner of the Bhagulpore Division and Sonthal Pergunnahs,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, General Department.

BABOO GOPAL CHUNDER SIRCAR, a vakeel of Bhagulpore, has offered to pay a donation of Rs. 1,000 for the purpose of awarding annually to the boys of the Bhagulpore zillah school two silver medals of the value of Rs. 20 each, one in his own name, and the other in the name of his deceased son Basanta Kumar Sircar.

2. It is proposed that the medals will be awarded on the result of a special examination in which the boys of the first three classes of the zillah school will be allowed to compete. The examination will be held every year on two successive days in the Sanskrit text of Hitopadesa by Vishnu Sarma and the English translation of Upakramanika by Rajkrishna Banerjee, and in English essay-writing. The boys who stand first will receive the medals provided the number of marks obtained by them does not fall short of 60 per cent of the full marks. In case in any year no boys come up to the requisite number of marks, the money of one or both the medals, as the case may be, will be made over to the Committee for the management of the Bhagulpore charitable dispensary to be expended for the purposes of that institution.

3. The donor also wishes that, should the zillah school be ever abolished, the whole interest of Rs 40 will be given to the Bhagulpore charitable dispensary.

4. I request that the offer may be accepted and orders may be passed as to the officer in whose name the Government promissory note, which the Baboo wants to make over, should be endorsed, as also about the custody of the fund.

5. Baboo Gopal Chunder Sircar was for many years Secretary to the Local Committee of Public Instruction, and has been a member of the District School Committee since its formation. He also obtained a certificate on the occasion of the assumption by Her Majesty of the title of Empress of India for his services, specially in connection with public education. The Baboo's public spirit deserves recognition.

Nos. 241—51G, dated Fort William, the 14th February 1883.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Public Works Department.

APPOINTMENTS TO THE ENGINEER AND UPPER SUBORDINATE ESTABLISMENTS.

READ again—

Home Department Circular No. $\frac{21}{746-753}$, dated 10th April 1879.

Public Works Department Resolution No. 1516—28G, dated 11th November 1882, and Despatches from the Secretary of State quoted in the preamble, also Secretary of State's Despatch No. 52PW, dated 28th September 1882, approving of the above Resolution before issue.

Read—

Letter from the Secretary to the Government of Madras, Public Works Department, No. 3351W, dated 19th December 1882, asking for definite orders as to future appointments to the Engineer and Upper Subordinate Establishments.

RESOLUTION.—The Circular of the Home Department quoted in the preamble, in furtherance of the views of Her Majesty's Government, enjoined the reservation of appointments in the uncovenanted service generally for natives, but made an exception in favour of certain departments, and amongst others of the Public Works Department.

2. Prior, however, to the issue of this Circular, the Secretary of State had, in his Despatch No. 41, dated 10th August 1876, followed by other Despatches quoted in the preamble of Resolution No. 1516—28G, dated 11th November 1882, impressed upon the Government of India that, as the European portion of the Superior Public Works Establishment was now recruited from the Royal Indian Engineering College at Cooper's Hill, the appointments from the Indian Engineering Colleges should be closely reserved for natives, and that, without the sanction of the Secretary of State, no Europeans other than Royal Engineer Officers should, in future, be appointed in India to the Engineer Establishment. At the same time his Lordship gave it to be understood that he did not intend these orders to affect the classes formed at the Thomason College for the education of Non-Commissioned Officers and Soldiers of the British Army, or of Europeans and Natives, for the Subordinate Establishment of the Department.

3. The purport of the above orders was, so far as appointments from the Thomason College are concerned, summed up in Resolution No. 1516—28G, dated 11th November 1882, which directs that, commencing with the students entering the College in the year 1883, the number of appointments to the Engineer Establishment, guaranteed from time to time to that institution, shall be given in the first instance to persons of pure Asiatic origin who qualify under the usual conditions.

4. It is necessary, however, in view of the orders by the Secretary of State already quoted, and of the uncertainty in regard to this matter which the letter from the Government of Madras shows to exist, to lay down the following rules for future guidance in making appointments to the Engineer and Upper Subordinate Establishments:—

1.—Without the sanction of the Secretary of State, no permanent appointment of Europeans, except of Royal Engineers, or as provided in Rule 2, shall be made to the Engineer Establishment.

2.—Subject to any guarantee that may have been already given, the appointments made to the Engineer Establishment from the Indian Engineering Colleges shall be reserved for persons of pure Asiatic origin who qualify according to the College Standard. If, however, a sufficient number of Natives do not pass the test, the appointments will be open to European or Eurasian competitors at the same examination.

3.—Appointments shall not be made under Rule 2 in excess of the numbers guaranteed from time to time. The numbers guaranteed for the years 1885 and 1886 are shown in the margin.

4.—Appointments in the Subordinate Establishment shall be open, under the same rules as heretofore, to Non-Commissioned Officers and Soldiers of the British Army, and to Europeans and persons of mixed descent as well as to Natives.

ORDER.—Ordered that this Resolution be communicated to the Local Governments and Administrations marginally noted, and the Director-General of Railways; also that it be published in the Gazette of India and all local official Gazettes.

The Governments of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and the Punjab, in the Public Works Department.

The mean pressure, temperature, &c., are deduced from the traces of the Barograph and Thermograph, and from observations made at 6h, 10h, 16h and 22h.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected approximately to those of the standard Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV, and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office, and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The direction of the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground.

The falling off of revenue is due to the following causes—
(a)—Fewer empty boats passed through during the month than in the same month of last year.
(b)—No road metal was carried through this month. In December 1881, Rs. 135 was realized on the same account.
(c)—Traffic in miscellaneous articles was also less than in the same month of the previous year.

Increase. Mds.

Building materials ... 4,074

This increase is due to materials carried for the extension and erection of a godown at the Canning rice mills.

Revenue stores ... 1,666

This increase is due to repairs and renewals in a greater degree.

Firewood ... 16,104

This increase is due to sufficient supply of wood wagons to the merchants and greater demand at selling stations.

Hay ... 4,380

This increase is due to supply of sufficient wagons to the merchants and favourable market.

Wooloo ... 1,220

This increase is due to greater demand at the selling stations.

Paddy ... 2,284

This increase is due to cultivators carrying paddy to Hotar and Magra for Soorjipur Hât.

Sundries ... 1,624

This increase is due to working of the rice mills and for Sonarpur-Diamond Harbour Extension.

Decrease.

Railway materials ... 2,464

This decrease is due to less demand for the extension.

Coal ... 5,727

This decrease is due to coal being less required for the extension and the rice mills at Canning than the previous year.

Rice ... 10,611

This decrease is due to less traffic of rice from rice mills at Canning.

Increase. Mds.

Edible grain ... 6,285

The increase is due to good crop in this part of the country.

Decrease.

Coal ... 8,342

The decrease is due to Executive Engineer's bringing in larger quantity last year.

Salt ... 2,899

This has taken river route this year. Last year large quantity of salt took the rail for want of water in the river.

Seeds of all sorts ... 2,871

The decrease is due probably to seeds for Nuddea district passing vid Howrah and Bhudreshur in consequence of East Indian Railway reduced monsoon rate from Cawnpore.

NOTIFICATION.

THE following rules in regard to the regulation of the strength and cost of Cantonment Police are issued for general guidance :—

Cantonment Police.

I.—The payment of the Cantonment Police will be made from the Regular Police budget and by the District Superintendent of Police.

II.—The administration of the Cantonment Police, which is by law a portion of the police force of the province, is vested in the District Superintendent of Police, who will be ex-officio a member of the Cantonment Committee.

III.—No increase or decrease in the strength and cost of the Cantonment Police shall have effect without the sanction of the Local Government.

IV.—Any proposals affecting the strength and cost of the Cantonment Police, or for forming a Cantonment Police were none now exists, shall be referred by the District Superintendent of Police through his official superiors to the Local Government, and shall ordinarily be accompanied by the recorded concurrence or opinion of the officer commanding the station. Should the officer commanding the station wish for any alteration, he will forward his proposals to the District Superintendent, who will treat them in the above manner.

V.—The orders of the Local Government will be conveyed through the Police Department, and a copy will be forwarded at the same time to the Quartermaster-General for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

VI.—Where any new or increased charge on account of Cantonment Police is rendered necessary, the Local Government will communicate with the Quartermaster-General in view to any remarks that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief may desire to offer for the consideration of the Local Government before the final orders are given.

Calcutta Port Trust.

DEBENTURE LOAN.

THE Calcutta Port Improvement Act, 1870, Act V (B.C.) of 1870, and the Calcutta Port Improvement Act Amendment Act of 1880, Act IV (B.C.) of 1880, amended by Act I (B.C.) of 1881, issue of twenty lakhs of rupees, 4½ per cent. debentures, having a currency of thirty years.

Tenders are invited for twenty lakhs of rupees in 4½ per cent. debentures, to be issued under the provisions of Act IV (B.C.) of 1880 and Act I (B.C.) of 1881 to provide for the cost of works sanctioned by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, which loan, and the interest thereon, will be a charge on the property of the Commissioners.

The debentures will be for sums of Rs. 100 each or multiples of Rs. 100, as may be desired, made payable to order, and carrying interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly (on the first day of April and first day of October) at the office of the Port Commissioners, upon presentation of the debentures. Two per cent. of the amount tendered for to be paid on application, and the balance on the 1st of April 1883, from which date interest will run.

The deposit of two per cent. will be returned if an allotment is not made, and it will be forfeited if an allotment after being made is not fully taken up.

In case a less number of debentures is allotted than is applied for, the excess of the deposit will be applied in or towards payment of the balance due upon such number as may be allotted.

Tenders in the annexed form should be filled up and sent to the Secretary to the Port Commissioners before noon of Wednesday, the 14th day of March 1883, accompanied by a receipt from the Bank of Bengal for deposit of two per cent. upon the amount of each debenture applied for. The tenders will be opened in the presence of the Port Commissioners.

The minimum rate at which tenders will be accepted will be recorded under the signature of the Chairman, and before the tenders are opened, but will not be made public unless some tender is rejected only because it is below the recorded minimum.

Forms of tenders can be obtained on application to the Secretary to the Port Commissioners, and the form of debenture can be seen at the office of the Secretary. A separate tender must be made for each rate.

By order of the Commissioners,

G. H. SIMMONS, Secretary.

Port Commissioners' Office, dated 21st February 1883.

The Indian Law Reports.

Published under Authority of the Governor-General in Council.

THE Reports appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and will comprise four series.—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court will be reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court will be reported in the Calcutta Series.

The Parts of each series can be had separately, or all four Parts can be had stitched into one wrapper at the option of subscribers and purchasers. It will be observed from the following statement of the terms of subscription and sale, that a considerable reduction is allowed to persons taking the complete set.

Terms of subscription, payable annually in advance.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1883.

PART IV.

Bill of the Bengal Council.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE following report of the Select Committee, together with the Bill as amended by them, is, by order of the President, published for general information :—

From the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, dated the 6th February 1883.

From the Secretary to the Calcutta Corporation, dated the 15th February 1883.

Demi-official letter from the Magistrate of Howrah, dated the 11th February 1883.

We, the members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the law relating to Jute-warehouses and Fire-brigades was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin. No direct communication reached us from the Commissioners of the Suburbs of Calcutta, but a paper, purporting to embody the opinions of the Commissioners upon the Bill, was published in a Calcutta newspaper.

We have modified section 5 in accordance with the recommendations of the Commissioner of Police. If the law as it stands were strictly carried out, it would be necessary for the Government to consult the Commissioners and to fix the fee in the case of each separate license. Such a procedure would be highly inconvenient; and, as a matter of fact, it is not the system which is adopted. The Government fixes a percentage upon the municipal valuation, and the Commissioners determine the fee payable on account of each warehouse accordingly. We think that the right principle is that the scale of fees should be fixed by the Government, and that it should be left to the Commissioners to apply it in each case. That the scale should take the form of a percentage on the municipal valuation is a convenient plan, but we think it should be open to the Government to take other circumstances also into consideration, such as the number and quality of the pressing machines used in the warehouse. We have worded the section accordingly, but we have struck out the clause of the present law, which requires the Government to have regard to the probable income derived from the warehouse. It does not appear to us that this is a point which should be considered in determining the fee.

After the first clause of section 6, we have inserted words to provide that a new license may be either permanent or may be granted for a term of years. The Commissioner of Police suggests that a term of 20 years should be fixed for licenses already granted. We are not prepared to adopt this proposal.

We have struck out the proviso at the end of section 6. It is not in the present law, though it is in accordance with existing practice, and its retention seems to us unnecessary, if the principle of a scale of fees is adopted.

In section 16 we consider that the Municipal Commissioners have no claim to any share in the fees and penalties levied under Part IV of the Act. The whole of these should be appropriated to the expenses of the fire-brigade.

We understand that the Commissioners of the Suburbs think that the allowance of 20 per cent provided by this section for the cost of inspection and superintendence is insufficient. We have carefully considered this point, and we are of opinion that no higher percentage ought to be allowed. If the Commissioners cannot provide for the cost of inspection and superintendence from the allowance of 20 per cent. of the fees and penalties under Parts I and II of the Act, they should be required to make good the balance from the general fund of the municipality.

It has been suggested that the budget of the fire-brigade ought to be laid before the Municipal Commissioners before being submitted to the Government. This appears to us a reasonable proposal, and we have added a section to provide that this shall be done, and that if the budget shews a surplus, the scale of fees may be reduced, and that it may be raised if the budget shews a deficit.

In the last clause of section 21 (formerly section 20) we have adopted the suggestion made in Council when the Bill was introduced, and have provided that no officer of the police or of the fire-brigade shall be held liable to damages on account of any act done by him in the bonâ fide belief that such act was required in the proper execution of his duties. This amendment is supported by the Commissioner of Police.

In section 23 (formerly section 22) we have expunged the provision which makes a fee payable for a license to let off rockets or to send up fire-balloons. In section 25 (formerly section 24) we have thought it better that the Magistrate shall be the authority to exercise the powers in question. The functions appear to us more properly to belong to the head of the Police than to the head of the Municipality. We have added a section to specify the funds available for the maintenance of the fire-brigade.

In section (formerly section 27) we have considered the question of retaining the words "any other commodity." We are of opinion that depôts for the storage of such commodities as hay, straw, firewood, and the like ought not to be brought under the operation of this Act. The Municipal Acts, both for Calcutta and for the Mofussil, already give the Commissioners ample powers for regulating places used for the storage of such inflammable materials. The retention of the word "fibre" in the section is sufficient to cover the cases of hemp and flax, though it may be doubted whether it would apply to wool; and we consider that wool, if it were stored in any large quantities, might properly be subjected to the provisions of the Act. But we believe that there is no practical necessity for including wool, and we have accordingly confined the wording of the section to fibres.

In section (formerly section 30) we have provided that an arrested person shall be brought before a Magistrate as soon as possible, but in every case within 24 hours.

We have made a few other verbal amendments. We are of opinion that the Bill should be passed as now amended; but as we have made considerable alterations in the draft, we recommend that the Bill should be republished before it is taken into further consideration by the Council.

CALCUTTA,
The 21st February 1883.

AS AMENDED BY THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

A Bill to amend the law relating to Jute-warehouses and Fire-brigades.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to Jute-warehouses and Fire-brigades: It is enacted as follows:—

Preliminary.

Title.

1. This Act may be called the "Licensed Warehouse and Fire-brigade Act, 1883."

Extent.

It applies to Calcutta and to such portions of the Suburbs thereof as are for the time being subject to the operation of Bengal Act II of 1866, and also to the Municipality of Howrah:

Commencement.

And it shall come into force from the date on which it may be published in the Calcutta Gazette with the assent of the Governor-General.

Repeal of Bengal Act V of 1879.

2. Bengal Act V of 1879 is hereby repealed. But all rules, orders, declarations, and appointments made under the said Act, and now in force, shall be deemed to have been made under this Act.

Interpretation.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

"Jute." "Cotton."

"Jute" and "Cotton" mean respectively jute and cotton which have not been pressed or screwed as if for shipment:

"Person."

"Person" includes a firm and an undivided Hindu family:

"Magistrate."

"Magistrate" includes a Justice of the Peace for the Town of Calcutta, and any person exercising all or any of the powers of a Magistrate:

"The Commissioners."

"The Commissioners" mean, in respect of Calcutta, the Corporation of the Town of Calcutta, and, in respect of the Suburbs and Howrah, the Municipal Commissioners appointed or elected under the Bengal Municipal Act, 1876, or any other law for the time being in force relating to Municipalities.

"Warehouse."

"Warehouse" means any building or place used for the storing, keeping, pressing, or depositing of jute or cotton or other fibre for the time being subject to the operation of this Act.

PART I.

Licensed Warehouses.

Existing warehouses not to be used till licensed.

4. No warehouse shall be used for the storing, keeping, pressing or depositing of jute or cotton, unless the owner or occupier thereof shall have previously obtained a license for such use.

5. From and after the commencement of this Act every license granted to a warehouse under the Jute-warehouse and Fire-brigade Act of 1872 or 1879 shall be subject to the payment of an annual fee. Such fee shall be determined by the Commissioners in accordance with a scale to be fixed from time to time by the Local Government after consulting the Commissioners at a special meeting, and shall be paid in such instalments as the Commissioners may direct.

Fee for license for warehouse.

The Local Government may at its discretion fix such scale of fees either —

(1) in proportion to the annual value of the warehouse as it is assessed to the payment of municipal taxes: or

(2) in proportion to the value of the machinery erected or proposed to be erected in such warehouse: or

(3) in proportion to such annual value of the warehouse, and to the value of the machinery, taken together.

The Local Government may from time to time, on the recommendation of the Commissioners at a special meeting, alter the scale of fees to be paid in respect of warehouses.

6. Any person proposing to use any land for the purposes of a warehouse within the area to which this Act extends shall send to the Commissioners a plan of such land and all the buildings thereon, prepared in such manner as the Commissioners may direct, and it shall be within the discretion of the Commissioners at a special meeting to grant or refuse a license to establish the same.

License for new warehouse.

Such license may be either permanent, or may be granted for such term of years as the Commissioners shall think fit.

Every license for a warehouse, to be granted under this section, shall be subject to the following conditions, namely,—

(1) that no loose jute, jute rejections or cuttings, or cotton, shall be stored or screwed or pressed, save within a building constructed of such materials, and on such a plan as may be approved of by the Commissioners;

(2) that no loose jute, jute rejections or cuttings, or cotton, shall be combed or dried except within an enclosure, and that the top or roof of any building or of any hut shall not be used for such combing or drying without the sanction in writing of the Commissioners;

(3) that space shall be reserved on land appertaining to the warehouse for the loading or unloading of carts;

(4) that no portion of the warehouse shall be used as a residence, and no artificial light (other than one duly and thoroughly protected) or lucifer matches shall be introduced therein, and that no person shall smoke therein;

(5) that the warehouse shall at all times be open to the inspection of officers duly appointed by the Commissioners;

(6) that the engines and furnaces used in the warehouse shall be placed as may be considered necessary by the Commissioners;

(7) that an annual fee shall be imposed in respect thereof as provided by the last preceding section.

7. The Commissioners shall appoint a sufficient number of officers for the inspection of warehouses within Calcutta, the Suburbs, and the Municipality of Howrah respectively; and any officer so appointed, and any Superintendent or Inspector or Sub-inspector of Police, may enter at any time into any warehouse and may inspect the same.

Inspection of warehouses.

8. On a change in the occupation of any warehouse, the person entering into occupation of the same shall, within two weeks of his so entering into occupation, give notice in writing to the Commissioners of such change of occupation, and shall thereupon pay to the Commissioners a fee of two rupees; and his name shall accordingly be substituted in such license for the name of the last occupier.

On change in occupation of warehouse, occupier to give notice.

If any warehouse is let out in portions, the person so letting it out and entitled to the rent shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be the occupier.

9. It shall be in the discretion of the Commissioners at a special meeting to cancel or to suspend for such time as they shall think fit the license of any warehouse in respect of which any one or more of the conditions under which such license is held shall appear to them to have been broken, or in respect of which the provisions of the last preceding section have been broken.

Cancelment or suspension of license.

PART II.

Penalties.

10. Any person who without a license uses any warehouse for keeping or depositing jute or cotton shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding one hundred rupees for each day during which he may use or continue to use such warehouse as aforesaid.

Penalty for not taking out license.

11. Any person who without a license uses for keeping or depositing jute or cotton any warehouse established after the commencement of this Act shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees, and to a further penalty not exceeding fifty rupees for every day during which such warehouse is used for keeping or depositing jute or cotton without a license.

Penalty for establishing warehouse without license.

12. Any person who uses a warehouse for the keeping or depositing of jute or cotton after the Commissioners shall have refused or cancelled a license in respect thereof, or during the time for which such license shall have been suspended, shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees, and to a further penalty not exceeding one hundred rupees for every day during which any such warehouse may be so used as aforesaid.

Penalty for using warehouse after refusal of license.

Penalty on occupier in case of breach of conditions of license.

13. Whenever any of the conditions under which a license is held in respect of any warehouse have been broken in such warehouse, the person whose name appears on the license as the occupier of such warehouse shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to have his license cancelled, or to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees.

Penalty on any person in case of breach of conditions of license.

14. Any person who breaks any of the conditions under which a license is held in respect of any warehouse shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding fifty rupees for any one such offence.

Penalty for omitting to give notice on change in occupation.

15. If on a change in the occupation of any warehouse, the person entering into occupation fail to give the notice required by section eight of this Act, such person shall be liable, on conviction before a Magistrate, to a penalty not exceeding one hundred rupees.

PART III.

Application of Funds.

Funds how to be applied.

16. The license fees and penalties received and levied under Parts I and II of this Act shall be applied in the manner following, that is to say—

Twenty per cent. to cost of inspection.

The Commissioners shall apply twenty per centum of such fees and penalties received and levied within their respective jurisdictions to the payment of the inspecting officers entertained under section seven of this Act, and to the payment of all expenses incurred by such Commissioners respectively in or about the inspection and superintendence of warehouses, and the granting of licenses in respect thereof.

Any balance of such twenty per centum which may remain after payment of such expenses shall be credited to the Municipal Fund of Calcutta, or of the Suburbs, or of Howrah, as the case may be, and any excess expenditure shall be defrayed by the Commissioners from the Municipal Fund.

Eighty per cent. to cost of fire-brigade.

17. The remaining eighty per centum of such fees and penalties shall be paid by the Commissioners to the Commissioner of Police for the Town of Calcutta, and shall be applied by him to the maintenance of the fire-brigade as hereinafter provided.

Budget of fire-brigade to be prepared.

18. The Commissioner of Police shall prepare annually, in or before the month of February, a budget or estimate of the receipts and expenditure of the fire-brigade for the year commencing on the first of April next ensuing.

Such budget shall be laid before the Commissioners at a meeting, and shall be forwarded by them to the Local Government with such remarks as they shall think fit to record: and it shall be in the discretion of the Local Government to pass, or to reject, or to modify, the estimates of all or any sums entered in the same.

If such budget, as finally passed by the Local Government, shall show a surplus of receipts over expenditure, it shall be in the discretion of the Local Government, subject to the provisions of section 5, to reduce the scale of fees to be paid in respect of warehouses: and, if it shall show a deficit, similarly to increase such scale.

PART IV.

Fire-brigade.

Maintenance of fire-brigade.

19. The Commissioner of Police for the Town of Calcutta shall maintain an efficient fire-brigade for the town and suburbs of Calcutta and for the Municipality of Howrah.

Local Government may make orders.

20. The Local Government may from time to time make, and, when made, alter or repeal such general or special orders as it may think fit—

For appointing or removing any member or officer of the force.

For furnishing the fire-brigade with such fire-engines, fire-escapes, horses, oxen, accoutrements, tools, and implements as it may think proper.

For building, providing or hiring places for the keeping of the force, engines, horses, and appurtenances.

For giving gratuities to persons who have given notice of fires.

For the training, discipline, good conduct, salaries, and pensions of the members of the force.

For the speedy attendance of such members with engines and all necessary implements on the occasion of any alarm of fire.

For sending the force, engines, and appurtenances beyond the limits of the area to which this Act extends in order to extinguish fire in the neighbourhood of the said limits.

For imposing and summarily realizing a fine not exceeding one week's wages from any member of the brigade who may infringe these orders.

Generally, for the maintenance of the fire-brigade in a due state of efficiency.

Such orders shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette, and shall take effect from such publication.

Powers of fire-brigade in cases of fire.

21. On the occasion of a fire, the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner of Police, or the chief or other officer in charge of the fire-brigade on the spot may—

(a) remove, or may order any member of the brigade to remove, any persons who by their presence interfere with the due operations of the brigade;

(b) by himself or by his men break into or through, or pull down any premises for the purpose of putting an end to the fire, doing as little damage as possible;

(c) cause the mains and pipes of any district to be shut off, so as to give greater pressure of water in the place where the fire has occurred;

(d) call on the officer in charge of the Port Commissioners' fire-engine to render such assistance as may be possible in the case of any fire occurring near the river bank;

(e) and, generally, take such measures as may appear necessary for the preservation of life and property.

The Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner of Police or chief officer on the spot in charge of the brigade may verbally nominate and depute one or more officers of the brigade to act at a distance, and such officer or officers shall have for the time being the like powers as the chief officer himself possesses under this section.

Police officers to render assistance.

Police officers of all grades shall be authorized to aid the fire-brigade in the execution of its duties. They may close any street in or near which a fire is burning, and they may, of their own motion or on the request of the chief or other officer of the fire-brigade, remove any persons who interfere by their presence with the operations of the fire-brigade.

Damage done to be deemed damage by fire.

Any damage done by the fire-brigade in the due execution of their duties shall be deemed to be damage by fire within the meaning of any policy of insurance of property in Calcutta or the suburbs against fire.

No officer of the police or of the fire-brigade shall be held liable to damages on account of any act done by him in the bonâ fide belief that such act was required in the proper execution of his duties.

Enquiry into origin of fire

22. In the case of any fire occurring in Calcutta or the Suburbs or in the Municipality of Howrah the chief officer of the fire-brigade shall ascertain the facts as to the origin and cause of such fire, and shall make a report thereon to the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the place in which such fire shall have occurred, and the said Magistrate, in any case where he may see fit, shall summon witnesses and take evidence in order to the further ascertainment of such facts.

Licenses and Penalties in respect of fire-works, &c.

Penalty for letting off rockets and selling fire-works without license.

23. Within the town and suburbs of Calcutta whoever shall let off rockets or send up fire-balloons without a license from the Commissioner of Police, and whoever shall sell fire-works without a license from the Commissioner of Police, for which a yearly fee not exceeding ten rupees shall be payable, shall be liable on conviction before a Magistrate to penalty not exceeding fifty rupees for every such offence.

Powers to withdraw license.

24. The Commissioner of Police may at his discretion withdraw or suspend any license granted by him under the last preceding section:

Provided that a license to sell fire-works shall not be withdrawn or suspended except after thirty days' notice.

Exercise of powers in Howrah.

25. The powers conferred on the Commissioner of Police in respect of Calcutta and the Suburbs, by the two last preceding sections, shall be exercised in the Municipality of Howrah by the Magistrate of the district, or the officer in charge of the current duties of the Magistrate's office.

Liability of house-holders.

26. In the event of any rockets being let off or fire-balloons sent up within the precincts of any private premises or compound without the express permission in writing of the Commissioner of Police, or the Magistrate or officer as aforesaid, as the case may be, the occupier or owner, or person under whose immediate control the said premises or compound is, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty rupees, unless he can prove who the person having committed the offence is, and that the offence was committed without his knowledge.

Miscellaneous.

Appropriation of existing balance.

27. Any sum standing at the credit of the Jute-warehouse fund of the Town of Calcutta or of the Suburbs at the time when this Act comes into force may be appropriated in such proportions as the Local Government may direct either as a grant to the Municipal Fund of Calcutta or of the Suburbs for general purposes, or to the purchase of new engines, plant or equipment for the fire-brigade referred to in section nineteen of this Act.

Fire-brigade receipts.

28. The funds available for the maintenance of the fire-brigade shall be:

(1) The eighty per centum payable under section seventeen:

(2) The proceeds of all license, fees and penalties levied under Part IV:

(3) Any other funds which the Local Government may grant or appropriate for this purpose.

Local Government may declare the warehousing of any other fibre to be subject to Act.

29. The Local Government may, on the recommendation of the Commissioners passed by resolution, declare that any other fibre which is stored or deposited in warehouses besides jute or cotton, shall be warehoused and kept subject to the provisions of this Act.

When such declaration shall have been made in the Calcutta Gazette this Act shall be read as if the name or names of the said fibre had been printed in addition to the words "jute" or "cotton" in the several sections of this Act wherein the said words "jute" or "cotton" may occur.

Submission of reports.

30. The Commissioners of the several jurisdictions to which this Act extends shall report to the Local Government once a year, at such time as the Local Government shall direct, shewing how the provisions of this Act have been carried out, and specifying the warehouses in respect of which licenses have been granted.

The Commissioner of Police for the town of Calcutta shall make a similar report, shewing the working of the fire-brigade during the year, the receipts and expenditure in respect thereof, and the proceedings taken by him under sections twenty-three and twenty-four of this Act.

Such reports shall be forthwith published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Power to arrest.

31. Any person committing any offence in respect of which a penalty is provided by section fourteen or section twenty-three of this Act may, if his name and address be unknown, be arrested by any officer of police and forthwith conveyed before some Magistrate having jurisdiction in the place in which such offence has been committed, or shall be taken to the nearest police station within the said jurisdiction in order that such person may be detained until he can be brought before a Magistrate, or until he shall enter into recognizance with or without sureties for his appearance before a Magistrate.

Offenders to be brought to trial.

32. Whenever such person shall be taken to a police station, the officer in charge of such station shall, as soon as possible, but in every case within twenty-four hours, cause him to be conveyed before some Magistrate having jurisdiction in the matter.

Form of license.

33. Every license granted under Part I of this Act shall, as far as possible, be in the form to the schedule to this Act annexed.

Saving of places of manufacture or retail trade.

34. Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to apply to buildings or places wherein small quantities of jute, cotton or other fibre for the time being subject to the operation of this Act are deposited for the purpose of any manufacture or retail trade. The Local Government may from time to time declare, by notification in the Calcutta Gazette, what quantities of jute, cotton or other fibre as aforesaid, shall be deemed to be small quantities within the meaning of this section.

The following Bill was read in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 24th February 1883:—

A Bill to extend the System of Local Self-Government in Bengal.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to extend the system of local self-government within the territories subject to the Government of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal; It is enacted as follows:—

Preliminary.

Title.

1. This Act may be called the "Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1883."

Extent.

It shall extend to all the territories subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal which are not included within the limits of the town of Calcutta, or within the districts of Singbhoom, the Sonthal Pergunnahs, Chittagong Hill Tracts, or any place or town to which the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act of shall have been, or may hereafter be, extended:

Commencement.

And it shall come into force in any other district or part of a district on such date as the Lieutenant-Governor may, by notification in the Calcutta Gazette, direct.

But any notification, order or rule, and any appointment to an office, may be made, or election held, under this Act at any time after it shall have received the assent of the Governor-General, but shall not take effect in any district, or part of a district, until this Act comes into force therein.

Enactment repealed and amended.

2. On the commencement of this Act in any district or part of a district, the enactment specified in the first schedule shall, as regards such district or part of a district, be repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column thereof; and the enactment specified in the second schedule shall be amended to the extent mentioned in the third column thereof.

But this repeal shall not revive any office, authority or thing abolished by such enactment, or affect the validity of anything done or suffered, or any right, title, obligation or liability accrued before the commencement of this Act.

And no appointment to an office, made under the Bengal Act IX of 1880, shall continue to be valid in any district, or part of a district after this Act shall have come into force in such district, or part of a district.

Act not to be extended to cantonments without consent of Governor-General.

3. Notwithstanding anything in section one this Act shall not take effect in any cantonment without the consent of the Governor-General in Council previously obtained.

Interpretation.

4. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context:

"Local Government Circle" and "Local Board."

(1) "Local Government Circle" means any area subject to the jurisdiction of a Local Board constituted under the provisions of Part I, Chapter II of this Act, and "Local Board" means any Board so constituted.

"Central Board."

(2) "Central Board" means the Board constituted under the provisions of Part I, Chapter III of this Act.

"Local Authority."

(3) "Local Authority" means any Local Board, Joint Local Board, Union Committee or Joint Union Committee, constituted under this Act, or the Commissioners of any Municipality constituted under the Bengal Municipal Act of .

"Magistrate of the District."

(4) "Magistrate of the District" includes any Magistrate subordinate to the Magistrate of the district, to whom he may delegate all or any of his powers under this Act.

PART I.

Authorities for execution of Act.

CHAPTER I.

Union Committees.

Formation of Unions.

5. The Central Board may, for the purposes of local self government in each district, by order in writing, constitute any village or group of villages into a Union:

Provided that, unless the Central Board shall otherwise specially direct, the area included in any Union shall in no case contain less than five hundred houses, and no inhabited house within any Union shall be more than four miles distant from any other inhabited house within the same Union.

It shall be lawful for the Central Board, by order in writing, from time to time, to vary or annul any order made under this section.

Union Committees.

6. There shall be established for each Union a body to be called the Union Committee, consisting of such number of members, not being less than five or more than nine, as may be specified in the order constituting such Union.

Qualification of electors of Union Committees.

7. Save as is hereinafter provided, the members of the Union Committee of each Union shall be elected by male persons resident within the local limits of such Union, who have attained the full age of twenty-one years, have not been convicted of any non-bailable offence, and are subject to no legal incapacity, and who are qualified in one of the manners following, that is to say:—

(1) Are graduates or licentiates of any University, or hold certificates as pleaders or mooktears.

(2) Are possessed of a clear annual income from any source of not less than sixty rupees.

(3) Have paid during the year immediately preceding the date of the election, any Chowkeedaree Tax under the provisions of the Bengal Acts, VI of 1870 and I of 1871, or any License Tax, or any Road Cess or Public Works Cess.

All elections under this section shall be held at such times and places as the Central Board may appoint, and be governed by such rules, as the Central Board may from time to time issue.

Qualification of members of Union Committees.

8. Every person who shall be qualified under the provisions of the last preceding section to vote at the election of members of a Union Committee shall be deemed to be qualified for election as a member of such Committee.

Appointment on failure to elect.

9. If the electors of any Union shall fail to elect the full number of members allotted to the Committee of such Union, the Central Board shall call upon the Local Board, or if no Local Board has been appointed, upon the Magistrate of the District, to nominate one or more members to complete the number so allotted as aforesaid, and the Central Board shall accept such nomination or nominations, and appoint the person or persons so nominated to be member or members of such Committee.

Appointment in substitution of election.

10. Notwithstanding anything in this Act contained, it shall be lawful for the Central Board to direct, by order in writing, for special reasons to be stated in such order, that any Union Committee shall consist, either wholly or in part, of members nominated by the Magistrate of the district in which such Union is situated. The Magistrate shall thereupon nominate one or more persons as by such order directed, and the Central Board shall appoint such person or persons to be member or members of such Union Committee.

All persons who may be appointed under this or the last preceding section must be qualified as provided in section eight, and shall have the same powers and duties, and shall be subject to the same liabilities, as are by this Act granted to or imposed upon members elected under section seven.

Tenure of office.

11. The members of a Union Committee shall be elected or appointed (as the case may be) for a term of two years, and at the expiration of such term shall cease to be members of such Committee, but shall be eligible for re-election or re-appointment:

Provided that the said term of two years shall be held to include any period which may elapse between the expiration of the said two years and the date of the next subsequent election or appointment, not being an election or appointment under the next succeeding section.

Successors how appointed.

12. In the case of the death or resignation of a member of any Union Committee, his successor shall be forthwith appointed or elected in the manner hereinbefore provided, and such successor shall remain a member of the said Committee for the residue only of the term for which the member who has died or resigned was originally appointed or elected:

Provided that no act of the Committee or its officers, or of the Committee in meeting, shall be deemed to be invalid by reason only that the number of the Committee did not, at the date of the performance of such act, amount to the number specified in the order creating such Union.

CHAPTER II.

Local Boards.

Local Government Circles.

13. For the purposes of this Act, the Central Board shall, by a notification to be published in the Calcutta Gazette, aggregate the several thanas of each district to which this Act shall have been extended in one or more Circles, to be denominated Local Government Circles.

The Central Board may, from time to time, by notification to be published as aforesaid, vary or annul any order made under this section.

Local Boards.

14. There shall be established for each Local Government Circle constituted under the last preceding section, a body to be called the Local Board. Each Local Board shall be a body corporate, designated by such name as it may with the sanction of the Central Board adopt, and shall have a common seal and perpetual succession, with power to sue and be sued in such name.

Number of members of Local Boards.

15. The Local Board of each Local Government Circle shall consist of representative members, to be elected or appointed, as hereinafter provided, in the proportion of three members for each thana within the local limits of such Circle. But the Central Board may direct that the number of representative members of any particular thana shall be greater or less than three.

Lieutenant-Governor to determine proportion of members to be elected and nominated.

16. The Lieutenant-Governor shall determine what proportion (if any) of the representative members allotted to each thana as aforesaid shall be elected in the manner hereinafter provided, and what proportion shall be appointed by the Central Board:—Provided that:

(1) If one-half of the entire area of any thana is under the jurisdiction of Union Committees constituted under the provisions of Part I, Chapter I of this Act, not less than two of the members for such thana shall be elected, and the remainder (if any) shall be appointed by the Central Board.

(2) One-third of the whole number of members of each Local Board shall be appointed by the Central Board.

(3) The number of persons holding salaried offices under the Government, and appointed to the Local Board, shall not bear a larger proportion than one-fourth to the total number of members of the Local Board appointed and elected under the provisions of this chapter.

(4) In cases where the whole number of members of the Local Board is not evenly divisible by three or by four, the one-third or one-fourth shall be ascertained by taking the number next below the whole number, which is evenly divisible by three or by four, as the number to be divided

(5) Every appointment by the Central Board under this section shall be made immediately after the result of the election hereinafter mentioned shall have been notified to the Central Board and shall be subject to confirmation by the Lieutenant-Governor, and such appointment, after being confirmed, shall take effect from the date on which such election takes place.

Qualification of electors.

17. Such and so many of the representative members of each thana as are not appoiated under the provisions of the last preceding section shall be elected by male persons who have attained the full age of twenty-one years, have not been convicted of any non-bailable offence, and are subject to no legal incapacity, and who are qualified in one of the manners following, that is to say :—

(1) Are members of any Union Committee within the local limits of such thana.

(2) Are graduates or licentiates of any University; or hold certificates as pleaders or mookhtars; or hold any office or employment carrying a salary of not less than fifty rupees per mensem; and are entitled to vote for the election of members of any Union Committee under the provisions of section seven of this Act, or are members of a joint undivided Hindu famliy, one of the members of which is so entitled:

Provided that no person who may be otherwise qualified under clause (2) of this section shall be deemed to be qualified to vote at the election of members of a Local Government Board, unless he shall have his fixed place of abode within the Local Government Circle of such Local Board, or in a town which has been constituted a Municipality under the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act of , and which is situate not more than one mile from the boundary of such Local Government Circle.

Qualification of candidates.

18. All male persons who are of the full age of twenty-one years, have not been convicted of a non-bailable offence, and are subject to no legal incapacity, shall be deemed eligible for election as members of the Local Board, provided they are qualified in one of the manners following, that is to say :—

(1) Are qualified to vote for the election of members of such Local Board under the provisions of the last preceding section.

(2) Have, during the year immediately preceding such election, paid in respect of land situate either wholly or in part within such Local Government Circle a sum of not less than one hundred rupees on account of Road Cess or Public Works Cess under this Act or the Bengal Cess Act of 1880, as amended by this Act.

(3) Have paid, during the year immediately preceding such election. a sum of not less than fifty rupees under any License Act for the time being in force.

(4) Are possessed of a clear annual income from any source of not less than two thousand rupees.

Provided that no person shall be deemed to be qualified for election as a member of a Local Board, unless he is, at the time of his election, and so long as he continues in office by virtue of such election, resident in the Local Government Circle in which such Board has jurisdiction or within five miles thereof.

Central Board to make rules for elections.

19. It shall be lawful for the Central Board, with the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor, to make rules consistent with the provisions of this Act for the registration of voters and the conduct of elections under this chapter; and, from time to time, with the like consent, to vary such rules.

Term of membership.

20. Every member of the Local Board may hold office for three years from the date of his appointment or election, and the Lieutenant-Governor may, at any time before the expiration of such term of three years, accept the resignation of such member.

Removal of member.

21. The Lieutenant-Governor may remove any member appointed or elected under this Act, if such member shall have been guilty of misconduct in the discharge of his duties, or of any disgraceful conduct.

Provision as to member neglecting to attend meetings, &c.

22. Any member who, without having obtained permission from the Local Board, shall have omitted to attend six consecutive meetings of the Local Board, and any member who shall have been sentenced to imprisonment, and any member who is or becomes at the time, or during the term of his appointment or election, a bankrupt or insolvent, or who is interested (otherwise than as a shareholder in a joint stock company) in any contract with the Local Board, shall cease to be a member of the Local Board.

CHAPTER III.

The Central Board.

Creation of Board.

23. A Board shall be established, to be called the Central Board, and all the powers and duties vested in or imposed upon the Central Board by this Act shall be exercised and performed by such Board in such manner and form, and subject to such conditions, liabilities, and incidents, as the Lieutenant-Governor shall, from time to time, determine.

Constitution of Central Board.

24. The Central Board shall consist of a President and so many members as the Lieutenant-Governor may direct. Such President and members shall be appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor, and shall hold office for a term of five years, and shall not be removable from office before the expiration of such term without the sanction of the Governor-General in Council.

The Central Board shall be deemed to be established from and after the date of the first appointment of a President under this Act.

25. The Central Board shall be a body corporate, and shall have an official seal and perpetual succession, and may sue and be sued by its corporate name.

Incorporation of Central Board.

PART II.

Of the Local Funds.

GENERAL.

26. The Lieutenant-Governor may, in the order extending this Act to any district or part of a district, direct that all or any portion of the funds vested in any local bodies existing in such district or part of a district, shall vest in the local authorities constituted under this Act, immediately upon such local authorities being constituted.

Lieutenant-Governor may make order as to vesting in new local authorities of funds of existing local bodies.

CHAPTER I.

Of the Union Fund.

27. There shall be formed for each Union a fund to be called the "Union Fund," and there shall be placed to the credit thereof—

Constitution of Union Fund.

(1) All sums accruing within that Union under the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871.

(2) All sums assigned thereto by the Central Board or Local Board, whether as a contribution towards the cost of making village roads or otherwise.

(3) All other sums received by the Union Committee in the execution of this Act.

The Union Fund shall be vested in the Union Committee, and the balance standing to the credit of the Fund shall be kept in such custody as the Central Board may from time to time direct.

28. The Union Fund shall be applicable to the following objects, and in the following order:—

Application of Union Fund.

(1) To the payment of establishments entertained and expenses incurred by the Union Committee for the purposes of this Act,

(2) To the payment of the expenses incurred by the Union Committee in respect of the duties imposed upon such Committee under Part III of this Act, and of any expenses that may be incurred through the default of the Union Committee in carrying out any of such duties.

29. Account books of the Union Fund shall be kept by an officer to be appointed by the Union Committee.

Accounts of Union Fund.

An account shewing the receipts and expenditure during the quarter, arranged under the proper heads and duly balanced, shall be prepared immediately after the close of each quarter, and shall, with the account books, be open to the inspection of any person entitled to vote at the election of members of the Union Committee.

A similar account shall be prepared for each year as soon as possible after its close, and shall be open to inspection as aforesaid.

Copies of the yearly and quarterly accounts shall be submitted to the Local Board to which such Union Committee is subordinate.

CHAPTER II.

Of the Circle Fund.

30. There shall be formed for each Local Government Circle a fund to be called the "Circle Fund," and there shall be placed to the credit thereof—

Constitution of Circle Fund.

(1) Such proportion as the Central Board may direct of the District Road Fund of the district, after payment of the expenses mentioned in section one hundred and nine of the Bengal Act, IX of 1880, as amended by this Act.

(2) All sums levied within the Circle as fines, penalties, or otherwise, under the provisions of this Act.

(3) All sums accruing within the Circle under the provisions of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871, from pounds which have not been vested in any Union Committee under section forty-two of this Act.

(4) The proceeds of public ferries within or on the boundary of the Circle which have been placed under the charge of the Local Board under the provisions of Part IV, Chapter I of this Act.

(5) All receipts in respect of any schools, hospitals, dispensaries, railways, tramways or other buildings, institutions, or works, which may have been constructed by, or have become vested in, the Local Board under Part IV of this Act.

(6) Any sums which may from time to time be allotted to the Local Board from the provincial revenues by the Lieutenant-Governor for any of the purposes mentioned in Part IV of this Act, or for any other purpose.

(7) All other sums contributed to the Local Board by the Government, local bodies or private persons.

The Circle Fund shall be vested in the Local Board, and the balance standing to the credit of the Fund shall be kept in such custody as the Central Board may from time to time direct.

31. The Circle Fund shall be applicable to the following objects, and in the following order:—

Application of Circle Fund.

Firstly.—To the payment of such percentage as the Lieutenant-Governor may direct towards the cost of the Central Board and its establishments, towards the cost of audit, and towards the cost of establishments in any office of account or in any treasury:

Provided that the total amount which any Local Board may be required to pay on this account shall not in any year exceed two per centum on the amount of the Circle Fund for such year.

Secondly.—To the payment of establishments entertained and expenses incurred by the Local Board for the purposes of this Act, and to the payment to Government of such percentage as the Central Board may from time to time direct on the salaries of such establishments, in consideration of the Government undertaking to pay the leave and pension allowances of such establishments:

Thirdly.—To the payment of any sums which the Local Board may have undertaken to pay as interest upon loans raised by it for the purposes of this Act, and to the formation of a sinking fund where required.

Fourthly.—To the payment of expenses incurred by the Local Board in the performance of the duties imposed by this Act, and in the construction and maintenance of any works which may become vested in such Board under the provisions of this Act, and to the payment of any expenses that may be incurred through the default of the Local Board in carrying out any of the duties imposed upon it by this Act.

Fifthly.—To the payment of expenses incurred by the Local Board under the provisions of section one hundred and eighteen of this Act.

Sixthly.—To the payment, at such rates as the Central Board may direct, of the travelling expenses of members of the Local Board delegated to attend the annual conference of Local Boards under the provisions of section seventy-four, and of the travelling expenses of members of the Local Board attending a joint Board when the office of such joint Board is in any other Local Government Circle.

Seventhly.—To investment in any local debenture loans issued by the Government of India, or by the Lieutenant-Governor, for the construction of public works which may directly improve the means of communication within the Local Government Circle, or between such Circle and adjacent Circles.

Provided—

(1)—That no sum shall be expended from the Circle Fund in the construction of any channel for the purposes of irrigation, or for the purposes of drainage connected with any irrigation works in charge of public officers, or for the improvement or maintenance of any water-channel on which tolls are levied, when the proceeds of such tolls are not paid into the Circle Fund;

(2)—That no part of the Circle Fund of any district shall be applied to the construction or maintenance of any road within any first or second class municipality under the Bengal Municipal Act, 1876, unless such road shall have been expressly excluded from the operation of the said Act under section thirty-two thereof.

Accounts of Circle Fund.

32. Account books of the Circle Fund shall be kept by an officer to be appointed by the Local Board.

An account shewing the receipts and expenditure during the quarter, arranged under the proper heads and duly balanced, shall be prepared immediately after the close of each quarter, and shall, with the account books, be open to the inspection of any person entitled to vote at the election of members of the Local Board.

A similar account shall be prepared for each year as soon as possible after its close, and shall be open to the inspection as aforesaid.

Copies of the yearly and quarterly accounts shall be submitted to the Central Board.

Sub-Committee of Accounts.

33. Every Local Board shall appoint a Sub-Committee of Accounts, consisting of so many members as it thinks fit. It shall be the duty of such Sub-Committee to prepare estimates, under the provisions of section seventy-five, to keep such books of account as the Central Board may direct, and generally to superintend all matters connected with the finances and accounts of the Local Board.

The Sub-Committee shall, at all times, when required so to do, produce its books of account for audit by any officer who may be appointed by the Central Board in that behalf.

PART III.

Duties and Powers of Union Committees.

Union Committees to be subordinate to Local Boards.

34. The Union Committees shall be the agents of, and subject to the control of, the Local Boards of the Local Government Circle within which the Unions in respect of which they have been elected or appointed are respectively situated, and shall, within the areas respectively subject to their authority, have the control and administration of, and be responsible for, all matters specified in this Part, except such of those matters as the Local Board may think fit to take under its direct control and administration.

Union Committees to submit reports, estimates, and accounts to Local Board.

35. Every Union Committee shall submit annually to the Local Board of its Local Government Circle, on or before such date as the Local Board may appoint in this behalf, an estimate of the probable expenditure of the Committee for the coming financial year, and an account of its receipts and expenditure for the past financial year, and shall also submit to the Local Board such other reports (if any), as the Local Board may from time to time require.

Limits on expenditure of Union Committee.

36. The Union Committee shall not incur expenses or undertake liabilities to any amount exceeding the limit imposed by the Local Board of its Local Government Circle.

Village roads vested in Union Committee.

37. All village roads within any Union, and the stones and other materials thereof, and also all erections, materials, implements, and other things provided for such roads, shall vest in and belong to the Union Committee.

Power to make and improve village roads.

38. The Union Committee, making due compensation to the owners and occupiers of any houses or land which may be required for any such purposes, may—

(a) lay out and make new village roads;

(b) build and construct new bridges;

(c) turn, divert, discontinue or stop up any village road; and

(d) widen, open, enlarge or otherwise improve any such road.

Maintenance and repair of village roads.

39. The Union Committee shall, so far as the Union Fund permits, from time to time cause the village roads to be maintained and repaired, and for such purpose may do all things necessary for the public safety and convenience.

Union Committee to send schedule of roads to Local Board.

40. Every Union Committee shall, within such time as the Local Board to which it is subordinate may direct, forward to such Local Board a schedule of all village roads within the Union. Such schedule shall state the length and width of the roads, the number, description, and dimensions of bridges, and such other particulars as the Local Board may require.

The Union Committee may, of its own motion, at any time revise the said schedule, or may be required the Local Board so to do.

Local Board may entrust portions of district roads to management of Union Committees.

41. It shall be lawful for the Local Board to delegate to any Union Committee within the Local Government Circle subordinate to such Local Board, the management of so much of any road as may be situate within the Union of such Union Committee; and such Union Committee shall thereupon do all things necessary for the maintenance and repair of the portion of road so assigned to it, and shall be responsible to the Local Board in that behalf.

Pounds.

42. It shall be lawful for every Union Committee to establish and maintain a pound within the Union under the provisions of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871, and every Union Committee shall exercise, in respect of the establishment and management of such pound, the functions of the Magistrate of the District under sections 4, 5, 6, 12, 14, and 17 of the said Act. The Central Board shall exercise the functions of the Local Government under sections 4, 7, and 18 (a) of the said Act.

Primary schools.

43. Subject to such rules as may be laid down from time to time by the Lieutenant-Governor, the Union Committee shall be charged with, and be responsible for, the management, maintenance, and visiting of all primary schools within the Union, the appointment (subject to the provisions of section fifty-two) of the gurus of such schools, the payment of the salaries of such gurus, and the transmission to them of any rewards that may be granted by the Local Board.

Dispensaries.

44. The management, maintenance, and visiting of any dispensary within the Union may, with the consent of the Union Committee, and subject to such rules as the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time lay down, be entrusted to the Union Committee.

Registration of vital statistics.

45. Every Union Committee shall provide for the registration of births and deaths within the Union.

Sanitation.

46. It shall be the duty of the Union Committee to provide, so far as may be possible, for the sanitation of the Union, and, in the case of fairs and melas, to make special arrangements for this purpose.

Drains, &c., under control of Union Committee.

47. All drains and other conservancy works within the Union, which are not under the control of any other authority, shall be under the control of the Union Committee.

Local Board may entrust works of sanitation, &c., to Union Committee.

48. It shall be lawful for the Local Board to entrust to any Union Committee subordinate to such Local Board the execution of any work of sanitation, drainage or water-supply affecting the area in which such Union Committee has jurisdiction, and the Union Committee shall thereupon carry out such work subject to the provision of Part IV, Chapter II of this Act.

Union Committee may cleanse public tanks.

49. Any Union Committee may cleanse or repair any public tank, stream or well, or public drain situate within the jurisdiction of such Union Committee, and charge the cost of such cleansing or repairing to the Union Fund, or, if such fund be not sufficient, may levy the same from persons resident within the Union in the manner provided for the levying of the Chowkeedaree Tax under the Bengal Acts, VI of 1870 and I of 1871, or other Act for the time being in force.

Powers as to private tanks, &c.

50. The Union Committee may require the owner of any tank, stream or well used for drinking purposes to cleanse or fill up the same; or may require the owner or occupier of any land which appears to be in a state injurious to health or offensive to the neighbourhood to clear or drain it, or take such other action with respect thereto as may be deemed necessary. If such owner or occupier makes default in carrying out the said order, the Union Committee may perform the work, and may recover the expense thereby incurred from such owner. Such expense shall be recoverable in the manner provided by any law for the time being in force for the recovery of public demands:

Provided that the Union Committee shall take no action under this section until after the expiry of thirty days from the date on which notice of the work required to be done shall have been served upon the owner of the tank, stream or well, or the owner or occupier of the land:

Provided further that when the cost of carrying out any order under this section shall be estimated as likely to exceed the sum of one hundred rupees, the Union Committee shall not issue such order without the previous consent of the Local Board.

Joint Union Committees.

51. Any Union Committee may, from time to time, with the consent of the Local Board to which it is subordinate, concur with any other Union Committee or Committees, in the same Local Government Circle, in appointing out of their respective bodies Joint Committees for any purpose in which they are jointly interested, and in delegating to any such Joint Committee any power which might be exercised by either or any of the Union Committees, and in framing or modifying regulations as to the proceedings of any such Joint Committee.

It shall be lawful for the Local Board to associate not more than two of its members with any joint Union Committee appointed under this section.

If any dispute arises between two or more Union Committees acting under this section, the decision thereon of the Local Board shall be final.

Appointment of officers.

52. The Union Committee may, from time to time, appoint all such subordinate officers and servants, as may be necessary to assist in carrying out this Act, and may, from time to time, remove any of such persons and appoint others in his place;

And may, with the sanction of the Local Board, fix the allowances of such persons, and pay out of the Union Fund such allowances to the said persons respectively, or in case of absence on leave, such portion thereof as it shall think reasonable.

The Local Board may, by order in writing, for reasons to be specified in such order, require any Union Committee subordinate to it, to dismiss any of the persons appointed by such Union Committee under this section, and the Union Committee shall thereupon dismiss the person or persons mentioned in such order.

PART IV.

Of the Duties and Powers of Local Boards.

CHAPTER I.

General.

Operation of Chapters I and II.

53. The provisions of the first and second Chapters of this Part shall be in force as regards every Local Board, unless and until the Central Board shall otherwise direct.

Operation of Chapter III.

No provision contained in Chapter III of this Part shall apply to any Local Board unless and until it has been expressly extended thereto by the Central Board by order published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Election of Chairman and Vice-Chairman.

Election of Chairman and Vice-Chairman.

54. Every Local Board shall, at a meeting, elect its Chairman and Vice-Chairman. The election of the Chairman shall be subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor.

Status and tenure of office of Chairman and Vice-Chairman.

55. The Chairman and Vice-Chairman elected under the last preceding section, if not already members of the Local Board of which they have been elected Chairman and Vice-Chairman respectively, shall, from the date of the confirmation of his election as regards the Chairman, and from the date of his election as regards the Vice-Chairman, during their respective terms of office, enjoy all the rights and privileges of members of such Board. They shall hold office until the expiration of the term for which such Board shall have been elected.

Chairman and Vice-Chairman eligible for re election.

56. Every Chairman and Vice-Chairman shall be eligible for re-election, and may at any time be removed from the office of Chairman or Vice-Chairman by a resolution of the Board, in favour of which not less than two-thirds of the whole number of members of the Board shall have given their votes in person.

Every resolution removing a Chairman shall be subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor.

Election of Chairman or Vice-Chairman for unexpired term of office.

57. If any Chairman or Vice-Chairman shall be unable to complete his full term of office, the vacancy caused by his resignation, or removal, or death, shall be filled by the election of another person, and the person so elected shall fill such vacancy for the unexpired remainder of the term for which such Chairman or Vice-Chairman would otherwise have continued in office.

Chairman to have powers of Board in certain cases.

58. Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the Chairman of every Local Board shall have power on behalf of the Local Board to do any acts or pass any orders which the Board might legally do or pass and may, with the sanction of the Board, delegate all or any of such powers to the Vice-Chairman:

Provided that it shall be lawful for the Central Board to direct that certain acts shall not be done, and certain orders shall not be passed, save by the Local Board in meeting assembled.

Their mode of transacting business.

Local Board to have an office.

59. The Local Board shall have an office at such place within the Local Government Circle in and for which it shall have been appointed, as may be directed by the Central Board, and shall meet for the transaction of business at least once in every month.

Business to be conducted subject to rules framed by Central Board.

60. The business of the Local Board shall be conducted subject to such rules as may from time to time be framed by the Central Board.

Two kinds of meetings.

61. There shall be two kinds of meetings for the transaction of business, namely, special meetings and ordinary meetings.

What are special meetings.

62. Meetings of the following descriptions shall be special meetings:—

(1) Any meeting convened by the Chairman under section sixty-four;

(2) For the election of a Chairman or Vice-Chairman under section fifty-four;

(3) For determining the salary of the Surveyor to the Local Board under section one hundred and twelve;

(4) For the election of a Surveyor to the Local Board under section one hundred and eleven;

(5) For determining the details of establishment, and the salaries to be attached to each office under section sixty-nine;

(6) For making rules for leave of absence under section seventy, and for pensions and gratuities under section seventy-one;

(7) For considering and passing the general statement under section seventy-five, or any revised or supplemental statement under sections seventy seven and seventy-eight;

(8) For preparing and framing an estimate of income and expenditure, section seventy-five;

(9) For amending any such estimate under section seventy-seven;

All other meetings shall be ordinary meetings.

President at meetings.

63. The Chairman, or, in case of his absence at the time appointed for the meeting, the Vice-Chairman, shall preside at every meeting of the Local Board. In the absence of both the Chairman and Vice-Chairman, the members present may choose one of their number to be President of such meeting.

Meeting to be called on requisition.

64. The Chairman, or, in case of his absence, the Vice-Chairman, may, whenever he thinks fit, and shall, upon a requisition made in writing and signed by not less than one-third of the members, convene a meeting.

Notice of meeting.

65. At least five days' notice in writing of every meeting shall be given to each member. Every notice shall state the business to be transacted at the meeting, and a copy of all papers connected with such business shall be supplied to each member with the notice of the meeting. No business other than that so stated shall be transacted at such meeting, except with the permission of the meeting.

Quorum.

66. (1) No business shall be transacted at any special meeting unless at least one-fourth of the total number of members forming the Local Board at the time of the meeting are present at the commencement and close of such business; and no business shall be transacted at an ordinary meeting unless at least three members are so present.

Delegation of powers to Sub-Committee.

(2) The Local Board may delegate any of its powers to Sub-Committees consisting of such member or members of its body as it thinks fit. Any Sub-Committee so formed shall, in the exercise of the powers delegated, conform to any regulations that may be imposed upon it by the Local Board.

Adjournment, voting, &c., of Local Board.

(3) The Local Board may hold meetings and adjourn as it thinks proper. Questions at any meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present, and in case of an equal division of votes, the Chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

Adjourned meeting.

67. If at the time appointed for a special meeting, or within one hour thereafter, a quorum is not present, the meeting shall stand adjourned till some future day to be appointed by the Chairman or Vice-Chairman of the Local Board, and five days' notice of such adjourned meeting shall be given. The members present at such adjourned meeting shall form a quorum, whatever their number may be.

Minute-book to be kept.

68. The minutes of the proceedings of every meeting shall be recorded in the English language in a book to be kept for that purpose in the office of the Local Board, and any person resident in, or owning or holding land in, the Local Government Circle, may at all reasonable times inspect and examine such book without payment of any fee, and may obtain a certified copy of any extract therefrom on payment of such fees as the Local Board may direct.

A copy of the minutes of every meeting shall be sent to the officer in charge of the sub-division in which the Local Government Circle is situate, or if the Local Government Circle extends beyond the limits of one sub-division, to the Magistrate of the District. If the Local Government Circle is situate wholly or in part in the sudder sub-division, such copy shall be sent to the Magistrate of the District.

At the request of any member of the Local Board who is not acquainted with the English language, the Chairman shall cause to be delivered to such member an abstract of the minutes of any meeting in the vernacular of the district.

Establishments.

Establishments and salaries how to be fixed.

69. The Local Board, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, may determine and from time to time alter the details of the establishment of officers, clerks, and servants to be employed by it or by any Joint Local Board as hereinafter appointed, and the salary to be paid to each such officer, clerk or servant; provided

(1) that no appointment carrying a monthly salary of not less than one hundred rupees shall be created or abolished without the consent of the Central Board, and that every nomination to such an appointment shall be subject to confirmation by the Central Board;

(2) that the aggregate salaries and allowances in any one year of the establishment employed by any Local Board for the purpose of Chapter II of this Part, together with a proportionate share of the cost of the general establishment of such Board, shall not exceed twenty-five per centum on the total amount available for expenditure by such Board upon public works during the year;

(3) that every Local Board shall be required to conform to such general rules regarding the qualifications to be required of candidates for employment as may from time to time be laid down by the Central Board.

Leave of absence to officers.

70. The Local Board shall, subject to the provisions of the last preceding section, make such rules as to leave of absence and absentee allowances as it from time to time may think fit for its own officers and servants.

Pensions, gratuities, &c.

71. The Local Board may, with the approval of the Central Board, make rules for pensions and gratuities to be granted and paid out of the Circle Fund to its officers and servants, and may from time to time, with the like approval, repeal, alter, or add to such rules:

Provided that no officer shall be entitled to any pension or gratuity under this Act from the Circle Fund of any Local Government Circle in respect of any period during which he was not serving under the Local Board of such Local Government Circle:

Provided also that no officer lent by Government, and contributing from his salary to any pension fund, shall be entitled to claim any pension from the Circle Fund.

Their functions.

Mode of executing contracts.

72. The Local Board may, through its Chairman or Vice-Chairman, enter into and execute any contract necessary for the purposes of this Act:

Provided that every contract made on behalf of the Local Board in respect of any sum exceeding five hundred rupees, or involving a value exceeding five hundred rupees, shall be sanctioned by the Local Board at a meeting, and shall be in writing, and signed by at least two of the members of the Local Board, one of whom shall be the Chairman or Vice-Chairman.

Unless so executed, such contract shall not be binding on the Local Board.

Penalty on members and officers being pecuniarily interested in contracts.

73. No member, officer or servant of the Local Board shall be in any wise pecuniarily interested in any contract or work made with, or executed for, the Local Board; and if any such member, officer or servant be so interested, he shall be incapable of afterwards continuing to be a member of the Local Board, or of holding or continuing in any office or employment under the Local Board, and shall be liable to a fine of five hundred rupees:

Exception.

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply to any person by reason only of his being a shareholder in any registered or incorporated company which may enter into any contract with the Local Board, or execute any work for the Local Board, if such person shall, at or before the time of any such contract being made or tendered for, declare to the Local Board the extent of his interest in such Company, and, if he be an officer or servant of the Local Board, obtain the sanction of the Local Board to his continuing to be such officer or servant.

Conference of Local Boards to fix rate of road cess annually.

74. In every district, in which two or more Local Boards shall have been formed, there shall be held annually, at such time and place as the Central Board may appoint, a conference of all the Local Boards of the district, and every Local Board in the district shall delegate so many of its members as it deems fit, not being more than one for each thana within its Circle, to represent it at the annual conference.

Such delegates in conference assembled shall fix the rate at which the road cess shall be levied in the district during the ensuing year, and may, subject to the sanction of the Central Board as provided in section one hundred and forty-four, clause (6), appoint Joint Boards for the performance of any work which may affect two or more Circles within the district.

In every district in which there shall be only one Local Board, such Board shall hold a meeting annually, on a date to be fixed by the Central Board, for the purpose of fixing the rate at which the road cess shall be levied in the district during the ensuing year.

Estimates, reports, and statements to be submitted to Central Board.

75. Every Local Board shall submit annually to the Central Board, on or before such date as the Central Board may appoint in this behalf, a statement of the requirements and an estimate of the probable expenditure of the Local Board for the coming financial year, and a report of its proceedings and an account of its receipts and expenditure, for the past financial year, and shall also submit to the Central Board such other reports as the Central Board may from time to time require.

All such statements, estimates, and reports shall be prepared in English in such form as the Central Board shall direct. Copies of such statements and estimates shall be forwarded to the officer in charge of the Sub-Division in which the Local Government Circle is situate, or, if the Local Government Circle extends beyond the limits of one Sub-Division, to the Magistrate of the District. If the Local Government Circle is situate, wholly or in part, in the Sudder Sub-Division, such copies shall be sent to the Magistrate of the District.

Estimates subject to approval of Central Board.

76. Every estimate framed under the last preceding section shall be subject to the approval of the Central Board, and the Central Board may revise or modify such estimate, subject to the provisions of sections seventy-seven and seventy-eight.

Central Board may under certain circumstances alter estimate.

77. If such estimate shall have been approved by any number, being less than two-thirds of the members of the Local Board present at the meeting at which such estimate was adopted, the Central Board may, before approving such estimate, make such alterations as it shall think fit in the details or total of such estimate, or may return such estimate to the Local Board with instructions to make any such alterations in such details or total:

Provided that the Central Board shall not make, and shall not require the Local Board to make, otherwise than with its own consent, any such alterations as shall have the effect of raising the total of such estimate above the total of the sum estimated to be at the disposal of the Local Board for expenditure during the year in question, the cess being levied at the rate which may have been determined for such year by the annual conference of Local Boards of the district, or, if there be only one Local Board in the district, by such Local Board under section seventy-four.

On receipt of such instructions the Local Board shall proceed to make such alterations, and shall resubmit the estimate to the Central Board, who shall thereupon approve the estimate framed by the Local Board.

Procedure where estimate has been approved by not less than two-thirds of Local Board.

78. (1) If any estimate prepared under section seventy-five shall have been approved by a number not being less than two-thirds of the members of the Local Board present at the meeting at which such estimate was adopted, the Central Board may, before approving such estimate, make a communication to the Local Board, bringing to its notice any alterations which appear to it to be desirable to make in the details or total of such estimate; and on receipt of such communication, the Local Board shall proceed to reconsider such suggestions, and may either

(a) adopt such suggestions or any of them and revise its estimate accordingly, and submit such revised estimate for the sanction of the Central Board; or

(b) may adhere to its original estimate, and resubmit it to the Central Board with its reasons for adhering to the same.

(2) On receipt of such estimate so resubmitted the Central Board may sanction the estimate, or may make such alteration in the details of the estimate as it may think fit:

Provided that the Central Board shall in no case raise the total of such estimate above the total of the sum estimated to be at the disposal of the Local Board.

Rate determined to be reported to Lieutenant-Governor.

79. When the estimate prepared by the Local Board shall have been approved by the Central Board under sections seventy-seven and seventy-eight the rate determined by the annual conference of Local Boards, or by the Local Board if there be only one such Board in the district, shall be reported by the Central Board to the Lieutenant-Governor, who shall cause the same to be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Estimates may be amended.

80. Any estimate prepared under section seventy-five and approved as hereinbefore provided may be amended or revised at any time with the sanction of the authority which originally approved such estimate, provided that the total of the estimate of expenditure as amended shall not exceed the total of the sums estimated to be available for expenditure during the year.

Books and records to be open for inspection of District Officers.

81. Every Local Board, and every Sub-Committee of Accounts of such Board, shall at all times permit the Commissioner, District Magistrate, and any Sub-Divisional Officer having jurisdiction within the Local Government Circle, to have access to all its books, proceedings, and records.

Local Boards may raise loans.

82. It shall be lawful for the Local Board, subject to the provisions of any law relating to the raising of loans by local authorities for the time being in force, to raise a loan for the purpose of carrying out any of the provisions of this Act, and, with the like sanction, to guarantee the payment of interest on such loan, and to form a sinking fund.

Pounds.

Local Board to manage pounds where no Union Committee exists.

83. Every Local Board may, in respect of such portions only of its Local Government Circle as are not under the jurisdiction of any Union Committee, establish and maintain pounds under the provisions of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871.

Every such Board shall be vested with the powers of the Magistrate of the District under sections 4, 5, 6, 12, 14, and 17 of the said Act, and the Central Board shall exercise the functions of the Local Government under sections 4, 7, and 18(a) of the said Act.

Ferries.

Public ferries vested in Local Board.

84. All public ferries situate within the limits of any Local Government Circle shall forthwith become vested in the Local Board of such Local Government Circle.

Local Board may lease its ferries or manage them direct.

85. Subject to such rules as the Central Board, with the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor, may make in this behalf, and subject to any law for governing public ferries for the time being in force in Bengal, every Local Board in which a public ferry shall become vested under the provisions of the last preceding section may either retain such ferry under its own immediate management, or place it under the management of an Union Committee, and levy, or authorize such Union Committee to levy, such tolls on persons using the same, as the Central Board may from time to time approve; or lease such ferry on farm, to such person or persons, for such period, and on such terms, as it thinks fit:

Provided that the lessee of any such public ferry shall not be entitled to charge on persons using the same any tolls in excess of such rates as may be approved by the Central Board.

Local Board to provide establishment, boats, &c., for working ferries.

86. Any Local Board in which a public ferry may become vested under section eighty-four shall (subject to the provisions of section sixty-nine) provide such establishment, boats, landing stages, and appliances, and shall do all things necessary to provide for the safety and convenience of travellers and the safety of property to be conveyed in such ferry, or may require the lessee of such ferry to provide and do the same.

When a public ferry shall have been placed under the management of any Union Committee under the provisions of the last preceding section, the Local Board may require such Union Committee to make such provision, and to do such things as aforesaid.

Cancellation of ferry lease, &c.

87. Every lease of a ferry given by a Local Board, as hereinbefore provided, shall be liable to be cancelled at once, if it shall appear to the Local Board, at a meeting, that the lessee has failed to make due provision for the convenience or safety of the public within fifteen days after being required to do so by a notice in writing from the Local Board.

On the cancelment of a lease, the Local Board may take possession of all boats and other appliances which have been used by the lessee in the working of the ferry; and may either retain the same permanently on payment of a fair price to the proprietor, or may retain them for such time as may be necessary, not exceeding three months, until it can make arrangements for such other boats and appliances as may be necessary, in which case the Local Board shall pay a fair price to the owners for the use of the said boats and appliances:

Provided that within a week of taking such possession the Local Board shall be bound to give notice to the said lessee of its intention to retain the said boats and appliances either permanently, or for a period to be specified in the notice.

Local Board may establish new or close old ferries.

88. The Local Board may, with the consent of the Central Board, establish a new ferry at any place within its Local Government Circle, and every such ferry, when established, shall become vested in the Local Board, and shall be subject to such of the provisions of this chapter as refer to ferries.

The Local Board may, with the like consent, close any existing ferry which has become vested in it under the provisions of section eighty-four, or may direct that such ferry shall be removed to such other place as it thinks fit.

Central Board may make rules as to public ferries.

89. It shall be lawful for the Central Board, with the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor, from time to time, to make rules consistent with the provisions of the five last preceding sections for the guidance of Local Boards in which public ferries have become vested under section eighty-four, and for the apportionment of the profits of such ferries between any two or more local authorities, and such rules from time to time to alter, modify or revoke.

Act to be read with Regulation VI of 1819 and Act I (B.C.) of 1866.

90. The six last preceding sections, so far as is consistent with the tenor thereof, shall be read with, and shall form a portion of, Regulation VI of 1819 of the Bengal Code and the Bengal Act, I of 1866. Every Local Board shall, for the purposes of the said sections, have and exercise the functions of the Magistrate of the district under the said Regulation and Act.

Education.

Local Board to have management of schools.

91. Subject to the provisoes hereinafter contained, every Local Board shall be charged with, and be responsible for, the management, maintenance, and visiting of all schools within its Local Government Circle, the appointment (subject to the provisions of section sixty-nine) of all masters and assistant masters of such schools, and the payment of the salaries of such masters and assistant masters: Provided that—

Saving of powers of Union Committees.

(1) Nothing in this section shall be taken to affect the powers of any Union Committee in respect to primary schools within its Union. Such powers shall be exercised by the Union Committee, subject to the general control of the Local Board to which it is subordinate.

Saving of powers of Managing Committee of aided school.

(2) Notwithstanding anything in this Act contained, any Committee which has been, or may hereafter be, appointed to manage any school receiving a grant-in-aid from the Government, shall continue to exercise, in the management of such school, all the powers which may be vested in it by the Lieutenant-Governor.

Local Board to conform to Government rules.

(3) The Local Board shall conform to such rules as the Lieutenant-Governor may, from time to time, make in respect to the allotment of grants to primary and secondary schools, the appointment of teachers and sub-inspectors, the standards of education, the conduct of examinations, the award of scholarships, and all other matters connected with the administration of such schools.

Government may exclude any schools from management of Local Board.

92. Notwithstanding anything in the last preceding section contained, the Lieutenant-Governor may at any time declare that a particular school, or class of schools, shall be excluded from the management of the Local Board within whose Local Government Circle such school or class of schools is situated, and may make such other order regarding the management thereof as he thinks fit.

The Lieutenant-Governor may, from time to time, extend, modify or revoke any order made under this section.

High English Schools may be placed under Joint Committee.

93. It shall be lawful for the Central Board to declare that the management, maintenance, and visiting of any High English School situated within a town which has been constituted a municipality under the Bengal Municipal Act of shall be entrusted to a Joint Committee, consisting partly of members delegated by Commissioners of such municipality and partly of members delegated by such Local Boards as may be named in the order.

Every order issued under this section shall specify the number of members to be delegated, and the proportion of the cost of maintenance of the school to be provided, by each of the local authorities named therein.

Every Joint Committee appointed under this section shall have the same powers, and be subject to the same liabilities, as are by this chapter imposed on Local Boards.

If any dispute arise between two or more local authorities acting under this section, the decision thereon of the Central Board shall be final.

Medical.

Public dispensaries or hospitals may be vested in Local Board.

94. The Lieutenant-Governor may declare, by notification published in the Calcutta Gazette, that any public charitable dispensary or hospital, situated within a Local Government Circle, shall be vested in the Local Board of such Circle. Such dispensary or hospital shall thereupon become vested in the Local Board, and the Local Board shall be charged with the management and maintenance thereof.

The Lieutenant-Governor may at any time revoke any order made under this section.

Local Board may establish dispensaries, &c.

95. Any Local Board may provide for the use of the inhabitants of the Local Government Circle, dispensaries, hospitals or temporary places for the reception of the sick, and for that purpose may, itself build such dispensaries, hospitals or places of reception; or contract for the use of any such dispensary, hospital or place of reception, or of any part thereof; or enter into any agreement with any person having the management of any hospital for the reception of the sick inhabitants of the Local Government Circle, on payment of such annual or other sum as may be agreed on.

96. Two or more Local Boards may, with the consent of the Central Board, combine in providing a common dispensary, hospital or place of reception, and, with the like consent, fix the proportions of the cost thereof to be borne by them respectively.

Local Board may contribute to cost of hospital outside Circle.

97. A Local Board may, with the consent of the Central Board, contribute such annual or other sum as may be agreed on towards the cost of the maintenance of any dispensary or hospital situated outside the Circle, but which is habitually used by the inhabitants of the Circle.

98. Any expenses incurred by a Local Board in maintaining in a hospital, or in a temporary place for the reception of the sick, (whether or not belonging to the Local Government Circle), a patient who is not a pauper, shall be deemed to be a debt due from such patient to the Local Board, and may be recovered from him at any time within six months after his discharge from such hospital or place of reception, or from his estate in the event of his dying in such hospital or place.

Recovery of cost of maintenance of patient in a hospital.

99. A Local Board may, with the sanction of the Central Board, provide, or contract with any person to provide, a temporary supply of medicine and medical assistance for the poorer inhabitants of the Local Government Circle.

Power to provide temporary supply of medicine.

100. Every Local Board, in exercising the powers vested in it by the six last preceding sections, shall conform to such rules as the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time make in that behalf.

Local Board to conform to Government rules.

101. Subject to such rules as may from time to time be made by the Lieutenant-Governor, it shall be lawful for the Central Board to make rules, consistent with the provisions of this Act, for the purposes of fixing the standard of professional qualification to be required of medical officers employed by Local Board, of regulating the duties of such medical officers, the inspection of dispensaries and hospitals, the forms of returns and reports to be made by the Local Board, and generally in respect to the duties imposed on Local Boards by sections ninety-four, ninety-five, ninety-six, ninety-seven, ninety-eight, and ninety-nine;

Power of Central Board to make rules.

And such rules, from time to time, to add to, modify or revoke.

All rules made under this section, and all additions thereto, or modifications or revocations thereof, shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

102. It shall be the duty of the Local Board to collate the statistics of births and deaths supplied by the Union Committees under section forty-five into such registers, and to submit such returns, as the Central Board may from time to time require, and generally to compel Union Committees to perform the duties imposed upon them by the said section.

Local Board to collate statistics supplied by Union Committees.

Joint Local Boards.

103. Notwithstanding anything in section seventy-four contained, a Local Board may from time to time, with the consent of the Central Board, concur with any other Local Board or Boards in appointing out of their respective bodies Joint Boards for any purpose in which they are jointly interested, and in delegating to any such Joint Boards any power which might be exercised by any or either of the Local Boards, and in framing and modifying regulations as to the proceedings of any such Joint Board.

Joint Local Boards may be constituted.

If any dispute arise between two or more Local Boards acting under this section, the decision thereon of the Central Board shall be final.

104. All Joint Local Boards constituted under the last preceding section shall be subject to the provisions of this chapter so far as the same are applicable.

Provisions of this chapter applicable to Joint Boards.

Bye-laws.

105. A Local Board may frame such bye-laws as it deems fit, not being inconsistent with this Act, and may by any bye-laws made by it, under this Act, impose on offenders against the same such reasonable penalties as it thinks fit, not exceeding the sum of fifty rupees for each offence, and in case of a continuing offence a further penalty not exceeding twenty rupees for each day after written notice of the offence from the Local Board.

Power to impose penalties on breach of bye-laws.

Nothing in the provisions of any Act incorporated herewith shall authorize the imposition or recovery, under any bye-laws made in pursuance of such provisions, of any greater penalty than the penalties in this section specified.

106. Bye-laws made by a Local Board under this Act shall not take effect unless and until they have been submitted to and confirmed by the Central Board, which Board is hereby empowered to allow or disallow the same, as it may think proper; nor shall such bye-laws be confirmed—

Confirmation of bye-laws.

Unless one month at least before the making of the application, notice of the intention to apply for confirmation has been given in one or more of the local newspapers circulated within the Local Government Circle to which such bye-laws relate, or if there be no such newspapers, then in such manner as the Local Board may direct; and unless for one month at least before any such application a copy of the proposed bye-laws has been kept at the office of the Local Board, and has been open during office hours thereat to the inspection of the inhabitants of the Circle to which such bye-laws relate, without fee or reward.

The Local Board shall, on the application of any inhabitant of the circle, furnish him with a copy of such proposed bye-laws, on payment of four annas for every hundred words contained in the copy.

A bye-law requiring confirmation by the Central Board shall not require confirmation, allowance or approval by any other authority.

107. All bye-laws made by a Local Board under this Act shall be printed in the vernacular of the district and hung up in the office of the Local Board; and a copy thereof shall be delivered to any inhabitant of the Circle on his applying for the same.

Bye-laws to be printed, &c.

CHAPTER II.—OF LOCAL WORKS.

Roads and Water-channels.

108. On the commencement of this Act, all roads, bridges, tanks, ghats, wells, channels, and drains in any Local Government Circle (not vested in any Union Committee under section thirty-seven, not being private property, and not being reserved by Government to be maintained at the public expense), now existing or which shall hereafter be made, and the pavements, stones, and other materials thereof, and all erections, materials, implements, and other things provided therefor, shall vest in and belong to the Local Board.

Public roads, &c., vested in the Local Board.

Local Board to send particulars as to roads to Central Board.

109. Every Local Board shall, within such period as the Central Board may fix, submit to the Central Board a schedule of all roads which have become vested in such Local Board under the last preceding section. Such schedule shall specify the length and width of the roads, the number, description, and dimensions of bridges, and shall contain any other particulars that the Central Board may require.

The Local Board may from time to time revise such schedule, or may be required by the Central Board so to do.

Local Board may, with consent of owners, take over and repair roads, &c.

110. The Local Board at a meeting may agree with the person in whom the property in any road, bridge, tank, ghat, well, channel or drain is vested to take over the property therein, and after such agreement may declare, by notice in writing put up thereon or near thereto, that such road, bridge, tank, ghat, well, channel or drain has been transferred to the Local Board.

Thereupon the property therein shall vest in the Local Board, and such road, bridge, tank, ghat, well, channel or drain shall thenceforth be repaired and maintained out of the Circle Fund.

Local Board to appoint Surveyor.

111. Subject to the provisions of section sixty-nine every Local Board shall forthwith appoint a properly qualified person to be Surveyor to such Local Board, or shall combine with any other local authority or authorities in appointing such person to be Joint Surveyor to the combining local authorities.

Any arrangement between two or more local authorities, made under this section, may be determined by any of them after such notice as the Central Board may prescribe.

Salary of Surveyor to Local Board.

112. The Local Board at a special meeting shall determine the salary which it is prepared to give to the Surveyor to the Local Board, and shall report the same to the Central Board, who may approve such salary, or require the Local Board to increase or to reduce it. The salary so determined and approved may from time to time be altered by the Local Board with the approval of the Central Board.

When two or more local authorities shall have appointed a Joint Surveyor under section one hundred and eleven, such local authorities shall determine the salary to be given to such Joint Surveyor, and the proportions thereof to be borne by them respectively, and shall report the same to the Central Board, who may approve such salary and proportions, or require the combining Boards to increase or reduce the salary.

Appointment or dismissal of Surveyor to be subject to approval of Central Board.

113. Every appointment or dismissal of a Surveyor shall be subject to the approval of the Central Board.

Disputes to be appoint to Central Board.

114. Any dispute arising between two or more local authorities acting under the provisions of sections one hundred and eleven or one hundred and twelve shall be referred to the Central Board, whose decision thereon shall be final.

Local Board to appoint overseers, &c.

115. Subject to the provisions of section sixty-nine the Local Board may for the purposes of this chapter appoint such and so many subordinate officers as it may think necessary; all such persons shall be subordinate to, and under the orders of, the Surveyor to the Local Board.

Duties of Surveyor to Local Board.

116. It shall be the duty of the Surveyor to the Local Board to prepare all designs, estimates, and plans which the Local Board may require, and to carry out such works as it may direct.

Local Board to construct and maintain roads, &c.

117. It shall be the duty of the Local Board to provide for the repair and maintenance of roads, bridges, water-channels, and other means and appliances for facilitating communications which have been taken charge of by the Local Board under this Act, or towards which it may have agreed to contribute; and the construction of new roads, bridges, water-channels, and other means of communication.

Local Board may contribute towards means of communication, &c.

118. It shall be lawful for the Local Board to take measures for, or to contribute towards, the construction, provision, repair, and maintenance of, any means and appliances for facilitating communication within the Local Government Circle or between the Local Government Circle and other Local Government Circles;

the planting of trees by the roadside; and the construction and maintenance of any means and appliances for improving the supply of drinking-water, or for providing or improving drainage:

Provided that it shall be lawful for any Local Board, under the provisions of section forty-one, to delegate to any Union Committee within the Local Government Circle the duty of repairing and maintaining so much of any public road as may be situate within its Union.

Duties of District and Divisional Engineers towards Local Boards.

119. Any officer whom the Lieutenant-Governor may appoint to be District Engineer and Deputy Inspector of Local Works of any district or districts, shall, subject to such rules as the Lieutenant-Governor may make in that behalf, act as Consulting Engineer to all the Local Boards within the district or districts to which he shall have been appointed, and prepare all plans, estimates, and designs for local works which, in the opinion of any officer whom the Lieutenant-Governor may appoint to be Divisional Engineer and Inspector of Local Works for the division within which the Local Government Circles of such Board are situate, may be beyond the professional qualifications of the Surveyor to any such Local Board.

Divisional and District Engineers to inspect works, &c.

120. The Divisional Engineer and Inspector of Local Works, or the District Engineer and Deputy Inspector of Local Works may inspect all works which may be under construction by, or under the charge of, the Local Boards or Union Committees within their respective divisions and districts.

For the purposes of such inspection the Divisional Engineer and Inspector of Local Works and the District Engineer and Deputy Inspector of Local Works may at all times enter on, or cause to be entered on, any immoveable property belonging to such Boards or Committees, or any work in progress under their direction, and may require them to furnish such statements, estimates, and reports as they think fit.

Reports of such inspection shall be prepared, and copies thereof shall be forwarded to the Boards through the Magistrate of the district.

In all matters of professional and departmental detail the Boards shall be guided by the opinions of such inspecting officers.

Powers of Boards under sections 117 and 118 to be subject to approval of plans.

121. The powers of the Local Board under the provisions of sections one hundred and seventeen and one hundred and eighteen shall be subject to such rules as the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time make, regarding the submission for approval of plans, designs, and specifications.

Tramways and Railways.

Local Board may construct tramways.

122. It shall be lawful for any Local Board, either singly or in combination with any other local authority to construct and maintain within, or partly within and partly without, its own Local Government Circle, a railway or tramway under the provisions of any law for governing the construction of railways or tramways for the time being in force in Bengal, and to do all lawful acts which may be necessary in that behalf.

Local Board may raise loan to construct tramway.

123. The Local Board may, for the purposes of the last preceding section, borrow and take up at interest, on credit of the local cesses, any sums of money necessary for defraying the expenses of such construction and maintenance, and may guarantee the payment of interest on such loans, or may subscribe to any debenture loan raised by the Government of India or by any local authority for the construction or maintenance of any railway or tramway, which, in the opinion of such Local Board, is likely to be of direct benefit to the Local Government Circle of such Local Board.

Last two sections to be read with Bengal Tramways Act.

124. The last two preceding sections shall, so far as is consistent with the tenor thereof, be read with and form a part of the Bengal Tramways Act of 1883.

Sanction of Central Board required to proceedings under these sections.

125. No proceedings of a Local Board under the last three preceding sections, except such proceedings as are matters of routine, shall be valid unless and until they shall have received the sanction of the Central Board.

Buildings.

Government may put public buildings under charge of Local Board.

126. The Lieutenant-Governor may, with the consent of the Local Board from time to time, by notification in the Calcutta Gazette, direct that any public building, which is under the control of the Government, and which is situate within a Local Government Circle, shall be placed under the charge of the Local Board for the purpose of alteration, repair or maintenance, or entrust a Local Board with the construction of a new building.

Every order made under this section shall specify the conditions upon which such building is placed under the charge of, or is to be constructed by, the Local Board :

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply to any building which shall have become vested in a Local Board under any other section of this Act.

Sanitation.

Local Boards to provide for sanitation.

127. Subject to any rules that may from time to time be made by the Lieutenant-Governor or by the Central Board, it shall be the duty of every Local Board to provide, so far as may be possible, for the proper sanitation of so much of its Local Government Circle as is not included in any Union, and to incur such expenses or undertake such liabilities as may be necessary in that behalf.

Every Local Board shall have and exercise, as regards such portions of its Local Government Circle as are not situate within any Union, the same powers and duties as are vested in or imposed upon Union Committees under the provisions of sections forty-six, forty-seven, forty-eight, forty-nine, and fifty of this Act.

Provision for obtaining order for cleansing offensive ditches lying near to, or forming boundaries of, circles.

128. Where any water-course or open ditch lying near to or forming the boundary between the Circle of any Local Board and any adjoining Local Government Circle is foul and offensive, so as injuriously to affect the Circle of such Local Board, the Central Board may, on the application of such Local Board, call upon the Local Board of such adjoining Circle to shew cause why an order should not be made for cleaning such water-course or open ditch, and for executing such permanent or other structural works as may appear to the Central Board to be necessary; and the Central Board, after considering the cause shewn (if any), or ex parte in case of the default of the Local Board to shew cause, may make such order with reference to the execution of the works, and the persons by whom the same shall be executed, and by whom and in what proportion the costs of such works shall be paid, and also as to the amount thereof and the time and mode of payment, as to the Central Board may seem reasonable.

Local Board may require Union Committee to cleanse public tanks.

129. The Local Board may require any Union Committee subordinate to it within eight days or such longer period as the Local Board may fix, to cleanse or repair any public tank, stream or well, or public drain within the Union of such Union Committee, and to charge the cost of such cleansing or repairing to the Union Fund, or, if such fund be not sufficient, to levy the same from persons resident within the Union in such manner as may be provided in any Act for the levying of the Chowkeedaree Tax for the time being in force in the district.

If the Union Committee make default in carrying out such order, the Local Board may itself perform the same, and may require the Union Committee to make good the expense thereby incurred.

Local Board may direct Union Committee to call upon owner to cleanse private tanks, &c.

130. The Local Board may direct any Union Committee subordinate to it to call upon the owner of any tank, stream or well used for drinking purposes to cleanse or fill up the same, or to call upon the owner or occupier of any land which appears to be in a state injurious to health or offensive to the neighbourhood to clear or drain the same, or to take such other action with respect thereto as it may think fit. If such owner makes default in carrying out the said order the Local Board may authorize the Union Committee to perform the work, and to recover the expense thereby incurred from such owner: Such expense shall be recoverable in the manner provided by any law for the time being in force for the recovery of public demands.

Provided that, when the cost of carrying out any order under this section shall be estimated as likely to exceed the sum of one thousand rupees, the Local Board shall not issue such order without the consent of the Central Board.

General powers for supplying circle with water.

131. Any Local Board, may, with the consent of, and subject to such limits of cost as shall be imposed by, the Central Board, provide its Local Government Circle, or any place therein, or any part thereof, with a supply of water proper and sufficient for public and private purposes, and, for those purposes or any of them, may—

(1) construct and maintain water-works, dig wells or tanks, and do any other neces ary acts; and

(2) take on lease or hire any water-works, and purchase any water-works, or any water, or right to take or convey water, either within or without its Local Government Circle; and

(3) contract with any person for a supply of water.

Penalty on obstructing or diverting water.

132. Any person who shall unlawfully flush, draw off, divert or take water from any water-works, well or tank belonging to or under the management or control of a Local Board, or from any water or stream by which such water-works are supplied, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees.

Local Board to appoint Sanitary Inspector.

133. Every Local Board may appoint a properly qualified person to be its Sanitary Inspector, and shall, subject to the provisions of sections sixty-nine and one hundred and thirty-five, fix the salary of such Sanitary Inspector, and the details of the establishment subordinate to him.

The Local Board may, with the consent of the Central Board, dismiss its Sanitary Inspector.

CHAPTER III.

MISCELLANEOUS POWERS AND DUTIES OF LOCAL BOARDS.

Vaccination.

Local Boards to have supervision of vaccination within their Circles.

134. Every Local Board to which the provisions of this and the next four succeeding sections shall have been extended, shall, within its Circles, be charged with the appointment, payment, management, and supervision of all public vaccinators.

Local Board to appoint Inspectors of Vaccination.

135. Every such Local Board shall appoint a properly qualified person to be Inspector of Vaccination within its Local Government Circle, and shall, subject to the provisions of sections sixty-nine and one hundred and thirty-three, fix the salary to be paid to such person.

Every Inspector of Vaccination appointed under this section shall, within the Local Government Circle, exercise the powers and perform the duties assigned to the Superintendent of Vaccination under the provisions of the Bengal Vaccination Act, 1880.

The Inspector of Vaccination shall also perform the duty of Sanitary Inspector to the Local Board under the provisions of section one hundred and thirty-three of this Act.

Local Board to have powers of Magistrate in Circles to which the vaccination Act extends.

136. In every Local Government Circle to which the Bengal Vaccination Act, 1880, has been, or may hereafter be, extended, the Local Board shall have the powers of the Magistrate of the district under section twenty-five of the said Act.

Central Board to control vaccination and make rules.

137. Every Local Board to which the provisions of sections one hundred and thirty-four, one hundred and thirty-five, one hundred and thirty-six, one hundred and thirty-seven, and one hundred and thirty-eight shall have been extended shall, in the exercise of such provisions, be subject to the general control and supervision of the Central Board. It shall be lawful for the Central Board, with the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor, from time to time, to make rules consistent with this Act and with the Bengal Vaccination Act, 1880:

And such rules, with the like consent, from time to time to modify, add to or revoke.

Act to be read with the Bengal Vaccination Act.

138. The four last preceding sections, so far as is consistent with the tenor thereof, shall be read with, and form a part of, the Bengal Vaccination Act, 1880.

Of taking a Census.

Central Board may direct Local Boards to take a census.

139. It shall be lawful for the Central Board, with the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor, at any time to require a Local Board to take an account of the number of persons who, at the time of taking such account, shall be within the Local Government Circle of such Local Board and for that purpose to employ such and so many persons and incur such expenditure as the Central Board may direct.

140. Every Local Board which shall be required to take an account under the last preceding section shall, in taking such account, conform to any rules that may be made in that behalf by the Central Board with the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor, and to the provisions of any Act for regulating the taking of a census that may for the time being be in force in Bengal.

Powers for taking census.

Famine Relief.

141. Subject to such limit of expenditure as may be prescribed by the Central Board, every Local Board to which this section shall have been extended shall be authorized to take such measures as it thinks fit for the relief of famine within its Local Government Circle, and for that purpose may—

Local Boards to take relief measures in case of famine.

(1) Open and maintain such and so many relief works as may be necessary.

(2) Open and maintain such and so many temporary hospitals, poor-houses, orphanages, and places for the gratuitous distribution of food, as may be necessary.

(3) Employ such extra medical or other assistance as may be necessary.

(4) Combine with any other Local Board or Boards for all or any of such purposes.

Miscellaneous.

142. It shall be lawful for any Local Board, with the consent of the Central Board, and subject to any rules which may, from time to time, be made in that behalf by the Lieutenant-Governor, or by the Central Board with the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor, to Miscellaneous powers of Local Boards.

(1) Construct and maintain, at such places within its Local Government Circle as it thinks fit, staging bungalows for the use of travellers, and charge such fees for the use of such bungalows as it thinks fit:

Staging bungalows.

Provided that such fees shall in no case exceed the amount prescribed by the Central Board.

(2) Offer rewards, upon such scales as may be approved by the Central Board, for the destruction of noxious animals within the Local Government Circle.

Rewards for destruction of noxious animals.

(3) Establish and hold fairs and hâts within its Local Government Circle.

Fairs and hâts.

(4) Hold, within its Local Government Circle, from time to time, exhibitions of cattle, country produce, and agricultural implements, or local manufactures, and incur such expenditure and charge such fees in that behalf as may, from time to time, be sanctioned by the Central Board.

Exhibitions.

(5) Undertake and carry out any other local work likely to promote the health, comfort or convenience of the public and not provided for in any other chapter of this Act.

Works not otherwise provided for.

PART V.

Of the Duties and Powers of the Central Board.

143. The Lieutenant-Governor may appoint one or more persons to be Secretary or Secretaries of the Central Board.

Officers of Central Board.

The Central Board may from time to time appoint, for such period as it may think fit, such and so many Inspectors, Auditors, Clerks, and other subordinate officers as the Board may, with the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor, determine.

144. The Central Board shall be charged with the general control and supervision of the working of this Act, and for that purpose shall have power—

Central Board to have general control and supervision of local authorities.

(1) to constitute in any district to which this Act shall be extended, Unions and Union Committees and Local Government Circles and Local Boards under the provisions of Part I, Chapters I and II;

(2) to extend all or any of the provisions of this Act to any such Union Committees or Local Boards;

(3) to supersede or suspend any Union Committee under the provisions of section one hundred and fifty-three;

(4) subject to the provisions of section sixty-nine, to fix the establishments to be employed by any Local Board for the purposes of this Act, and the cost of such establishments;

(5) to fix the maximum amount of expenditure to be incurred by a Local Board in carrying out all or any of the provisions of this Act;

(6) to sanction the appointment for any of the purposes of this Act, and under the provisions hereinbefore contained, of Joint Local Boards; to fix the details of the establishment to be employed, and the maximum expenditure on work to be done, by such Joint Local Boards, and the proportion in which the cost of such establishment and works shall be borne by each of the combining Local Boards; and to give a decision, which shall be final, on any dispute that may arise between such Boards.

(7) To enter on and inspect, or to cause to be entered on and inspected, any immoveable property occupied by a local authority or any work in progress under its direction.

(8) To call for and inspect any record or other document which may be, for the purposes of this Act, in the possession or under the control of any local authority.

(9) To require any local authority to furnish such estimates, statements, accounts, and reports as it thinks fit; to revise such estimates, statements, accounts, and reports, and to return them for modification, alteration or correction.

(10) To make bye-laws for the general purposes of this Act, and to make rules and regulations for the general control of local authorities.

The Central Board may from time to time modify, add to or revoke any order made by it under this section; and every order made under clauses (1), (2), (3), (4), (6), or (10), together with any modification, addition to or revocation of such order, shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

145. The Lieutenant-Governor may, from time to time, limit the amount to which the Central Board shall be empowered to sanction expenditure by the Local Boards in the various departments of their duty under this Act. Subject to those limits the Central Board shall be empowered to sanction the amounts to be expended by Local Boards under any of the provisions of this Act.

Lieutenant-Governor to fix amount to which Central Board may sanction expenditure.

146. The Central Board may from time to time cause to be made such enquiries as are directed by this Act, and such enquiries as it deems fit, in relation to any matters concerning the public health in any place, or any matters with respect to which its sanction, approval or consent is required by this Act.

Power of Board to direct enquiries.

147. The Central Board may make orders as to the costs of enquiries and proceedings instituted by the said Board under this Act, and as to local authorities by which such costs shall be borne.

Orders as to costs of enquiries.

148. Inspectors of the Central Board shall, for the purposes of any enquiry directed by the Board, exercise such powers as the Board may direct.

Power of Inspectors of Central Board.

149. The Central Board, with the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor, may by notification in the Calcutta Gazette extend all or any of the provisions of Chapter III of Part IV of this Act, to any Local Board, and such provision or provisions shall take effect accordingly in the Local Government Circle of such Board from the date specified in the notification.

Central Board may extend provisions of Part IV, Chapter III, to any Local Board.

PART VI.

CONTROL.

Control over Union Committees.

150. (1) If any Union Committee makes default in the performance of any duty imposed on it by or under this Act, the Local Board may, by order in writing, fix a period for the performance of the duty.

Powers for Local Board to provide for performance of duty in default of Committee.

(2) If the duty is not performed within that period, the Local Board may appoint some person to perform it, and may provide for the expenses of, and incidental to, its performance, out of the funds appropriated to or for the purposes of the Union Committee.

151. The Local Board may at all times enter on and inspect, or cause to be entered on and inspected any immoveable property occupied by, or any work in progress under the orders of, any Union Committee in its Circle, and may suspend or prohibit the execution of any particular work.

Local Board may enter on and inspect works, &c., of Union Committee.

Any order made by a Local Board under this section, shall, with a copy of the reasons for making such order, be forwarded to the Central Board, and the Central Board may rescind the order, or direct that it continue in force, with or without modification, permanently or for such period as it thinks fit.

152. The Magistrate of the District or the Sub-Divisional Officer may at all times enter on and inspect, or cause to be entered on and inspected, any immoveable property occupied by, or any work in progress under the orders of, any Union Committee within their jurisdiction.

District Officers may inspect works.

153. If it shall appear to the Magistrate of the District or Sub-Divisional Officer that the execution of any order or resolution of any Union Committee within their jurisdiction, or the doing of any act which is about to be done, or is being done, by such Union Committee, is likely to cause injury or annoyance to the public, or to any class or body of persons, or to lead to a breach of the peace, such Magistrate or Sub-divisional Officer may, by order in writing, suspend the execution, or prohibit the doing, thereof.

District Officer may suspend works.

When any Magistrate of a District or Sub-Divisional Officer, makes any order under this section, he shall forthwith forward to the Local Board a copy of such order, with a statement of his reasons for making it.

154. If a Union Committee or Joint Union Committee is not competent to perform, or persistently makes default in the performance of the duties imposed on it by or under this Act or otherwise by law, or exceeds or abuses its powers, the Central Board may, with the previous approval of the Lieutenant-Governor, by an order published, with the reasons for making it, in the Calcutta Gazette, declare Committee to be incompetent or in default, or to have exceeded or abused its powers, as the case may be, and supersede it for a period to be specified in the order.

Powers to supersede Union Committee in case of incompetency, default or abuse of powers.

155. When any Union Committee shall have been superseded under the last preceding section the following consequences shall ensue:—

Consequences of supersession of Union Committee.

(a) All members of the Union Committee shall, as from the date of the order, vacate their offices as such members.

(b) All powers and duties of the Union Committee shall, during the period of supersession, be exercised by, and its property shall vest in, the Local Board of the Circle.

On the expiration of the period of supersession specified in the order, the Union Committee shall, subject to the provisions of sections nine and ten, be re-established by election, and the persons who vacated their offices under clause (a) shall not be deemed disqualified for election.

Control over Local Boards.

Local Boards to act under general guidance of Central Board.

156. All Local Boards shall act under the general guidance and instructions of the Central Board, carry out its orders, and receive and give due weight to the advice of its officers.

Procedure in case of dispute between Central and Local Board.

157. When any dispute or difference arises between the Central Board and a Local Board, the Central Board may refer the points of dispute or difference, or any other question arising between itself and such Local Board, to the Lieutenant-Governor, whose decision thereon shall be final.

District Officers may inspect works.

158. The Magistrate of the District and any Sub-Divisional Officer within whose jurisdiction any Local Government Circle is situated, shall have power at all times to enter on and inspect, or cause to be entered on and inspected, any immoveable property occupied by, or any work in progress under the orders of, the Local Board of such Local Government Circle.

District Officer may suspend work.

159. If it shall appear to the Magistrate of the District that the execution of any order or resolution of a Local Board within the jurisdiction of such Magistrate, or the doing of any act which is about to be done, or is being done, by such Local Board, is likely to cause injury or annoyance to the public, or to any class or body of persons, or to lead to a breach of the peace, such Magistrate may, by order in writing, suspend the execution, or prohibit the doing, thereof.

When any Magistrate of a District makes any order under this section, he shall forthwith forward to the Central Board a copy of such order, with a statement of his reasons for making it.

Power to provide for performance of duties in default of local authority.

160. (1) When the Central Board is informed on complaint made or otherwise, that a local authority has made default in performing any duty imposed on it by or under this Act, the Central Board, if satisfied after due enquiry that such local authority has been guilty of the alleged default, may, by an order in writing, fix a period for the performance of that duty.

(2) If that duty is not performed within the period so fixed, the Central Board may appoint some person to perform it, and may direct that the expense of performing it with a reasonable remuneration to the person appointed to perform it, shall be forthwith paid by the local authority.

(3) If the expense and remuneration are not so paid, the Central Board may make an order directing the person having the custody of the balance of the Circle Fund to pay the expense and remuneration, or as much thereof as is possible, from that balance, and, if the default has been made by any Union Committee, to recover such expense from the Union Fund.

Extraordinary powers of Central Board in case of emergency.

161. (1) In cases of emergency the Central Board may provide for the execution of any work, or the doing of any act, which a local authority is empowered to execute or do, and the immediate execution or doing of which is in its opinion necessary for the service or safety of the public, and may direct that the expense of executing the work or doing the act, with a reasonable remuneration to the person appointed to execute or do it, shall be forthwith paid by the local authority.

(2) If the expense and remuneration are not so paid, the Central Board may make an order directing the person having the custody of the balance of the Circle Fund to pay the expense and remuneration, or as much thereof as is possible, from that balance, and, if the default has been made by an Union Committee, to recover such expense from Union Fund.

Central Board may suspend Local Board.

162. It shall be lawful for the Central Board at any time to suspend the action of any Local Board in regard to any specific proceeding or work, pending further enquiry.

Power to suspend execution of orders, &c.

163. If, in the opinion of the Central Board, the execution of any order or resolution of a local authority, or the doing of any act which is about to be done, or is being done, is likely to cause injury or annoyance to the public, or to any class or body of persons, or to lead to a breach of the peace, it may, by order in writing, suspend the execution or prohibit the doing thereof.

Power to supersede Local Board or Union Committee in case of incompetency, default or abuse of powers.

164. If any Local Board or Joint Local Board is not competent to perform, or persistently makes default in the performance of the duties imposed on it by or under this Act or otherwise by law, or exceeds or abuses its powers, the Central Board may, with the previous approval of the Lieutenant-Governor, or the Lieutenant-Governor may of his own motion, by an order published, with the reasons for making it in the Calcutta Gazette, declare the Board or Joint Board to be incompetent, or in default, or to have exceeded or abused its powers, as the case may be, and supersede it for a period to be specified in the order.

Consequences of supersession of Local Board.

165. When any Local Board shall have been superseded under the last preceding section the following consequences shall ensue :—

(a) All members of the Board shall, as from the date of the order, vacate their offices as such members.

(b) All the powers and duties of the Board shall, during the period of supersession, be exercised and performed by such person or persons as the Lieutenant-Governor may direct.

(c) All property vested in such Board shall, during the period of supersession, vest in the Government.

On the expiration of the period of supersession specified in the order, the Board shall be re-established by appointment and election, and the persons who vacated their offices under clause (a) shall not be deemed disqualified for appointment or election.

Lieutenant-Governor to have general power of control.

166. All the authorities entrusted with the execution of this Act, shall exercise the powers and perform the duties by this Act assigned to them respectively, subject to the general control of the Lieutenant-Governor.

PART VII.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

167. If any member, officer or servant of a local authority, appointed under this Act, is, otherwise than as hereinbefore provided, directly or indirectly interested in any contract made with that authority, he shall be deemed to have committed an offence under the Indian Penal Code, section 168.

Power to make compensation out of the Local Fund.

168. Every local authority may make compensation out of the Circle or Union Funds respectively, to any person sustaining any damage by reason of the exercise of any of the powers conferred by this Act.

No action to be brought against the members of local bodies or their officers until after one month's notice of cause of action.

169. No suit shall be brought against the members of any Local Board or Union Committee, or any of their officers, or any person acting under their direction, for anything done under this Act, until the expiration of one month next after notice in writing has been delivered or left at the office of such Local Board or Union Committee, and also (if the suit is intended to be brought against any officers of the said Board or Committee, or any person acting under their directions) at the place of abode of the person against whom such suit is threatened to be brought, stating the cause of suit and the name and place of abode of the person who intends to bring the suit;

And unless such notice be proved, the Court shall find for the defendant.

Every such action shall be commenced within three months next after the accrual of the cause of action, and not afterwards.

If any such person to whom any such notice is given shall, before suit is brought, tender sufficient amends to the plaintiff, such plaintiff shall not recover.

Such rules shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to give the people of Bengal a substantial interest and responsibility in the administration of their own local affairs. At present District Road and School Committees exist, but they have very limited powers and these powers are generally exercised under close official control. The Committees cannot be said to offer any attraction to men of education and ability, who desire to participate in the management of public business, and they afford no relief to the Government staff in the administration of the departments of work with which they are supposed to deal. Advantage has been taken of the extension of financial decentralization to revise the system under which official and non-official agencies are associated, and to provide for the establishment of Local Self-Government on a really sound and practical basis.

It is proposed to effect this by establishing (1) Union Committees for the management of affairs of immediate interest to the villagers, (2) Local Boards for the general control of Union Committees and for the management of works and institutions affecting the larger areas. It is hoped that these bodies will give scope for the two elements which are available for the development of Local Self-Government. By the first will be utilized the keen interest which the Bengali peasant takes in all that affects his village and its surroundings. The second will provide important duties to which the educated class may be able to devote their energies.

The area of each Union will be about 12 square miles. The Union Committees will be elected by the villagers themselves by such simple processes as may be familiar to them. They will have the management and control of the primary schools and pounds of the Union and of its roads, tanks and drains, and will be responsible for general sanitation and for the registration of vital statistics within the area under their charge. These Committees will also form an agency for the execution of larger works under the direction of the Local Boards. Thus they may be entrusted, either separately, or jointly with other Union Committees, with the maintenance of lengths of main road lying within the Union or Unions. It is hoped that the Union Committee, being entrusted with real powers and responsibilities, will become an object of importance to the villagers, and that as the voters come to realize the control which they are able to exercise in determining its constitution, a genuine and intelligent interest in the management of the affairs of the Union will gradually be awakened.

The area under a Local Board, to be called a Local Government Circle, must be determined according to local circumstances. The principles to be borne in mind are, on the one hand, that it should not be so large as to render it impossible that the bulk of the members of the Board should have some knowledge of and interest in the tract to be administered, and should be able to devote personal and practical attention to its administration; and, on the other hand, that it should be large enough to provide duties of sufficient importance to interest men of education, and to provide such men for the performance of those duties. It has been considered that the area of an ordinary sub-division is that which will best fulfil these two conditions In backward districts it is possible that only one Local Board can be established. In others two or more sub-divisions, but not all the sub-divisions of the dis rict, will be placed under one Board. In the advanced districts each sub-division will have its own Local Board, and it will only be in these that the success of the measure in its integrity can be anticipated. The Bill will provide that the area of each Local Government Circle may be altered from time to time.

It is recognized that no system of Local Self-Government can be complete if it does not rest on the basis of election. Provision will therefore be made for the election of a proportion of the members of the Local Board where an electoral body can be obtained. It is considered that where the system of Union Committees exists, such a body will be found in the members of these Committees. Where these Committees cannot be found there can be no system of election, as any attempt to enlist the interest of the people at large in the constitution of the Local Boards would be hopeless. It has therefore been provided that if half the area of any thanna is under the jurisdiction of Union Committees a proportion of the members of the Local Board to represent that thanna shall be elected by the members of the Union Committees, and by persons of a certain standard of education who have local interest within the thanna. The number of members for each thanna will ordinarily be three, and of these two will ordinarily be elected. There will be no ex-officio members, but one-third of the total number of members will be nominated, subject to the proviso that the number of Government servants so nominated shall not be more than one-fourth of the total number. It is considered necessary to provide for nomination in order to guard the interests of minorities, and to permit of the admission of men who from their position might be unable or unwilling to stand for election, but whose assistance might be essential to the successful working of the Board. Each Board will be allowed to elect its Vice-Chairman absolutely, and its Chairman subject to confirmation by Government.

The Local Boards will have the general control of the Union Committees within their jurisdictions, and will have power to compel them to do their duty. They will also exercise, with some enlargement, the powers now vested in District Road Committees. Provision has been made for an annual conference of delegates from the different Boards in a district for the purpose of fixing the rate of road cess to be levied. The Boards will, subject to departmental rules, have the management and control of all schools within their Circles, and the allotment of grants, appointment of teachers and inspectors, fixing of standards, conduct of examinations, award of scholarships and the like. Exception has, however, necessarily been made of the powers already exercised by the managing committees of aided schools. The Boards will also be entrusted with extensive powers and duties in regard to hospitals and dispensaries, sanitation, vaccination, famine relief, maintenance of staging bungalows, holding of fairs and exhibitions, and other works of public interest and utility. Powers have been given to them to construct and maintain tramways, railways, and waterworks, and to take charge of or construct public buildings on behalf of Government. Provision has also been made for the appointment of Joint Boards for any purpose in which two or more Local Boards are interested.

The general control of all Local Boards will be undertaken by a Central Board, consisting of a President and so many members as the Lieutenant-Governor may direct. The local officers of Government will, however, have power to inspect the works of the Boards, and to suspend or prohibit any action which may be considered dangerous to the public interests. Copies of the proceedings of each Board will also be sent to the local executive officer. The Central Board will have power to compel a Local Board to perform any duty which it neglects, and it will have power to suspend or prohibit the execution of any work. It will receive and scrutinize the estimates and reports of the Boards, sanction their expenditure above certain limits, and make bye-laws for the general purposes of the Act. The Central Board will be under the general control of the Lieutenant-Governor. In the event of persistent default or abuse of its powers by a Local Board, the Lieutenant-Governor will have power to supersede it by formal order to be published, with the reasons for making it, in the Gazette. A period will in each such case be fixed, after which a Local Board will be re-established. Similar powers in regard to Union Committees will be exercised by the Central Board with the previous sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

No. 1597J, dated Bhagulpore, the 14th September 1882.

FROM—C. T. METCALFE, ESQ., C.S.I., Offg. Commr. of the Bhagulpore Division,
To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Medl. and Munpl. Department.

I HAVE the honour, with reference to your circular letter No. 5T—M, dated the 5th July 1882, to submit my report on the subject of the extension of local self-government.

2. The district officers of Bhagulpore, Purneah, and Maldah have furnished me with their reports, and the views of the influential and intelligent natives. The district officer of Monghyr has not yet furnished me with his opinion on the views of the public, and as the time fixed for the submission of my report is nearly up, I have thought proper not to delay it any longer.

3. I may preface my remarks with the statement that I have visited Monghyr, Purneah, Maldah, and have had many consultations with influential natives, and have discussed the question of local self-government with the district officers and many of the Municipal Commissioners. I shall in the first place deal with the question of the Municipal Boards, and submit my proposals regarding them.

4. Excluding the district of the Sonthal Pergunnahs, where the local self-government scheme is not to be introduced (although I consider the system might be introduced in the town of Deoghur), there are three first class municipalities, three second class municipalities, one station, and three unions, as follows:—

First class municipalities	... ...	(1) Monghyr. (2) Bhagulpore. (3) Purneah.
Second ditto	... ...	(1) Colgong in Bhagulpore. (2) Englishbazar. (3) Maldah.
Station ditto	... ...	(1) Jamalpore.
Unions ditto	... ...	(1) Kharakpore in Monghyr. (2) Ranigunge in Purneah. (3) Kishengunge in Purneah.

It may here be noted that the Jamalpore station is about to be converted into a second class municipality.

5. Full publicity has been given to section 16 of the Municipal law by regular notices hung up in conspicuous and public places; but the effect of it remains to be seen. In Bhagulpore only I am given to understand that signatures of the rate-payers are being collected. I much doubt whether the people care sufficiently about the matter to petition to be allowed the right of election of members, and if the Government insist on the rule, the elective system for which there is so much cry, will not, I fear, be introduced anywhere in this division. I am, however, of opinion that the system may be tried, and tried with success, in some of the municipalities to which I shall refer further on, and would recommend strongly that the rule requiring applications for the introduction of the elective system to be made before the system itself be introduced may be relaxed, if not rescinded altogether In every place where there has been any public demonstration in favour of the system in meetings fairly attended by intelligent people of all classes, it may be introduced.

6. The following is a summary of the public opinion regarding the Municipal Boards:—

Monghyr.—I have no information on the subject. As far as I am aware, there has been no public meeting.

Bhagulpore.—There were several meetings here. The leading members of the local bar representing as they claim to do the voice of the intelligent portion of the community wish that the Municipal Commissioners should be elected, and that the Commissioners should elect their own Chairman. The persons who took the lead at these meetings were Bengali pleaders, but a considerable number of the leading Behari rate-payers attended the meetings and seconded the resolutions. The meetings were generally well-attended; but the actual numbers are not given.

Purneah.—The meeting at which 36 persons were present dealt with the question of local board only. The majority of the rate-payers do not take sufficient interest to petition for right of election. The time of the meeting was very necessarily taken up with a discussion on the difficulties that would arise if men of inferior position were elected. It is a point to be remembered that the democratic principle of an English elective system will find few sympathisers among the higher class of natives whose lives have been passed on their own estates, and that it will take time to overcome the existing prejudices.

Colgong.—There was no meeting.

Englishbazar.—There were present eight members of the municipality and several leading rate-payers of the town at a meeting. They all voted for the elective system; the Chairman to be elected by the Commissioners subject to the approval of Government.

Maldah.—The number of people who attended the meeting has not been given. The decision arrived at was the same as at Englishbazar. Much interest was taken.

Jamalpore.—I am told there was a meeting, but no report of the proceedings has yet reached me.

Kharakpore, Ranigunge, Kissengunge.—There was no meeting, and no interest whatever has been taken in the subject, and no sufficient number of people could be got together to hold even the semblance of a meeting.

7. The Bhagulpore Municipality has a population of 67,695. The number of voters cannot be given till the qualification test is definitely settled. There are in the town 101 persons paying road cess of Rs. 25 and upwards, and 223 persons paying license tax of Rs. 20 and upwards, besides 24 persons who pay in other districts, but reside here. Two hundred and fifty-seven persons pay license tax of Rs. 10, besides five persons who pay in other districts. Fifty-two influential persons are named from among whom Commissioners might be elected. The municipality is divided into six wards, which are again sub-divided into 14 blocks. The district officer has proposed that 14 members should be elected by vote for the 14 blocks, and that seven members should be appointed by Government. He thinks that the Municipal Board would be strengthened by the appointment by Government of a certain number of members; for example, the Civil Surgeon, the Divisional Superintendent of Works, and the Executive Engineer. I would confine the Government nominees to the above officers, adding the Government Pleader in cases where he may not be elected. I am sanguine that in Bhagulpore the elective system will be successful; already the executive work is being carried on by an independent Vice-Chairman with the happiest results. Both Chairman and Vice-Chairman should be elected by the elected members.

8. The Purneah Municipality has a population of 14,827. It contains only 41 persons qualified to act as members according to the Government qualification test; but this test does not apply to municipalities, it being intended for local boards. Twelve members are recommended, half of whom should be nominated. I would reduce the number of Government nominees to the persons above mentioned, and increase the total number of members to 18. It must be remembered that marriage and religious ceremonies occupy a very considerable time of native gentlemen's leisure time, and provision should be made for a full attendance of members by an increase in the number of members. Thirty-six influential persons are known residents within the municipality, from among whom Commissioners might be elected. The district officer thinks that the Commissioners should be allowed to nominate their own Chairman and Vice-Chairman. In this I concur.

9. The Colgong Municipality has a population of 5,463. There are two persons paying Rs. 25 and upwards as road cess and 28 persons paying license tax of Rs. 20 and more. There are 29 persons paying license tax of Rs. 10 each The elective system is not recommended to be extended to this municipality.

10. In the Englishbazar Municipality, the population of which is 12,360, 83 persons are found who come up to the Government qualification test. Fifteen members are proposed for the Municipal Board. It is recommended that all members should be elected and the Chairman nominated by the elected members. The names of 32 influential men have been recorded, from among whom it is likely candidates for election may present themselves.

11. The old Maldah Municipality numbers 4,694 souls, with only 40 rate-payers up to the Government qualification test. Fifteen members are proposed for the Board; the whole to be elected. Eighty-five respectable persons have been registered, from among whom election, may be made.

12. I have not been furnished with similar details regarding the Monghyr and Jamalpore Municipalities, and Kharakpore, Ranigunge, and Kishengunge unions.

13. My recommendations are that in Monghyr, Bhagulpore, Purneah, Maldah, Englishbazar, and Jamalpore the elective system be introduced thoroughly. All the Commissioners should be elected with the exception of the four Government nominees mentioned: the Commissioners to elect their own Chairman. The Chairman may be official or non-official, European or native, as the Commissioners may choose; and if an official is elected, he should be allowed to vote. I would not interfere with the present arrangements either at Colgong or in the unions.

14. The constitution of the municipalities should be as follows:—

Bhagulpore ...	28	members, at the rate of two to each block.
Monghyr ...	20	The municipalities must be divided into wards, and there should be a certain number of members for each ward.
Purneah ...	8
Maldah ...	5
Englishbazar ...	5
Jamalpore ...	16

15. Voters in municipalities.—In municipalities I do not see why the test of road cess or license tax or other than property within the municipality should be required as a qualification to vote; the right to vote should be conferred upon rate-payers. The qualification test which I would fix is the payment of a total annual rate, including house tax and tax on carriages and horses, of Rs 5 and upwards. The number paying Rs. 10 and upwards is found to be about 300; so the lesser rate of Rs. 5 is suggested.

Candidates for election.—Among persons who may stand as a candidate for election, I would include people who pay a total rate of Rs. 20 and upwards, officers in the service of Government drawing Rs. 50 and upwards a month; other qualifications should also be recognized in candidates for election. For instance, all graduates in arts, law, medicine, and engineering, and certificated vakils of all grades, diplomaed persons carrying on the profession of medicine and engineering, and school-masters resident within the limits of municipalities and graded, drawing a salary of not less than Rs. 50, may be allowed to stand as candidates for election irrespective of any property qualification.

16. As regards local boards, public opinion seems to be as follows:—

Bhagulpore.—There were several well-attended meetings of the Bhagulpore Association. The elective system was asked for in all the local sub-divisional boards, the elected members choosing their own Chairman. The Government qualification test for voters and also for candidates for election was considered too high. In the opinion of the meeting, persons paying road cess of Rs. 5 and license tax of Rs. 10 and having an annual income salaried or otherwise of Rs. 200, should be allowed to vote; and as regards candidates, the test to be Rs. 10 road cess and Rs. 20 license tax, or Rs. 500 annual income. In the case of joint-families, the qualification of voters and candidates should be double of what is required in the case of single persons. A meeting was also called at Bhagulpore by the district officer, at which about 130 persons belonging chiefly to the middle classes were present. The result of their deliberations was that the elective system should be introduced, and there should be a separate board for each of the four thanas in the sudder sub-division, and the members elected for each board should choose their own Chairman.

Banka in Bhagulpore.—A meeting was convened by the sub-divisional officer and was attended by upwards of 200 persons comprising the leading zemindars, mahajans, pleaders, and mooktears, and a fair number of the middle classes. They resolved that they might be permitted to elect the members of a local board to be presided over by the sub-divisional officer as Chairman with power to vote.

Supole and Mudhapura in Bhagulpore.—The meeting at the former place was attended by 265 persons and at the latter by about 100 persons The resolutions passed at both the meetings were in favour of the sub-divisional boards, the members of which should be nominated by Government to work under the sub-divisional officer, and that the elective system be postponed till education has made further progress.

Purneah.—At the meeting held, 14 Europeans and 22 natives were present Baboo Mohesh Lall, a rich banker, expressed a fear that persons might be elected with whom respectable members would not care to sit. The opinion of the meeting was that the present members of the Road Cess Committee should continue as members of the board, and should prepare, in consultation with the district officers, lists of qualified candidates for each thana, whose names should be submitted for election, and from among these the voters should be required to select members to sit on the district board. The members to elect their own Chairman.

Maldah.—The meeting was attended by the eight Commissioners of the municipality and several leading rate-payers It is said to have been an enthusiastic meeting principally attended by members of the local bar by whom the proceedings were conducted. The popular feeling is said to be in favour of all unofficial and independent members as Chairman. In the opinion of the meeting money qualification alone should not be insisted upon, as many of the more respectable residents are poor, and to exclude them would be to deprive the community of their services. Persons having an income of Rs. 200 to be entitled to vote.

17. The population of the sudder sub division of the district of Bhagulpore, excluding the two municipalities of Bhagulpore and Colgong, is 473,199, and the area 976 square miles. There are 304 persons qualified for membership according to the Government qualification test. The district officer recommends one sub-divisional board for the head-quarters sudder sub-division of 18 members, of whom 12, or 3 from each thana, should be elected, while the remaining 6 should be appointed by Government. In Banka, Madhapura, and Supole the population is 415,696, 398,006, and 600,874, and area 1,186, 872, and 1,275 square miles respectively. In the first-named sub-division there are 262 qualified persons. This information is not given regarding the other sub-divisions. In all the three sub-divisions the district officer proposes a board or committee, the members of which should be nominated by Government with the sub-divisional officer as Chairman. The decisions arrived at by the sub-divisional meetings are considered to be rather astonishing, because in Banka, which borders on the district of Sonthal Pergunnahs, and which is sparsely populated, where a considerable proportion of the inhabitants belong to semi-barbarous tribes, where education and civilization are pre-eminently backward, where most of the land is owned by non-resident proprietors, and where hardly three or four of these proprietors, who do reside in the sub-division, have had any education at all, the people have asked for the elective system.

18. The district officer of Purneah recommends a board for the sudder sub-division, which has a population of 773,310 and an area of 2,572 square miles. According to the Government qualification rule, there are 344 persons qualified to act as members; 20 members are recommended, half of them to be nominated. No recommendations have been made regarding boards at the Arrareah and Kishengunge sub-divisional head-quarters.

19. In Maldah, where there are no sub-divisions, the district officer will for the present have one local board at the district head-quarters, from which seven independent local boards would be gradually formed from the union of chowkidari unions round important local centres at Chanchal, Mathurapore, Bholahat, Kaliachuck, Shibgunge, Rokunpore, and Nawabgunge.

20. As already stated, no proposals have yet been made by Mr. Kean. I am, however, decidedly of opinion that Monghyr is pretty fairly advanced, and there is every probability of success if the elective system were tried there at head-quarters and at both the interior sub-divisions. I would recommend a mixed elective system, two-thirds of the members to be elected and one-third to be nominated. The Chairman must in every case be chosen by the elected members. As regards Bhagulpore, I would make the same recommendation for the sudder sub-division. In the sudder sub-division of Purneah and in Maldah I would have a mixed elective system on the basis recommended by Mr. Weekes, that one-half of the members should be elected and the other half, owing to the backward nature of the district, nominated. In the Banka, Supole, Mudhapura, Arrareah, and Kishengunge sub-divisions I would have local boards wholly under the nomination system, but allow the members appointed to elect their own Chairman. The Chairman, as in the case of municipalities, may be official or non official, Native or European, and if an official is elected, he should be allowed to vote. Thus it will be seen that in all the districts local boards, whether by election or nomination, can in my opinion, be formed, and as such they come within class 3 of paragraph 8 of the Government circular.

21. In regard to the constitution of all the local boards where the elective system is proposed, I would recommend as follows:—

	Number of thanas.	Number of elected members.	Number of nominated members.	Total.
Monghyr, Sudder	5	15	7	22
Begooserai	2	10	5	15
Jamui	4	12	6	18
Bhagulpore	4	12	6	18
Purneah, Sudder	7	14	14	28
Maldah	9	9	9	18

In Banka, Supole, Mudhapura, Arrareah, and Kishengunge I would have 10 to 12 nominated members.

22. With reference to the qualification test for candidates and voters opinions vary. The district officers of Bhagulpore and Purneah approve of the Government standard. Mr. Porch of Maldah would fix the qualification of voters at Rs. 200 a year, and of members at Rs. 500 a year income. I have no objection no urge against the Government standard, vide paragraph 10; but I would enlarge the test by including officers in the service of Government, or recognized local bodies and professional men holding recognized positions, as recommended for the municipalities.

23. With reference to the mode of election of members of municipal and local boards I would propose the following rules for adoption:—

(a) The Chairman or Vice-Chairman of each municipality, in the case of a municipality, and the district or the sub-divisional officer in the case of a local board, are to prepare registers of qualified voters and eligible candidates, it being open to any qualified person, so desiring it, to apply to have his name registered. These registers are to be published conspicuously both in the district and sub-divisional kutcherries, and at such other places within the limits of the municipalities and sub-districts as shall be deemed advisable.

(b) After the publication of the registers as provided in rule (a), those who wish to propose to stand as candidates for election shall apply to the Chairman of a municipality, or to the district or the sub-divisional officer, as the case may be, notifying, not later than one month before date of election, their intention to stand for election. The Chairman, or the district or sub-divisional officer, shall thereupon send through the public post—the charge to be a charge on the rates under the budgeted head of "election charges"—to each voter a list of such candidates, together with a ticket of election, to be presented at the polling station.

(c) A day shall then be fixed for the election of members. Such day shall be notified by beat of drum or otherwise, in the widest manner possible, and the voters shall also be informed of the hours between which, and the places at which, they are to attend to turn their votes.

(d) On the day so fixed, properly appointed officers are to be posted at each polling station. The hours of attendance shall be so regulated as to suit the convenience of the people. To secure efficient supervision, the services of sub-deputy collectors, school-masters, canoongoes, may be utilised, and at least two officers shall be told off for duty at each station, receiving fees for travelling, &c.

(e) Votes are not to be recorded by the clerk, but shall be by ballot.

(f) At each polling station there shall be placed a box with an opening, into which the voting paper will be put up by the voter in person. In all cases where the officer in attendance has grounds to doubt the identity of the elector, he should adopt proper means to make sure of such identity before the vote is received.

(g) The personal attendance of each voter shall be insisted upon, and none shall be able to vote by proxy. Save—

(h) In the case of wealthy persons who may have been exempted from personal attendance in the civil courts by Government, the votes recorded in paper enclosed in an envelope duly sealed may be received.

(i) At the end of the day the box shall be opened by the Chairman of municipalities or by the sub-divisional officer, or by the district officers, as the case may be, and the papers sorted and arranged, and the candidate in whose favour the largest number of votes shall be given shall be declared returned for their respective wards or thanas.

(j) Within 24 hours after election a list shall be published containing the names of the candidates returned under rule (i), and such names shall afterwards be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

24. With reference to rule (d), I may observe that it would be well if selected officers were appointed to be present at the polling stations to see the votes collected.

25. There might be some difficulty in adopting a uniform rule for the taking of votes; it would certainly be more satisfactory and tend to prevent jobbery if each voter were required to return a written vote. I have therefore proposed, vide rule (e), that the votes shall be by ballot.

26. The next point which demands consideration is the question—what funds are to be made over to the local and the municipal boards? The district officer of Bhagulpore proposes to place at the disposal of the several boards one-third of the proceeds of the license tax, of the ferries and pounds; and as regards the Public Works cess, he would keep the funds wholly in the hands of the Provincial Government, and cast upon it the obligation of maintaining and constructing certain provincial works now done by the Road Cess Committees. The district officer of Maldah proposes that to each Municipal Board should be made over its license tax, pound and ferry receipts. The Public Works cess, the rest of the license tax and pound and ferry receipts he would hold as the reserve of the district fund by the controlling body for grants for requirements of each municipal and local board. My recommendation is that, to the municipalities should be made over the whole of the proceeds of pounds, ferries, and license tax derived from residents, and to the local boards should be allotted proceeds of pounds, ferries, primary educational and grants-in-aid moneys, embankment and drainage cesses, and also the proceeds of the road and half of the Public Works cesses, reserving the other half for provincial purposes, leaving license tax as a source of provincial revenue.

27. The subject of the creation of a controlling agency or board for each district is one on which the district officers of Maldah and Bhagulpore are unanimous. The latter, however, proposes that such agency should be constituted entirely of Government officials. I would, however, modify this proposal. If a district controlling board is to be established at all, it is essential that there should be introduced into it a sufficiently strong non-official element to satisfy the elected bodies. If budgets are to be submitted to, and passed by, such a board, and if it has to guide and hold in check the elected bodies now to be created, the people themselves should be represented. I would therefore constitute a controlling board at the head-quarters of each district, consisting of as many delegates as there are municipal and sub-divisional boards. The Divisional Commissioner and District Magistrate, together with the Superintending and Executive Engineers, to be ex-officio members. To such a board might be assigned the functions of supervision and the duty of enforcing the performance of such obligations as may be conferred on the subordinate boards by statute. They might with benefit be clothed with the powers of compelling the discharge of important public trusts on the part of these boards by such modes as may be legally open to them. In cases of grave misfeasance of duty, relief might be obtained by injunctions and orders from the civil courts under a simplified procedure.

28. It may be that in the opinion of Government a divisional controlling agency is unnecessary, and that such agency for individual districts may not be needed at all. If a controlling authority for the entire province be organized in the metropolis it will be sufficient. In such cases I would wish to place on record that great risk of extravagant expenditure will be run, and the supervision requisite cannot be exercised.

29. In paragraph 14 of the circular under reply, I am asked my opinion with regard to the limit within which the local boards ought to be vested with absolute freedom of action. In view of the fact, I have carefully considered that these institutions will enter on their career with no experience to guide them, and the experiment now being tried ought to be made with caution and watched with anxiety. I have also carefully considered the effect of restricting elected bodies to limited expenditure on any single work, such as the limit at present imposed on Road Cess Committees, which is up to Rs. 2,500, and I am of opinion that practically the best check is the budget system, and requiring these bodies to submit detailed estimates and plans for the scrutiny and opinion of the controlling board. By-and-bye larger powers may be given, but till these bodies have had experience, all expenditure should be budgeted and sanctioned. The control should be limited not to the work, but to the specification and plans.

30. As regards the constitution of a managing committee for the supervision of zillah schools, I agree with the proposals as embodied in paragraph 13 of your letter.

No. 97LF, dated Chota Nagpore, the 18th September 1882.

From—J. WARE-EDGAR, ESQ., C.S.I., Officiating Commissioner of the Chota Nagpore Division,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department.

IN continuation of my No. 85LF of the 1st current, I have the honour now to submit the report on the general question of the extension of local self-government in this division, called for in your circular No. 5FM of the 5th July last.

2. Besides calling for written opinions from the local officers, I have had frequent discussions on the subject with the Deputy Commissioners of Hazareebagh and Lohardugga, and with many native gentlemen of both districts, both officials and non-officials. I have also consulted the gentlemen in charge of the Anglican and Lutheran Missions, who from their long experience of, and intimate acquaintance with, this part of the country are peculiarly well fitted to give an opinion on the question. All are agreed that no part of the division is at present sufficiently far advanced for the introduction of institutions like those described in paragraphs 6 to 13 of your letter under reply, that the people do not wish for any such measure, and that if it were forced on them the results would be mischievous and the measure itself highly unpopular. After anxiously considering the circumstances of each district and the arguments used by the gentlemen consulted by me, I have come to practically the same conclusion. and have had to give up a hope at one time entertained of being able to recommend the formation of experimental local boards in small and carefully selected tracts in each district.

3. All the gentlemen consulted by me consider that the great obstacle to the introduction of any measure of self-government in the greater part of the division is the race antagonism between the aboriginal people and the foreign element, which we know led to the separation of these tracts from the Regulation Province in 1833. More stress is laid on this point than even in the ignorance of all classes, and the total want of public spirit displayed by them. It is believed that it would be impossible to get members of the different classes to work together, while a board formed exclusively out of any one class would most certainly do what it could to injure the other classes. One non-official gentleman thoroughly acquainted with all the districts of the division went so far as to say that if we were to force the introduction of local boards, we should have to increase the military force stationed in the province, and a leading representative of the family of the Maharajah of Chota Nagpore told me that he expected such a measure would end in a renewal of the troubles of 1832. The Bengali gentlemen occupied in Lohardugga and Hazareebagh either as pleaders or in the service of Government, who are by far the best educated and most intelligent part of the native community, are also opposed to any attempt to form local boards here at present, and those who know Manbhoom consider that district almost equally unsuited to the experiment. It seems to me clear therefore that no part of the division can be placed in either class 2 or 3 of paragraph 8 of your letter of the 5th July.

4. The local officers, however, are not unanimous as to the powers to be entrusted to the district committees who would remain in charge of the districts. The Deputy Commissioner of Hazareebagh adheres generally to the opinions put forth by him when reporting on the subject last year, which were dealt with in my predecessor's No. 76T of the 4th January last, but he also considers that the lines laid down in paragraph 3 of your letter to the Government of India of the 8th April last might be followed in legislating for districts like his. The Deputy Commissioner of Manbhoom is of the same opinion. The Deputy Commissioner of Lohardugga would give a much more independent position to his district committee. He says—"Having then formed as strong a committee as the circumstances permit, I would in most respects treat it as a local board. The committee might safely elect its own chairman, the district officer acting as adviser and controller, subject to the central board. I recommend that provisional roads and buildings be made over to the committee, that special grants from provincial funds, equal to the whole public works cess for a period of five years at a time, be placed at its disposal until communications, &c., are as advanced as elsewhere in the province generally; that it have an Executive Engineer of its own; that the grant for primary education be withdrawn, and in its place the administration and proceeds of the license-tax made over to the committee, including the license-tax paid in Ranchi Municipality." I am unable to agree with Mr. Power in his proposition that the chairman should be elected, and I find that the gentlemen consulted by me are of opinion that the Deputy Commissioner should be the ex cutive head of the committee, which they think should be rather a council than an administrative body. The Deputy Commissioners of Hazareebagh and Manbhoom propose that there should be branch committees at Giridih and Gobindpore, presided over by the sub-divisional officers and subordinate to the district committees. Mr. Power thinks that the branch committee at Palamow should be practically independent of the district committee. I agree with him on this point, and consider that the sub-divisional committees of Giridih and Gobindpore should also be practically independent of the district committees, though, of course, controlled by the Deputy Commissioner. It would be desirable in all the committees of the division, whether district or sub-divisional, to allow members to give their opinions in writing without the necessity of attending meetings which is practically impossible for a great part of the year. If this were provided for, it would be possible to form committees composed of members taken from different parts of the district or sub division, though, as mentioned in a previous paragraph, they would be in no way representative of any except their own classes. My predecessor has already reported on other points connected with the formation and renewal of the committees in paragraphs 4 to 12 of the letter of the 4th January last, and I have nothing to add to his proposals.

5. The Deputy Commissioners of Lohardugga and Manbhoom propose that the receipts from license-tax in their respective districts should be made over to the committees. I cannot support this. It would be obviously undesirable to make over the assessment or collection of the tax to the committees, looking to the local conditions above described, and there does not seem to be any special reason for making over the receipts of this particular tax. On the other hand, if the provincial roads are to be made over to the committees, it would be well to make over the whole of the public works cess and probably an additional grant to each district. The roads throughout the division are very bad. It is not too much to say that, taken as a whole, it is worse off in the matter of communication than any part of Bengal or Behar, and no doubt its backward state in other respects is, in a great measure, owing to this want. I have no doubt that more progress would be made in road-making by the district committees if they had funds at their disposal than has been made by the Public Works Department. It seems probable that the people of the division would take some interest in the work, and their being consulted and allowed an influence in the matter might tend to train them to take a share in other branches of local administration.

6. The Deputy Commissioners of Lohardugga and Manbhoom advocate the maintenance of the existing unions in their districts on the ground that they may serve to educate the inhabitants in local self-government. I confess that I have not much hope of this from unions as constituted under Act V of 1876. There is, no doubt, a punchayet provided in the Act, but the amount to be raised and the manner in which it is to be expended is fixed by the Magistrate, and, as a general rule, the entire administration is practically in the hands of the subordinate appointed under section 345, unless when the union happens to be the head-quarters of the sub-divisional offices, or of a moonsiff with powers of a Magistrate as at Lohardugga and Raghoonathpore. If the unions are to be kept up, I should give the punchayets far more power than they have now, allowing them considerable control over the funds at the disposal of the unions, and making any officer employed therein subordinate directly to them. The district officer would have to exercise considerable supervision over them at first, but they would, in backward districts like those of this division, correspond, within the union areas, in some respects with local boards in more advanced districts. Such unions would differ from municipalities in having less power of taxation and of interference with the people, and they should be allowed a liberal share of the local district revenue in addition to the amount raised by taxation under the Municipal Act. I believe that it would be easier to introduce the principle of election into such unions than into many large towns, and the punchayets, whether nominated or elected, might select their own headmen from amongst themselves.

7. I annex copies of the reports received from the district officers.

No. 168LT, dated Hazaribagh, the 22nd August 1882.

From—MAJOR E. G LILLINGSTON, Deputy Commissioner of Hazaribagh,
To—The Commissioner of the Chota Nagpore Division.

WITH reference to your No. 153T, dated 11th ultimo, forwarding circular letter No. 5FM of the 5th idem, from the Government of Bengal, on the subject of local self-government, I have the honour to state that I reported on this subject as far as it concerns the municipalities of this district by my No. 162LF, dated 10th instant. I beg now to submit my report on the subject, as it concerns the district generally.

2. The points mentioned in the printed letters and resolutions have had my special consideration, and I have consulted as many native gentlemen with local knowledge as I could. I also convened a meeting of European and native gentlemen on the 19th instant to assist me in considering the question.

3. The only conclusion I can come to is that there is not within this large and sparsely inhabited district any intelligent non-official agency which would enable me to select any such rural areas as described in the Government of India Resolution, where local boards could be maintained. The rural population is almost exclusively agricultural, and for the most part uneducated.

4. The landholders are also mostly uneducated, unintelligent, and improvident. Perhaps it will be considered sufficient to point to the Encumbered Estates Act under which eleven embarrassed estates are being managed with a view to relieving them from the burden of debt under which they have been brought by the carelessness, improvidence, and extravagance of their owners or their predecessors, in order to shew that this district is not advanced enough yet for the introduction of the scheme in its entirety.

5. I therefore consider that this district should fall under class I, as mentioned in paragraph 8 of the Bengal Government letter received with yours under reference, having a district committee at head-quarters and a branch committte at Giridih, the sub-divisional head-quarters, subordinate to it, presided over by the sub-divisional officer.

6. As regards the question of the formation of the district committee and the powers to be given to it, I have nothing to add to my previous report on the subject, No. 203LF, dated 1st December 1881, except that, after reading paragraph 3 of Sir Ashley Eden's letter No. 921½, dated 8th April 1882, it appears to me that the district committee need not be so large as I at first proposed, as there will not be any necessity for forming a sub-committee.

7. The district committee here must, in my opinion, be presided over by the district officer. As the district is not far enough advanced for the introduction of the elective system for this committee, and, moreover, as the sub-divisional officer will preside over the sub-divisional branch committee, he could not well be made subordinate to any other than the district officer as chairman of the district committee.

8. The arrangements proposed in paragraph 3 of Sir Ashley Eden's letter referred to in paragraph 6 above are, as you have remarked, very suitable as the basis for that portion of the projected law which will relate to such districts as this.

9. With reference to paragraph 14 of that Bengal Government letter and paragraph 6 of your letter under reference, I beg to refer you to my previous report, No. 203LF, dated 1st December last, regarding the powers to be exercised by the district committee and the various departments which should be made over to its management.

No. 1318Cr, dated Ranchee, the 25th August 1882.

From—A. W. B. POWER, ESQ., C.S., Deputy Commissioner of Lohardugga,
To—The Officiating Commissioner of the Chota Nagpore Division.

IN continuation of my No. 595R, dated 18th ultimo, I have the honour to submit herewith the further report called for in your No. 153J, dated the 11th ultimo.

2. Enclosed is a copy of the report furnished on this subject by the Assistant Commissioner of Palamow. In writing my own I have had the advantage of consultation with several gentlemen of experience, both European and native

3. It is our unanimous opinion that no fairly representative local board which would work could possibly be formed in this district at present, all the arguments urged by the Assistant Commissioner of Palamow in respect of his sub-division apply with even greater force to the head-quarters sub-division. Two pergunnahs of Palamow indeed are far more advanced than any other part of the district, viz., Beloniyah and Jupla, which were transfered from the regulation district of Gya in 1871. These contain a fair sprinkling of persons educated in the vernacular, but then they are so far from the sub-divisional head-quarters, and so utterly cut off in the rains by unbridged torrents, highly dangerous to cross even in boats, that pratically they may be left out of the question.

4. As in Palamow so at head-quarters our committees consists almost exclusively of aliens, Europeans, Beharis, and Bengalis; there is not among them all a single member who is an aboriginal native of the district. Some few there are whose extraction may be remotely connected with that source, but for generations they have assimilated themselves with the habits and religious observances of Hindus, so that between them and the bulk of the population there is almost as great antagonism as in respect of other aliens. These persons are descendants of the old chieftains, who under our régime have become deeply involved in debt, and whose property is rapidly passing into the hands of immigrant mahajuns, and this not through any change in their own habits, but simply because the rate of interests which was nominally charged when there was no security continues by force of custom to be entered in obligations, even though the courts established by us have conferred on the mahajuns the power to sell up landed property in satisfaction of their claims—a practice altogether unknown till comparatively quite recent times.

5. We have therefore an impoverished and (except in cases where the benefits of the Encumbered Estates Act have been conferred on individuals) a decaying aristocracy. Whatever good feeling used to exist between them and their tenants, has, to a great extent, been destroyed owing to their attempts to satisfy the exactions of mahajuns by levy of "benevolences" under one form or another from the ryots. In their place we have an immigrant mahajun class whose money is invested in land as a pure speculation; a third class consists of alien grantees of land imported by the Maharajah and his vassals while they were undergoing the Hinduising process. These men and their descendants form the class known as "elakadars," and are fully described in the statistical account of Bengal, Volume XVI, pages 370 to 375.

6. There could scarcely be a more complete parallel between any two countries than between Chota Nagpore Proper and Ireland. Members of the Maharajah's family represent the Irish tribal chieftains; our presence here is the conquest of Henry II; the Kol rebellion of 1832A.D. was suppressed just as the Irish rebellion was by Elizabeth; the "elakadars" are the Englishmen of the Pale, and coming to later times the mahajun class is almost identical with purchasers of encumbered properties on the Landed Estates Court. With such incongruous elements it is hopeless to govern by means of free institutions until a very advanced stage of enlightenment has been reached. But we are yet in cimmerian darkness, and the foundations of material progress have even yet been scarcely laid. Is there any probability that a system of partial representation which has been such an egregious failure in Ireland will prove any better in a country like Chota Nagpore? A Government at once strong, impartial, and just can keep the peace between parties divided by race antagonism, one of which repays with hatred the contempt of the other, it can do so with ease when dissentions are avoided, but the task would be infinitely greater if every opportunity be given for exciting them, and Government is then called in to calm the storm it helped to raise.

7. This district is therefore one which contains no sub-division in which a local board can be formed. But as regards Palamow sub-division I think the Branch Committee there should be practically independent of the District Committee. Palamow differs in many respects from Chota Nagpore Proper, so much so that it is difficult to work the two sub-divisions on similar lines. The time is coming when it must be a separate district, and the sooner it prepares for the change the better.

8. I need hardly say that no part of the district is yet ripe for the elective principle in the selection of members. Lists have been prepared shewing persons who pay Rs. 25 road cess and Rs. 20 license-tax and upwards, and those who pay less than the above, but either Rs. 10 road cess or license-tax and upwards.

The totals are :—

(1)	Persons paying	Rs. 25 road cess and upwards ...	... 345	1st.
(2)	"	Rs. 20 license-tax and upwards ...	... 171
(3)	"	Rs. 10 road cess and less than Rs. 25	... 697	2nd.
(4)	"	Rs. 10 license-tax and less than Rs. 20	... 447

In class (1) I can find the names of 16 persons only who belong to the purely aboriginal classes, and nine of these in one thanah not on the plateau. Several of them are no longer in possession of their estates, but their names appear on the registers because the superior landlord declines to recognise the transferees as his tenants. In class (2) there is one aboriginal name; in class (3) there are 31 (20 in one thanah, and all but four in the five pergunnahs below the plateau); in class (4) there are two only. The great bulk of the population would be unrepresented, and power given to classes whom the aborigines not so long ago sought to exterminate, and whom they would gladly get rid of now if they only could.

9. Even with Government nomination it will be difficult to select a committee to whom administration powers might safely be entrusted. At this moment I can think of three persons only whom I consider fitting representatives of the old aristocracy their homes are 60, 50, and 30 miles from Ranchee respectively, and two out of the three are proprietors of estates so encumbered with debt that they have been sequestrated temporarily under Act VI of 1876. However eligible they may be as corresponding members of a committee at Ranchee, it is obvious that they will not incur the heavy expenses of travelling these long distances over the unbridged bridle paths to attend periodical meetings. There is no lack of representative mahajuns, but though elakadars are tolerably numerous, very few are enlightened enough to see beyond their own selfish interests. Unless, therefore, the alien element is admitted, no committee can be formed with any chance of success.

10. Having then formed as strong a committee as the circumstances permit, I would in most respects treat it as a local board. The committee might safely elect its own chairman, the district officer acting as adviser and controller subject to the central board. I recommend that provincial roads and buildings be made over to the committee; that special grants from provincial funds, equal to the whole public works cess for a period of five years at a time, be placed at its disposal until communications, &c., are as advanced as elsewhere in the province generally; that it has an Executive Engineer of its own; that the grant for primary education be withdrawn, and in its place the administration and proceeds of the license tax made over to the committee, including the license tax paid in Ranchee municipality.

11. Regarding the control to be exercised by Government, it appears to me that besides the points enumerated by the Government of India and Government of Bengal respectively, a limit should be placed in the committee's power of creating and endowing new appointments, and this whether the committee be an elected municipal or a nominated district one. Some check should also be devised for securing the proper tender and acceptance of contracts; the regular application of funds placed at the committee's disposal to the purposes contemplated by Government for regulating the amounts which may be contributed to other committees or to local boards of adjoining districts for works of common utility; the power to meet excess expenditure under one head of the estimates by transfer of funds from another (in this respect a wide discretion should be allowed to committee, but some control is advisable); for disallowing unreasonable withdrawal of grants-in-aid towards education and medical relief, and for discouraging any tendency towards adopting a retrogressive policy in the matter of sanitation. It would be premature to enter into details on these subjects until it is decided what form of local self-government is to be introduced here.

12. Mr. Renny is strongly in favour of retaining the unions in his sub-division, and in the main I agree with him. Daltongunge is the sudder station of Palamow sub-division; the union at present contains three purely agricultural villages; these should, I think, be eliminated, leaving the station itself to be managed by a section of the sub-divisional branch committees. Gurhwa is the largest trading centre in the whole district not even excepting Ranchee itself. Lohardugga is also an important trade depôt in these towns; the agricultural element is practically untaxed; I would therefore retain them all and encourage the tax-payers to prepare themselves for representative institutions.

No. 233J, dated Daltongunge, the 8th August 1882.

From—R. H. RENNY, ESQ., Assistant Commissioner, Palamow,

To—The Deputy Commissioner, Lohardugga.

I HAVE the honour to submit the report called in the Bengal Government circular No. 5FM, dated 5th ultimo, received under cover of your memorandum No. 1142Cr, dated the 9th idem.

2. Paragraphs 1 to 5 of the circular deal with matters concerning municipalities, and I have in my letter No. 218J, dated 26th ultimo, informed you that no such institutions exist in this sub-division.

3. I am afraid I misled you with opinions expressed by me in my letter No. 949, dated 29th November 1881; but as stated at the time, I wrote that letter in great haste and before I had time to consider the subject,—a subject as pointed out by Government full of difficulties arising from the fact that the experiment is entirely an innovation, foreign alike to the genius and instincts of the people, and to the system of rule which has obtained since the British power was established here—in other words, the system requires, that we should, if we adopt it, expect capacity for self-government from a people only partially civilized, and who before we became their masters were mere slaves of despotic Rajahs and Chieftains, who never possessed a will of their own and who ever since the British became their ruler, have had but very limited educational opportunities offered them, and who, from the isolated situation of the country, have had no intercourse with the civilized world; such a people, it must surely be admitted, are not ripe for taking upon themselves self-government, no matter how limited its scope may be.

4. From paragraph 8 of the circular I find that the districts of Singbhoom, Sonthal Pergunnahs, and the Chittagong Hill Tracts have been exempted from the scheme I am personally acquainted with two of the above districts, viz., Singbhoom and the Chittagong Hill Tracts, for I have served as Deputy Commissioner in both, and I respectfully beg to urge that whatever may have been the reasons for exempting them, I feel certain the same reasons would apply with equal, if not greater, force to Palamow.

5. One of the chief features of the scheme, so far as I have been able to understand it, is the elective system. On this subject His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, in paragraph 10 of the circular, says:—"In considering the applicability of this system to any tract, it will be necessary to recollect that in the promotion of local self-government the object chiefly aimed at is the political education of the people, and obviously political education should succeed and not precede education in the ordinary sense of the term."

6. I have italicised the concluding sentences of the paragraph as I consider that the opinion expressed in the words italicised apply with great force to Palamow, where, as pointed out in paragraph 3 of this report, the people are all but totally uneducated.

7. Palamow is not a district, but merely a sub-division of the Lohardugga district. This may possibly be our reason why it has not been excluded from the scheme, and my sanguine report above alluded to may also have had something to do with its inclusion; but I would point out that though it is a sub-division nominally, it is in area 4,260 square miles, and its head-quarters are situated 110 miles from the sub-division. I make mention of these facts it order to shew that it cannot conviently be included in a district under any of the three classes set forth in paragraph 8 of the circular. My reasons for saying so are—

(I) It being a sub-division of the Lohadugga district, it cannot be included in a district under class I. (II) That if included in a district under class II, it would come under the category of a district with a sub-division in which a local board cannot possibly be formed; but then even it would be impossible to form in it such a committee as would correspond to a branch committee under the existing Cess Act; and (III) for the reasons given against class II, i.e., impossibility of forming a local board, it cannot be included in a district under class III.

8. The only possible classes of districts in which the sub-division could be included would seem to be classes II and III; but I have stated above that it would be impossible to include its in either of these classes. My grounds for this opinion are:—(a) There are very few people of the country who have had any education at all; the little they know being limited to indifferently reading and writing an ungrammatical jargon which they call Hindi, and that therefore from an educational point of view they are unfit to be either the electors or the elected; (b) that most of these few persons are residents at too far a distance from the head-quarters of the sub-division to render it convenient for them to come in to attend meetings of a board; (c) that from absence of intercourse with the outer world and the secluded life they have been accustomed to live in the jungles, where their own domestic affairs are all that concerns them, the people are unfitted to transact public business.

9. I have stated that it would be impossible to form such a committee as would correspond to a branch committee under the existing Cess Act. I must here explain that the existing committee under the Cess Act, and in fact all other committees in Palamow, would have collapsed at the very outset, had not it been that the members number a sufficient proportion of foreigners, i.e., European and Bengali gentlemen, to whose interest alone in the matters connected with the several committees must be attributed the work done, for with the exception of an individual member or two attending occasionally, all the other members who are natives of Palamow have been conspicuous by their absence.

10. In my report No. 949, dated the 29th November 1881, I nominated a board consisting of 20 members; but persual of my list will shew that out of those nominated—

9 are officials (two Europeans, six Bengalis, and one Behari);
11 non-officials (one European, two Bengalis, and eight zemindars and merchants of Palamow).

Such a board could hardly be styled a local self-government board, for in reality the majority of the members would be foreigners to the country and people. What Government require, as I read the resolution of the Government of India, is that boards should consist mainly of the people of the country over which they are to exercise self-government, and not principally of people of different nationalities, such as Europeans and Bengalis, nor of majority of persons in the service of Government.

11. It has been my most earnest desire to try and give effect to the wishes of the Government of India on this most important subject, and in order that there may be no mistake in the opinion arrived at by me, which were come to after very deliberate consideration and with a three-years' experience of the people under my charge, I took into my council most of the best informed people in my sub-division, and one and all are agreed that the scheme for local self-government is altogether far too advanced for a backward part of the country such as Palamow. I may here add that in order that the views of Government may not be misunderstood, I had the different resolutions translated and had them perused by the native gentlemen of the country whose opinion I sought.

12. If, after consideration of the above report, it is still considered desirable that the scheme should have a trial, this can only be done by admitting foreigners, both officials and non-officials, as members of the local board or committee. If foreigners, both Europeans and natives of India, are to be allowed, we might as well have a local board as a committee, as then competent members would be forthcoming. It will be still necessary to nominate and not elect the members, because even that moderate average of intelligence and knowledge among electors which is required in order to secure a high average of intelligence amongst representatives is wanting here. Again, out of a population of 484,822 people, there are very few who possess the very limited qualifications for voters proposed by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor in paragraph 10 of the circular. Annexed are lists shewing the names of persons who are eligible as members and voters under the qualifications set forth in paragraph 10. In using the expression eligible I mean duly qualified; but I am very doubtful how many if any of those mentioned in the lists are qualified to serve, as members who reside at a greater distance than five miles from the head-quarters would consent to serve in the board. My own experience of the people leads me to infer that none would do so unless well remunerated for the trouble, and remuneration is out of question in Palamow, where, under the most favourable circumstances, the fund that would be at the disposal of the board would be very limited and incapable of bearing any such strain.

13. The lists annexed contain the names of persons qualified principally when judged from the amounts of road cess and license tax paid by them or the value of their income from sources other than that derived from land; if the educational qualification of these persons be enquired into, I am afraid over two-thirds of them would be found disqualified. I lay stress on these circumstances as it appears to me that His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor particularly desires that both the electors and the elected should possess a fair amount of intelligence and some knowledge of local affairs, whereas, if put to the test, I am confident that not one in ten of the persons entered in the list would be found able to read and write or shew the slightest knowledge of local affairs. It is a startling fact, but nevertheless a true one, that though Palamow can shew a fair list of well-to-do persons, no more than one or two take the slightest interest in matters not immediately connected with their domestic concerns. I know most of the well-to-do persons personally, and I am only aware of one who takes a newspaper.

14. The summing up of my report shews—(1) that judged from every standpoint, Palamow is utterly unfit to be included in the local self-government scheme, for its people are uneducated and semi-civilized, and even the elders amongst them are hardly a stage better; (2) that unless foreigners are admitted, and that too on a large scale, it would be impossible to form a board or even a committee corresponding to the present branch committee under the Cess Act; (3) that if there is no objection to foreigners being admitted, it would be preferable to have a board to a committee, and to include the sub-division under the third class of districts as set forth in paragraph 8 of the Government circular; (4) that if such a board be sanctioned, it would be permitted to elect its own chairman, who should be some one other than the sub-divisional officer; and (5) that the members of the board should be appointed by Government and not elected.

15. I am of opinion that under no circumstances whatever should the two unions in the sub-division, viz., those of Daltongunge and Garhwa, be abolished. The unions are doing excellent work, and it is solely owing to the sanitary measures carried out in them that they at least, if not the sub-divison generally, can boast of having been free from epidemics of such scourges as cholera and small-pox for so many years. If the unions are abolished there will be no funds for carrying on the excellent sanitary measures now in vogue, and those two towns will, as a necessity, revert again to their old condition of hot-beds of filth and sickness. Of course if Government are prepared in a poor place, such as Palamow is, to supply us with sufficient funds for sanitary improvement purposes, then, but only then, can we afford to abolish our unions.

16. Considering as I do that Palamow is altogether too backward a country for extending the scheme of self-government to, I have not entered upon the questions raised in paragraphs 12, 13, and 14 of the Government circular, nor have I, for the same reasons, nominated persons for a board or committee. I am, however, ready to do so at a moment's notice, should my ideas of the manner in which such board or committee should be constituted be approved.

17. I beg I may not be considered as one who has preconceived ideas against the scheme of local self-government, for I have not. To me personally it would be an advantage if the scheme was a feasible one and could be put in force, for I have an immense charge with more work than I can properly attend to. If therefore a board could be constituted which would relieve me of work connected with primary education, road cess, license tax, &c., I should be most thankful, but I am here in a responsible position, and I consider I am in duty bound to lay such facts as I am acquainted with, together with my own free and unbiassed opinion, before my superiors in order that they may judge how far I am right or wrong; and this I have striven to do in this report.

No. 189L, dated Purulia, the 1st August 1882.

From—A. L. CALY, ESQ., Officiating Deputy Commissioner, Manbhoom,
To—The Commissioner of the Chota Nagpore Division.

YOUR No. 153T of 11th ultimo, with annexures.

Paragraphs 2 and 3 of the above letter have already been replied to by my No. 186L, dated 28th ultimo.

2. As regards your paragraph 4 (paragraph 8 of the Government circular), Manbhoom will probably fall into the first class of districts. The only sub-division is Govindpore, where there is no municipality nor even union—Govindpore itself is chiefly important as being the head-quarters of the sub-division. It is no great centre of trade, and the residents have hitherto shewn no signs of possessing the intelligence and public spirit that must be insisted on as indispensable qualifications for members of a local board.

3. Under the new arrangement, then, Manbhoom would be placed in charge of a district committee at Purulia, with a branch committee at Govindpore subordinate to the district committee and presided over by the sub-divisional officer.

4. (Paragraph 9 of the Government circular). Elective institutions not being considered suitable even for the Purulia municipality, cannot be recommended for the district committee the members of which should be appointed by Government on the local officer's nomination. The chairman must be the district officer, if for no other reason, because it would be, to say the least, inconvenient to make the sub-divisional officer in any capacity subordinate to any one else.

5. (Paragraph 12 of the Government circular.) The arrangements proposed in paragraph 3 of Bengal Government letter No. 921½ of 8th April last, would, as you say, probably form a convenient basis for that part of the new law which is to be made applicable to backward districts. The question of what functions should be entrusted to the new committees is dealt with in that paragraph, and has already been reported on in paragraph 3 of this office No. 44T, dated 13th December last. In that letter it was said that the district post forming, as it now does, part of the imperial postal system, should not be made over to local control. It is noted that the Bengal Government letter also does not mention it as one of the matters to be dealt with by the new committees, whose functions are limited to the supervision of local communications (including staging bungalows, serais, ferries, &c.), certain public works, education, and medical relief. Village sanitation is not specially mentioned, but was perhaps meant to be included in the list.

6. For providing the means of conducting local officers as indicated above, it is recommended that the receipts noted on the margin, estimated to aggregate some Rs. 88,000, be made over to the district committee. Education being very backward in these parts, the committee should be further empowered to raise a rate for primary and middle class schools from the inhabitants of all towns and villages containing not less than a certain number of houses: experience has shewn that, except under pressure, the people generally will not support schools.

	Rs.
Road Cess	32,176
Public Works Cess	32,176
Circuit-house and staging bungalows collection	50
Pound collection	3,200
Serai	3,500
Ferry	1,400
Union	2,500
License tax	13,000
Total ...	88,002

7. All Government grants for educational purposes should be under the committee's control, which would also extend to all funds belonging to dispensaries and other charitable institutions outside the municipality.

Manbhoom. If Government cannot make over the whole of this, the committee's share should certainly not be less than half.

9 (Paragraph 13 of Government circular.) As no local boards are proposed for this district, it seems that the abolition of the Raghunathpore and Jhalda unions is not desirable. The funds raised in these unions are locally very useful,and if for no other reason they may be kept up as a sort of preparatory schools for educating the people in local self-government. Representatives from each of these unions should serve on the district committee, which should also comprise intelligent residents of other important places in the district. The experience gained by these representatives or delegates in working with the district and sub-divisional commitees at head-quarters might help to qualify them for service on local boards in their own villages in future.

10. (Paragraph 14th of the Government letter.) Under the above arrangements, the new district and sub-divisional committees would be practically an amalgamation of existing road cess, school, and dispensary committees with enlarged functions. They would still be under direct official control, and it seems neither necessary nor convenient that they should have any connection with a central non-official body like the local Government board, the duty of which would apparently be to control the proceedings of local boards in more advanced parts of the country.

No 594G, dated Chittagong, the 18th September 1882.

From—E. E. Lowis, Esq., Commissioner of the Chittagong Division,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department.

WITH reference to your circular No. 5TM, dated 5th July 1882, on local self-government, I have the honour to report that previous to the receipt of the resolution I had, in anticipation of some further action being taken in the direction of extending local self-government, addressed the district officers demi-officially, and desired them to take steps to ascertain popular feeling in the matter as so that they might be ready to report on the subject. My instructions were followed, and I have been favoured with a very full expression of the opinions of my subordinates on the points raised—opinions founded on careful investigation into the state of popular feeling on the subject.

3. As a specimen of the view taken by an intelligent native, I give an extract from a letter written by the Chairman of the Branch Road Cess Committee of Muradnagar, district Tipperah. He writes as follows: "I now take this opportunity of submitting a more detailed statement on the same subject. In paragraph 6 of the resolution of the Government of Bengal, in which it is proposed to give the fullest and the fairest trial to the introduction of local self-government in this country, it directs that a tentative and patient procedure in its introduction should be observed wherever the new policy is to be inaugurated. So far as I know of the mofussil organization of this district, I fully believe that this tentative and patient procedure should be observed in the case of Muradnagar. The scheme which the Government have laid down, though, on the one hand, one of every great importance, and is conceived in a most liberal and beneficent spirit, is, I think, too comprehensive and of wide scope to the agricultural population who inhabit the small circle of Muradnagar. And I do not think that the Government intend a hasty introduction of its views among a class of people who are yet far behind the general refinement and culture which the Government make a pedestal of upon which to construct its superstructure of permanent local boards to ensure solid and permanent results. Of course the Government do not wish to thrust upon the people an undue share of the administration of public affairs, simply because it evinces a sanguine desire to introduce a novel policy among a class of people whose genious and instincts, as its calls them, are foreign to it. The people themselves should evince an equally sanguine desire, and their desire must be commensurate with their education, culture, and general training to refined and enlightened views and ideas. The question then is, have the people (I am speaking of the people residing in and out of Muradnagar circle) received that education, cultural and general training which would precede political education? I would answer this question in the negative. There may be persons who are, at the first moment, heated with a passion as it were, at the idea of a political enfranchisement, not fully knowing the extent of responsibilty and self-sacrifice which are conditions precedent to the successful fulfilment of the charge entrusted to them. It is one thing to be led away by specious protests and bauble schemes, and quite another thing to meet manfully public questions of a profoundly public character in a trully sympathetic spirit and boldness. Few among them will patiently stand by and work amidst jealousies, class party, ill-feelings, and troublesome public criticisms for the sake of the work alone, and nothing which interests them more vitally. It has struck the Government of Bengal that if the members are unwilling to travel a few miles at their own expense, it is not probable that any of them will agree to undertake the labours and responsibilities of the chairmanship without remuneration. I should remark that this observation equally applies to a member of the local board also.

I say this somewhat from actual experience. How often have I marked the repeated absences of the members of this committee who are generally accepted as well-to-do gentlemen, and utter regardlessness and apathy of a few more in its affairs. All this I would attribute to the paucity of general education and enlightenment. Men therefore who lack in the first rudiments in this political arena, are not fit for independent and absolute dominion over the affairs, not only of their own, but of those who are helpless to carry their own burdens. As for the mass of the people whose voice in the self-government system the Government is anxious to secure, I would agree with you in saying that they are chiefly agriculturists who take no interest in anything outside their own jute plantations and rice-fields and occasionally harassing law suits with their landlords and neighbours, led about by sharp pettyfoggers and avaricious brokers."

4. The inhabitants of this division are Mahomedan agriculturists who have no political aspirations whatever, who do not know what self-government means, and whose ears the echo of the present movement has not yet reached so as to stir within them any desire to change the existing order of things. The subject has, it is true, attracted attention in the civil stations and amongst the educated classes; but even there it has been taken up and discussed mainly by the pleaders, amlah, and other educated men who are mostly Hindoos, and very often inhabitants of other districts, while the people themselves I am bound to say, have not evinced the slightest interest in the matter; and I feel sure that any attempt to thrust the system on the villagers in the interior who are not yet ripe for the change would only be to court failure.

5. But although I do not consider that any scheme of local self-government can be introduced at present in the interior, I hope the day is not far distant when an interest in such matters will have been awakened, and I feel sure that much may be done to hasten such an awakening by persistent endeavours to develop the punchayet system. It seems to me quite possible, as vacancies occur in the village punchayets, to arrange to have places filled by election; gradually to get the members of punchayets to take interest in carrying out local improvements; and so by degrees to induce a sense of responsibility and capacity for self-government. It would be far better thus to train the people themselves to undertake the duties we wish them to assume, than to thrust on them a system for which they are not as a body prepared

6. The village punchayets are, I admit, beginning to make themselves felt; and though as I have noticed in my annual Police Report, some of the district and sub-divisional officers complain of their interferences as mischievous, it is a sign of vitality amongst the agricultural population that is not without significance. But granting this, I am still of opinion that nothing in the immediate past of the history or traditions of the people has tended in any way to awaken the spirit which we now wish them to exhibit, and we must be content to limit our efforts to fostering any indications towards such an awakening, and to wait patiently for the result of our labours before we can expect the people at large to undertake intelligently the responsibilities we desire them to assume. Until we can feel sure that some considerable portion of the people respond to the invitation to take on themselves the cares of self-government, our advances must be cautious and guarded, and we must be careful not to be carried away by the enthusiasm of the educated few, who in some cases cry out for the bestowal of functions the proper discharge of which they have not always considered. As regards the rural portions of this division, I am clearly of opinion that the time has not come for the extension to them of the scheme set forth in the Government resolution In some of the towns it may be otherwise, though even there, in extending self-government to certain municipalities we will be following the recommendations of the few and not the expressed wishes of the many or even of a considerable minority.

7. As directed in the Government letter, everything has been done to ensure publicity being given to the proposed scheme. The requirements of the law also have been made known, and the advocates of free election personally warned that a petition signed by at least one-third of the rate-payers praying for the introduction of the elective system should be presented. Up to date, however, no petition has been presented, and I have been asked to accept in place of it the expression of opinion embodied in the resolutions drawn up at the public meetings held to discuss the question. A native gentleman of Chittagong expresses the general feeling of the promoters of the scheme when he writes: "If it (the presentation of a petition) be insisted on, no mofussil municipality would ever have elective system. Apart from the humiliating and troublesome task of going round to the rate-payers and voters for the purpose of obtaining signatures of one-third of the whole number to the petition, the difficulty to be experienced in obtaining signatures is very great."

8. The fact appears to be that the mass of the rate-payers do not care the snuff of a candle for the elective system, the only persons who have taken up the cry being the educated minority. I was present at the meeting held to discuss the question in Chittagong, and was struck by the total absence of all respectable Mahomedans. There were some of the lower class Mussulman population present, who had evidently been drawn there by curiosity, but the respectable portion of the assembly and those who spoke during the discussion were Hindoos. This is remarkable, for Chittagong is a Mahomedan district, and there are, I know, in the town several respectable Mahomedan zemindars and traders, whom I certainly expected to see, supposing the movement to have been a popular one.

9. I gather from the district reports that the same thing happened at Noakholly and Commillah, and this, coupled with the inability of the promoters of the scheme to obtain signatures to a petition as required by law, leads me to suppose that the movement is confined to a minority which does not represent the public. Ignorance as to the proposal to hold the meeting could not be pleaded here, for printed notices were issued announcing the date, hour, and object of the meeting, so that those who absented themselves must have stayed away purposely, possibly sharing the feelings of the native merchants who when questioned by me declared that things were very well as they are.

10. The opinion of the English-speaking class is, however, in favour of the introduction of the elective system into the municipalities of Chittagong, Noakholly, Commillah, and Bramunberiah, and though they seem to have failed in carrying the rest of the community with them—I presume in deference to the wishes of the educated inhabitants,—the elective system will be introduced.

11. If this change in the manner of selecting members be adopted, I do not anticipate much change in the personnel of the committees, for I take it that the persons who have taken an interest in this movement will be able to get themselves nominated as members of the future municipal committees, and in that case the existing committees will remain very much as they are, with the exception possibly of one or two Mahomedans being excluded. These are, as I have said, entirely Mahomedan districts. The various committees are, however, composed to a great extent of Hindoos, and this state of things is likely to continue even under an elective system, for, as I have noticed, the educated Mahomedans here do not seem to identify themselves with the present movement, and unless they can be induced to do so, we will most assuredly have a government of the majority by members of the minority. I have discussed the question with some of the leading Mahomedans here, but find it difficult to combat what appears to be the general impression amongst this community that the present is only another means of throwing power and emoluments into the hands of the Hindoos.

12. As to the funds to be placed at the disposal of the several municipal committees, I do not consider that they can do more than administer the amounts raised by municipal taxation, for I do not advocate the charge of the public buildings being made over to them, nor that of the Government schools. Certainly, as regards Chittagong, it would not be desirable to place the Government school under the municipality, as that body have already got a school of their own which is a rival to the Government institution.

13. A suggestion has been made to make over the assessment of license tax to local bodies, or to invest them with power to levy taxes; but it seems hopeless to expect any assistance in this direction so far at least as the Municipal Commissioners in this division are concerned, for this power is one which they have no wish to be invested with. One point on which all are agreed is that any attempt on the part of a local body to levy a tax must soon render the measure unpopular, and it is quite clear that though the members of a municipality may undertake the responsibility of expending money provided for them by Government, they will not undertake to incur the odium of raising funds.

14. The question of the advisability of paying the members for their services has been raised in the resolution and caught up by those who have addressed me on the subject. One gentleman writes: "It would be better to make the chairmen stipendiary officers in order that they may be induced to take more active interest in the administration of the funds." Another says, the people of Chittagong have not yet learnt to work for the good of their country from disinterested motives; they will do nothing unless it brings some pecuniary advantages to them. In these opinions as to the necessity for paying members I cannot concur. The duties of the members of any municipal committee in this division will be light, and there appears to be no necessity for making the posts salaried ones.

15. As to the appointment of chairman, the wish of those who attended the meetings held to discuss the subject and who represent the class from whom the members of committee will be elected, seems to be that the committee should be allowed to elect their own chairman and vice-chairman, and this I see no reason for refusing, for unless the whole thing is to be a farce, it is necessary that these local bodies should be absolutely free in their deliberation and should not be fettered even by a semblance of official interference. The chairman thus elected will of course have a vote.

16. The qualifications for membership have been freely discussed, and a wish has been expressed that the standard should be made as low as possible, and also that all pleaders, members of the professions, and all graduates should be eligible, whatever their income or interest in the town. In this I cannot concur. Those who are to manage the local funds must have some personal interest in the town; and I would recommend the adoption of the test of qualification mentioned in paragraph 10 of the resolution. As regards the voters, the case is different, and I think the test in their case should be a low one. Various suggestions have been made regarding these, but the most feasible idea seems to be to fix the limit at an annual payment of Rs. 3 municipal tax. This would give a majority of the inhabitants an interest in the election and something to stir public attention. The limit is a low one; but all the municipalities in this division are poor and the majority of the taxpayers also poor. I have not yet obtained from the Collectors of Chittagong and Noakholly figures shewing the number of persons eligible as candidates and the number entitled to vote under the above conditions; but the information has been urgently called for and will be forwarded when received. The Collector of Tipperah reports that the following are the figures for his district :—

	Possible candidates.	Voters.
Commillah	132	570
Brahmunberia	21	185

17. In each municipality a list of persons entitled to vote will be prepared and copies hung up in the public offices and various parts of the town. A list of persons eligible to sit on the municipal board will also be prepared, and such persons will be invited to send in their names to the Magistrate, if they wish to put themselves up for election. A list of the candidates for election will be published for the information of voters, and previous to the day fixed, voting papers will be available for all who wish to record their votes. The papers will be filled in with the names of selected candidates and deposited at some place or places previously arranged; up to a certain limit, the persons receiving most votes will be held to have been elected.

18. To sum up, I would not recommend the extension of local self-government to any part of my division, except to the municipalities of Chittagong, Noakholly, Commillah, and Brahmunberiah. The number of members for each may be fixed after consultation with the local authorities ; but the entire number to be elected by the voters themselves, this system being introduced in deference to the wishes of the educated few in the hope that its advantages will in time come to be appreciated by the many. The committee so elected by the rate-payers will be at liberty to select their own chairman and vice-chairman from amongst their own number, and will manage municipal matters, including the charge of the dispensary, as well as the tolls and ferries within the municipality, the funds at their disposal being those raised by municipal taxation, and their operations being limited only as regards the amount to be expended on any single project, sanction to any expenditure on any original work over Rs. 1,000 having to be obtained from Government. My proposal amounts to little more than allowing the members of committees to be elected instead of being nominated; but in view of the indifference with which the project has been received by the bulk of the inhabitants, I do not see my way to granting any more extensive powers or privileges.

No. 662G, dated Bankipore, the 23rd September 1882.

From—F. M. HALLIDAY, Esq., Commissioner of the Patna Division,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Medl. & Municipal Department.

IN continuation of my letter No. 613G, dated 9th instant, I have the honour to submit this further report in conformity with the instructions contained in Government circular No. 5T—M, dated 5th July.

2. Taking first the district of Patna, I find the Magistrate considers it may be included in class 3, and local boards may be formed in each of the sub-divisions. The Sub-Divisional Officers of Dinapore and Behar have both reported in favour of it from their respective charges. The Sub-Divisional Officer of Barh, who has very recently joined, was at first adverse to the scheme ; but after further enquiry he states that "many of the leading gentlemen are of opinion that the system should be introduced to the full." I have in my previous letter shewn that several meetings have been held in Patna and one at Barh. These were attended by a considerable number of educated gentlemen, and were stated to be unanimously in favour of boards for the sub-divisions. The Magistrate considers rightly that, in the present state of education in he district nothing in the way of a popular expression of feeling can be expected.

3. For board purposes the Dinapore sub-division might be doubled up with the head-quarters. It is a very small sub-division, running along between the railway and the river. A very important part of its population lives along the Dinapore road between Bankipore and the cantonments, and has many interests in common with Patna City Access to Bankipore by the East Indian Railway is easy for all the inhabitants of the sub-division.

4. The election of the members of the board presents more difficulties than that of the municipal members. It may be taken as true in the main that the average of education and intelligence in the country is lower than in the towns, and that in Behar especially it is notoriously in a backward state compared with that of Bengal, while the population being more scattered it is harder to disseminate such new ideas as those now brought forward.

5. The Sub-Divisional Officer of Behar would leave the election of the members of the board to a committee formed of the most capable and influential men of the community ; but the Magistrate truly remarks how this committee is itself to be formed, or why, having obtained such a committee, we should not at once secure its services on the board, the Sub-Divisional Officer does not explain. The Dinapore Sub-Divisional Officer proposes that members should be chosen by the punchayets appointed under the Chowkidari Act. The meetings held were in favour of election generally. The facts stated in the circular shew that hitherto the urban population of Bengal has not availed itself to any extent of its elective privileges, and we cannot expect a less informed population to be more advanced. The Magistrate therefore thinks that for the present it would be well to confine the election of candidates by individual voters to the areas immediately surrounding the towns. For the remainder of the district he would adopt the Dinapore proposal, and allow the punchayets to select members. I believe the proposal is well worth trial. The qualifications entitling to vote mentioned in the circular have been generally accepted. In addition to those it has been everywhere suggested that education should carry a special privilege. This could be met in the same way as proposed for municipal elections, by allowing two separate members on each board to be chosen by the educated classes of the community, the qualification being the same as for the municipality. It is agreed that the qualifications for candidates should be those mentioned in the circular, except only as regards candidates to be elected by the educated classes In their case the property qualification might be dispensed with.

If the election by individual voters were for the present confined to areas around towns, the election could be conducted for the most part by the same agency and under the same rules as that for the municipality itself. The Magistrate has shewn that the number of voters for each sub-division under the several heads would be as follows :—

Voters paying Rs. 10 license tax.		Paying Rs. 10 road	Private property.
		Head-quarters and Dinapore.
826	...	925	700
		Barh.
212	...	371	.....
		Behar.
266	...	749	35

6. The appointment of chairman for the boards is certainly more difficult than in the case of municipalities. The work to be carried out is more varied, and requires consequently a higher standard of education, of tact and official discipline, while the experience which any of the native community have had is restricted. The Magistrate states that certain questions are at times submitted to the Dispensary and Educational Committees for their decision, and a few members occasionally take an active interest in the conduct of schools; but the majority have a very slight idea of the difficulties which have to be surmounted. These remarks apply still more forcibly to matters connected with roads and public works. To place a native gentleman who has had no previous acquaintance with the management of an office at the head of so many departments would be at once to court failure. For these reasons it seems to me that a suggestion made by the Magistrate is worth consideration; it is that, on the introduction of the scheme, the chairman elect should work as vice-chairman on probation for six months under the existing official chairman, and with this proviso a non-official chairman might be appointed on each of the boards of the district at the instance of the boards themselves, but subject to the approval of Government.

7. Adverting to paragraph 12 of your letter, I do not think the assessment and collection of the license tax could be made over to the boards or municipalities until a sense of responsibility for carrying out the works and improvements has been firmly established. This is also the opinion of the Magistrate. At present there would be a tendency to reduce the assessment at the expense of any other funds in the hands of the boards, and it would be difficult for us to say that a certain fixed sum must be raised. The Magistrate has made no suggestion as to the Public Works cess or any other source of revenue; but he points to the possible advantage of making over for collection a part of the excise revenue, such for instance as that derived from country liquor outstills. Local knowledge is specially needed for checking the establishment of stills in places where the population is likely to be much demoralized by them and for watching their effect.

8. As to question of unions, the following is a list of those in the Patna district :—

Dinapore sub-division.— Dinapore Nizamut, Monair, Khagoul.

Barh sub-division.— Futwa, Baikutpore, Nowadah, Mahomedpore, Mokameh.

Of these the Dinapore Nizamut, Khagoul, and Mokameh are the most important. The first has a population of 23,740, and immediately adjoins a large cantonment. The other two have a considerable resident European population, and Mokameh is likely to become of still more importance when the junction with the Tirhoot Railway line is completed.

	Rs.
Dinapore	8,739
Monair	1,367
Khagoul	2,423
Futwa	3,042
Baikutpore	1,314
Nowadah	1,204
Mahomedpore	1,734
Mokameh	3,019

The income raised by these unions has been as shewn in the margin.

Hitherto the greater part of this had been expended on the police force, even the road repair charges being almost entirely borne by the district cess.

If local boards are vested with sufficient power to enforce the necessary sanitation, there seems no reason why these unions should not be abolished. There are no small municipalities in this district.

9. For the district of Gya I beg to submit the following. In regard to the question as to under what category the district should be placed, it seems advisable to place it under category (2).

It is out of the question to have a local board for the Nowadah sub-division. The other sub-divisional officers seem to have reported under the impression that Government had determined to have local boards in Aurungabad and Jehanabad. Gya is a backward district. If the scheme is to be introduced with caution, then I think sufficient will be done if an elective municipality is given to Gya town, and a district committee is appointed. The Sub-Divisional Officer of Aurungabad has reported that the election of any part of the members of a local board there would be impossible owing to the backwardness of the sub-division. In the Collector's opinion the condition of the people of Gya district is such as not to warrant the introduction of the elective system for the membership of local boards. When municipal elections have taken place for some years, then some notion of what is meant may have percolated to the interior, and an experiment might then be made by electing a local board for the sudder sub-division. But if it be decided otherwise, then the qualifications, so far as they go, proposed in your letter for members and voters may be tried according to those proposals; it is estimated that there would be the following number of persons qualified :—

	For members.			For voters.
	By payment of Rs. 25 road cess.	By payment of Rs. 20 license tax.	By Rs. 1,000 per annum income not from land.	By payment of Rs. 10 road cess.	By payment of Rs. 10 license tax.	By Rs. 500 per mensem, other income.
Sudder sub-division	433	116	4	987	386	6
Aurungabad Sub-Divisional Officer's estimate	108	158	8	305	406	12
Sub-division head-quarters' estimate	241	130	4	646	354	12
Jehanabad sub-division	314	75	4	980	187	9
Nowadah ditto	656	40	3	1,226	159	12

It is not easy to estimate the numbers under the third qualification; in each case more detailed investigation would be necessary. Mr. Buckland considers that the enquiries necessary might be regarded as inquisitorial, and connected with a possible income tax He is also very decided in the opinion that, if a local board should be appointed in any sub-division in the district, it would be necessary that the sub-divisional officer, and in the sudder an official, should be chairman and have a vote. In this I concur with him.

10. As to the funds to be made over to each board, the Collector of this district also anticipates serious trouble if the license tax assessments and collections are made over to bodies more or less independent.

Under existing circumstances it is difficult enough to keep a check on these matters.

11. There are eleven unions in this district; but there would be no object in maintaining them where local boards are established. If the district is treated under category (1), they can be brought under the district committee.

12. Shahabad.—I take next the district of Shahabad. The Collector states that the proposal contained in Bengal Government letter No. 5, dated 5th July 1882, that there should be no district boards, was disapproved by all those whom he consulted, and all the natives and others agreed that the administration must be by districts, which is and has been for generations the unit of administration. On this point, however, it is not I think necessary now to enter upon discussion.

13. There are at present three sub divisional Road Cess Committees in this district, with a considerable allowance of Rs. 10,000 a year each to be spent at discretion on roads. All are agreed that these should be retained, and the local boards should be founded on their model. There is no area smaller than a sub-division which could with advantage be placed under a separate jurisdiction. Mr. Nolan, assuming that the Government of India has directed that members should be chosen by election wherever this may be practicable, reports that it is practicable in Shahabad, and that he sees no objection, except such as might tell against elective institutions for rural communities in all parts of India. Those consulted, including the members of the Road Cess Committee, considered that there should be a property qualification for a vote, and that the amount proposed by the Government of Bengal, viz., payment of Rs. 10 per year as road cess, or Rs. 10 license tax, or an income of Rs. 500, be adopted.

With this qualification the number of voters would be as follows:—

Sub-divisions.	Rs. 10 road cess.	Rs. 10 license tax.	Rs. 500 income.
Arrah	266	260	411
Buxar	158	239	309
Sasseeram	233	234	459
Bhubooah	162	123	162

The qualification for candidates suggested in the same letter was also approved of.

14. With regard to the appointment of chairman, those consulted at Bhubooah were in favour of having the sub-divisional officer chairman without a vote; but Mr. Nolan states that the feeling elsewhere seems to be for non-official chairmen to be elected by the members. Bhubooah is a backward sub-division, and I should place it in the same category as the Gya sub-divisions of Nowadah and Aurungabad. Sasseeram should certainly have the sub-divisional officer as chairman. On the whole, for the reasons I have given further on in connection with the circumstances of the Mozufferpore district, I am myself of opinion that the proposals for Mozufferpore might well be applied to Shahabad. The sub-division of Bhubooah I would exclude, as I have proposed the exclusion of Sitamarhi in the Mozufferpore district.

15. As regards the district of Mozufferpore, it appears from reports of the proceedings of meetings which were held at Mozufferpore, Mahwa, Lallgunge, and Hajeepore, that the opinion was in favour of introducing the elective system in its entirety, and of selecting their own chairman and vice-chairman for each board.

Mr. Worsley, the Collector, is decidedly of opinion that the district is one which should be placed in class 3, i.e., that it is one which contains sub-divisions in all of which local boards can be formed.

A fair commencement has already been made in the working of branch committees at Hajeepore and Sitamarhi under the Road Cess Act, and the experiment has proved that mixed committees of European and native gentlemen can be formed, by which the road work of the sub-divisions can be efficiently administered.

16. With regard to the election of members and appointment of chairman, Mr. Worsley recommends that (except in Sitamarhi sub-division, where the elective system should not be introduced at all at present) one-third of the members be elected, that the Joint-Magistrate in the sudder sub-division and the sub-divisional officer in the interior be chairman of each local board, and that the vice-chairman of each board be a native of Behar and be selected by the members of the board.

It is true that many influential and intelligent native gentlemen have joined in resolutions praying for the introduction of the elective system in its entirety, and for the right of managing local affairs without the intervention of officials; but Mr. Worsley rightly remarks that the number of those gentlemen, and of all who supported the resolutions, cannot be regarded as "a reasonable proportion of the persons who would be qualified to vote according to such standard as might be generally adopted." Mr. Worsley has gone carefully into the question, and as the circumstances of Mozufferpore and its meetings are peculiar, I venture to submit his opinion as follows:—"I have also reason to believe that the desire to follow the lead of other districts, the fear of being stigmatised as a backward and ungrateful body of people, ignorance of the real questions for consideration, and (in the case of Mozufferpore meeting) terrifying pictures of my possible successor in the district, were powerful factors in winning adherents to views which had been actually put forward or entertained at first by a small but influential set of persons. I have been informed on excellent authority that many of the principal residents of the town of Mozufferpore had at a preliminary meeting resolved to follow the previous resolutions passed in connection with municipal boards; but that at the formal meeting of the 20th ultimo most of them were pursuaded to abandon their decision. Again, but for the interest and action taken by the officers of Government in the proposed scheme, and their desire to promote public meetings on the subject, I firmly believe that the people themselves would have remained perfectly passive. The several resolutions and the letters of the Governments of India and Bengal had evoked no response in the district, and with the exception of those who have attended meetings, or have been directly consulted by myself and subordinates, I doubt if any of the residents in the interior have given the subject a thought, even if they have heard of it."

17. In the reports from the Sub-Divisional Officers of Hajeepore and Sitamarhi a good deal of detailed information regarding the state of education and other matters has been furnished. It is clear from the facts and figures given that "education in the ordinary sense of the term" is extremely backward, and that "political education" cannot be expected at present to make much progress, if indeed it can be said to have yet commenced at all. The qualifications for members and voters should I think be those proposed by the Government, viz., the payment of Rs. 25 road cess, or Rs. 20 license tax, or proof of income from other sources than land amounting to Rs. 1,000 per annum in the case of members, and in the case of voters payment of Rs. 10 road cess, Rs. 10 license tax, or Rs. 500 income. There seems no necessity for admitting such a wide range of qualifications as has been proposed in the case of candidates and voters in municipalities with the qualifications above mentioned; the probable number of persons qualified will be as follows:—

	Candidates.	Voters.
Mozufferpore sub-division	600	1,600
Hajeepore	450	1,200

18. No suggestions have been made on the mode of voting to be adopted, and the advocates of the elective system in this district do not appear to have proposed any mode as specially suitable.

19. In the matter of new local rates, Mr. Worsley recommends that none such be imposed for the purpose of providing additional funds; but that the maximum rates allowed in the Cess Act be increased; and he concurs in the view before expressed in this report, that the boards could not be safely trusted with the making of license tax assessments.

20. A special feature in the administration of the Road Cess Committee in the Mozufferpore district is the part which the indigo-planters have taken, and as in recent local prints some very unjust charges have been put forward by gentlemen who should have known better, I think it necessary to bring to notice Mr. Worsley's remarks on the subject in this report, as any scheme that would have the effect of excluding the indigo-planters from a large share in the administration of the road fund of the district would be very undesirable. The unjust charge referred to by Mr. Worsley is that the indigo-planters have hitherto been specially and unfairly favoured in the matter of roads, and that the tracts round indigo factories have consequently been intersected with communications presenting the appearance of "a spider's web." The true explanation, however, is that in old times (as the records of the office will shew) the planters maintained many excellent roads in the vicinity of their factories at their own expense, and that in the famine year of 1874 many managers of factories were Circle Superintendents, and constructed under Mr. Worsley's own orders a large number of roads as relief works. It was only natural that most of such roads should have been subsequently brought into the district road list. Too much praise cannot be accorded to the planters for the gratuitous and excellent services which they have always rendered in the making and repairing of the roads.

21. Sarun.—Taking the district of Sarun, I will begin with the newest and at the same time the most backward sub-division—Gopalgunge. As regards this sub-division, I, in concurrence with the Collector, have no hesitation in saying that a local board, of which any portion of the members should be elected, or the chairman should be any person other than he sub-divisional officer, cannot be formed; and this is the general opinion. The sub-divisional officer remarks thus:—"It will readily be understood that throughout the thana of Baragaon the influence of the Hutwa Raj so predominates that it would be impossible to one who, as a member of a local board, would give an independent vote. The population consists of the ryots, servants, and thikadars of the Raj.

"The selection of members for thana Gopalgunge would be equally difficult."

22. Sewan is in a more advanced state than Gopalgunge, as indicated, among other ways, by the fact that it possesses a municipality, and the Branch Road Cess Committee is vested with larger powers than have been conferred on the Gopalgunge Committee. The general opinion of the educated portion of the native community is that a local board should be formed; but that for the present the members should be appointed by Government, and the chairman should be the sub-divisional officer, the vice-chairman being a non-official elected by the members of the board. It was considered that the introduction of the elective system is at present impossible.

23. I now come to the head-quarters or Chupra sub-division. Here the opinions of the native community, as expressed by their leading members, is practically unanimous on the following points:—

(a.) There should be a local board.
(b.) The chairman should for the present be the Magistrate of the district.
(c.) There should be a non-official vice-chairman elected by the members.

On the question of electing the members of the board opinions appeared to be more decided; but the prevailing feeling was in favour of making the experiment of filling up a certain proportion of the places by election, the proportion being generally put at two-thirds.

The Collector, Mr. Quinn, expresses his opinion that Chupra is the only sub-division in which the proposal of introducing the elective system is really open to discussion at all; but that even here it would be premature to attempt its introduction until the system has been tried in the municipality. It is not too much to say, he adds, that nine-tenths of the intelligence of the sub-division is contained in the municipality. There the elective system has not yet been introduced, and up to the present it has not even been applied for by the proportion of rate-payers mentioned in the Act. Mr. Quinn is very loath to apply the elective system until it has been worked for a year or two in the municipality, and he would in any case introduce it gradually, beginning with the Chupra thana, which contains a large proportion of the persons qualified to sit on the local board, and also contains the two municipalities of Chupra and Revilgunge.

The number of persons who, according to the qualifications suggested in the Government letter, would be eligible respectively to vote, and to be elected as members of the board in the Chupra sub-division, is as follows:—

Persons paying Rs. 10 license tax.	Paying Rs. 10 road cess.	Persons paying Rs. 20 license tax.	Paying Rs. 25 road cess.
1,055	1,400	424	782

It would be necessary to add a few classes to those qualified by the payment of tax or cess, so as to include persons of superior education.

24. It would seem that the interest taken in the native community is, as far as can be gathered, entirely confined to the educated class, and that in Sarun is a very small class.

The vast majority of the persons who would be entitled to vote according to the qualifications suggested by Government have seemingly in this district, more perhaps than in others equally advanced, no desire to have local affairs managed by a board of which they would be allowed to elect the members. A reduction of taxation is generally desired of course; but assuming that no reduction is made, and this may with fair certainty be assumed, it is believed that the tax-payers generally are quite indifferent as to the constitution of the governing body.

25. Chumparun.—The Collector of Chumparun has dwelt much in his report on the backward state of education in that district, and it is with reference to this that he has desired to shew the position which the district holds, if the extent to which education has been diffused amongst the masses be accepted as any test of the fitness of the people to be entrusted with the management of their own affairs. The figures for Chumparun shew about 9,000 boys attending school out of a male population of about 900,000; in other words, that only 6 per cent. of the school-going population go to school. Practically speaking, it may be said that the mass of the people are totally uneducated, and that any progress made in diffusing education has been made amongst boys of a school-going age to the exclusion of the grown-up population. Mr. Henry rightly says that too much stress cannot be laid upon this fact, when the question under consideration is whether the people are or are not fitted to receive political education. With the knowledge of the very backward intellectual condition of the people, it seemed hardly necessary to dwell further upon the consideration of the category in which the district should be placed. With a view, however, of obtaining the best information available, the Collector consulted intelligent residents of the place, and he had the benefit of hearing the opinion of a most influential meeting convened and presided over by the Maharajah of Bettiah, who, with his son, has greatly interested himself in discussing the applicability of the Government scheme. This meeting was attended by all the leading men in the town of Bettiah, and by representatives from the interior. After due deliberation, the meeting recorded its opinion that it would for the present be inexpedient to extend the system of local self-government to the Bettiah sub-division, and they hoped that no steps in that direction would be taken until they were able to judge of the success at the introduction of the proposed system into the municipality.

26. I agree with the Collector, giving due weight to these facts, in thinking that Chumparun is a district where the development of the local self-government scheme can be secured only by utilizing existing institutions, improving such machinery as is already in working order, and giving enlarged functions to the members of the general district board.

We should have to revise and strengthen the existing Road Cess Committee, reorganizing it as a general district board, and allowing it to absorb the other committees. Mr. Henry points out that, as at present constituted, the whole of the work of the Road Cess Committee is performed by the European members. They alone attend meetings and display interest in road cess affairs. He proposes to add to the revised list of the members of the Road Cess Committee the names of two resident native gentlemen for each thana, who will have seats at the general district board, and at the same time be available for the thana sub-committees.

Having regard to the interests of the district, it does not seem advisable to recommend the introduction of local self-government on the broader basis sketched out in the Government letter.

27. Durbhunga.—As regards the district of Durbhunga, the Collector, Mr. Boxwell, considers that a district council is indispensable, and it should consist of delegates from the local boards. If election is granted, there is no doubt, he thinks, that the qualifications suggested in the Government letter are as good as possible.

Election in the Durbhunga sub-division would almost certainly result, according to Mr. Boxwell, in the appointment of some of the cousins of the Maharajah, but this would be no objection. The Durbhunga Raj is so big a thing in the district that it enters into almost every question, and it is hard to say whether canvassing would be the rule or not, and he thinks it would be a question whether the higher people would wish for the honour or dislike the trouble more. The Collector does not consider that any part of the district is suited for the franchise. In this he is supported by the Sub-Divisional Officers of Tajpore and Madhubunnee. On the whole, I would recommend that the proposition submitted by Mr. Henry for Chumparun should be first tried also in the Durbhunga district, that of revising and enlarging the present District Road Cess Committee, and absorbing in it the other committees at present existing.

28. On the subject of control to be exercised by executive authorities opinions appear to differ. The view that a central board of control is essential to the working of the proposed scheme is generally concurred in. Vigorous and energetic members should be appointed, and should be empowered to proceed on an inspection, to call for proceedings, and to issue stringent orders. It should be laid down that all municipal and local boards shall send copies of their proceedings, budgets, &c., to the district officer, and comply with his requests for information and explanation.

This appears to be in harmony with paragraph 17 of the Government of India resolution of 18th May last. The district officer might communicate to Government, or to the central board, or to both, where the failure of the local or municipal board to make due provision for roads or other important works is causing public inconvenience. It is quite within the bounds of possibility that affairs might be brought to a dead lock by internal dissensions on the local board or municipal board. I would submit for consideration whether the control of a divisional directing body would not be essentially necessary, as it is desirable that any authority of the kind should be able to act with promptitude. While a distant central authority was calling for further particulars, bridges and embankments would be rapidly disappearing. It must be borne in mind that the Indian working season is of short duration, and that, if the central body has to wait for repeated default before it is empowered to intervene, a whole year will frequently elapse before steps can be taken. On the other hand, the Collector of Shahabad points out that the proposal to create a central board for supervision was not clearly understood by those he consulted. Supervision is exercised by the criticism of reports in the form of returns or otherwise, and by inspection. For the former a new board sitting in Calcutta would have no greater facilities than is possessed by the present executive machinery, while for inspection it would have little opportunity.

The Executive Government as organised has an elaborate machinery for control and inspection of all kinds, and it has been remarked that it is not clear why any new and probably less efficient body is desirable. A central board with its office would be expensive, and the money available for such a purpose might probably be better spent in other ways. Of late years the audit of accounts by experts visiting the different districts has become more regular, and this system might be still further extended.

For other purposes it would seem that the Commissioner and district officers would be the best persons to ascertain whether the boards worked satisfactorily.

No. 1707J, dated Bhagulpore, the 28th September 1882.

From—C. T. METCALFE, ESQ., C.S.I., Officiating Commissioner of the Bhagulpore Division and Sonthal Pergunnahs,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department.

IN continuation of my letter No. 1597J of the 14th instant, regarding the extension of local self-government, I have the honour to give below an abstract of the report from the district officer of Monghyr on the subject.

2. As noted in my report, there is only one municipality in Monghyr, viz. at the head-quarters of the district; Jamalpore is a station, and Khurukpore a union.

3. A translation of section 16, Act V (B.C.) of 1876, with a notice, was widely published in the town, and the intensions of Government made known by beat of drum.

4. A public meeting of rate-payers was convened at Monghyr on the 21st ultimo, and also on subsequent dates, the result of which was as follows.

5. The meetings resolved—

I.—That the Chairman of the municipality be elected by the commissioners from among non-official members. Mr. Kean's opinion is that the commissioners should elect their Chairman, subject to the approval of Government, from the whole corporation (official and non-official).

II.—That the members of the municipal board should be chosen by election. Mr. Kean says that, as the people at large have to a great extent an intelligent interest and understanding of the municipal system and its working, the elective system may be tried; but as it has never yet been introduced, and is only tentative, it would be expedient to introduce it gradually, and, in this view, he recommends that not less than two-thirds of the commissioners should be elected and one-third appointed by Government.

6. With regard to the qualification of members and voters, the meetings resolved that the following persons should be eligible for members or commissioners:—

(a) House-holders paying a house tax of not less than Rs. 10 annually, independently of other taxation.

(b) Non-official residents of five years' standing, who are likely to continue as residents, whose annual income shall not be less than Rs. 750, and men of good reputation.

(c) Pensioners drawing not less than Rs. 20 per month.

7. It was resolved that no person who had been convicted of a non-bailable offence should be eligible.

8. With regard to the test for voters the meetings resolved upon the following qualifications being necessary:—

(a) All persons eligible to become members and persons paying municipal taxes amounting to Rs. 4 annually.

(b) Persons whose incomes from all sources amounted to Rs 200. These must be residents of at least five years' standing and likely to continue to reside, and men of good reputation.

9. The meetings came to no conclusion regarding the system or method of election to be adopted

10. In Mr. Kean's opinion, as regards the qualification for a candidate for election should be that he is a male rate-payer of full age, resident in the municipal limits; that he can read and write; that he has never been convicted of a non bailable offence; and that he pays house rate on his own account of Rs. 10 a year. The qualifications of a voter should be that he is a male rate-payer of full age; that he pays house rate on his own account of not less than Rs. 4 a year.

11. For the system of election Mr. Kean thinks that that now in force in the town of Krishnaghûr, or something very similar, should be adopted, viz. the town be divided into wards, each of which should return two members ; any two rate-payers be entitled to nominate a candidate ; the nomination be intimated to the Vice-Chairman on or before a certain date each year, the consent of the nominee being intimated at the same time ; the notification required by rule 14 be issued ; if objections be made to eligibility of a candidate, they be notified in writing on or before a fixed date to the Vice-Chairman, who shall hear and decide the same The Vice-Chairman and three or four Commissioners should then sit for the purpose of conducting the elections ; they would decide on what day and at what places the poll shall be held, and they shall notify their decision, and the actual election should take place in the manner stated in paragraphs 7—15 of the rules for the election of municipal commissioners for the town of Krishnaghur, dated the 7th December 1875.

12. This election system cannot under the law be introduced unless a petition is filed on the part of one-third of the rate-payers. It was notified at the meetings that such a petition would be forthcoming, but it has not yet reached the district officer.

13. With regard to the question of local boards, Mr. Kean is of opinion that the district for the present should be provided with three such boards, viz. one for each of the sub-divisions. He states that it was at first thought practicable to form more than one board at each sub-division, and the sub-divisional officers recommended this scheme ; but after consultation with native gentlemen, it was found that, it would be next to impossible to do so, and he accordingly recommends to make the sub-division the unit of administration, making the only exception at Khurukpore, the union at which place should be abolished, and in its stead a local board established.

14. In the Begooserai sub-division a meeting was convened by the sub-divisional officer. The members expressed their wish that the elective system should be adopted, and that the Chairman should be elected by the members of the board ; this latter was not shared in by the European residents of the sub-division, of whom there are a large number. The sub-divisional officer is doubtful of the expediency of introducing the elective system, but thinks that, as it is the wish of the more advanced portion of the community, and there seems a fair chance of success, it should be given a trial. The scheme proposed is that each of the eight pergunnahs which constitute the sub-division should form an elective circle, and that votes should be recorded at certain selected centres in each pergunnah ; that the names of the candidates should be notified, and a set of circle clerks with a peon sent round to call in the voters. The district officer, however, after consulting the educated natives, has come to the conclusion that the scheme is not suited to this district, as it is very backward in education, and it would be impossible to insure independent voters. He recommends the local board at Begooserai should consist of 12 to 16 members, to be nominated by Government, selected so as to represent every part of the sub-division, one-sixth of the number being official and the Vice-Chairman to be elected by the board.

15. For the office of Chairman, the meeting resolved that the officer should be a non-official, and should be elected by the board. As, however, the European residents have protested against it, and have declined to associate themselves with the proposed scheme, unless the Chairman be an official, and as Mr. Kean thinks it would be difficult to find any non-official really fitted to be Chairman, he recommends that the post should be held by the sub-divisional officer, who, with the Sub-Inspector of Schools, should be ex-officio members, and that the Chairman need not have a vote in the proceedings, if it is considered to strengthen the independence of the non-official members.

16. The local board at Jamooi is recommended by the district officer to be similarly constituted. The meeting convened by the sub-divisional officer resolved that the members of the board should be elected by vote, and that the Chairman should be the sub-divisional officer, who, with the Sub-Inspector of Schools, would be ex-officio members.

17. In the Sudder sub-division the meetings convened were of opinion that the members of the board should be elected by vote, and that the Chairman should be nominated by the board. In this, however, the members of the Monghyr bar did not agree. Mr. Kean recommends that the members be nominated by Government, and should consist of three to four delegates from each thana, i.e. 12 to 16 ; that the Chairman should be the district officer, who, with the Deputy Inspector of Schools, would be ex-officio members. The district officer should have authority to delegate his powers to the Joint-Magistrate or Senior Deputy Magistrate.

18. It is recommended that the mofussil local board should be subordinate to the Board at head-quarters, unless it is contemplated to form a district council or board at the Sudder, in which case all local boards would be subordinate thereto, and the sub-divisional and Sudder local boards would be presided over by the sub-divisional officer and Joint-Magistrate respectively, and the latter council would be formed by delegates from the subordinate local board.

19. Mr. Kean further gives it as his opinion that each local and municipal board should be required to submit yearly a budget of its requirements and of proposed expenditure, and the amount from the license tax receipts from the pounds, ferries, and public cesses should be apportioned in accordance with such proposals when approved by the controlling authorities. The management of the zillah school, which is situated within municipal limits, should be placed under the control of a committee to be appointed by the rate-payers of the municipality. When budgets are submitted by the local and municipal boards and sanctioned by the controlling authority, no further interference would seem to be necessary on the part of the latter therewith except to point out errors.

No. 3260E, dated Calcutta, the 7th October 1882.

Memo. from—MAJOR G. F. E. S. NEILL, M.S.C., Assistant Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Public Works Department.

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Medical and Municipal Dept.

IN reply to memorandum No. 440, dated the 24th July last, from the Medical and Municipal Department of this Government, the undersigned is directed to forward six spare copies of a note by the Joint-Secretary in this Department on the subject of the local boards scheme in its relation to the Public Works Department.

Note on the reorganization of the Public Works Establishments of Bengal with reference to the Scheme of Local Self-Government.

THE several propositions contained in the resolutions and orders of the Government of India on the question of self-government, which affect the relations to be established between the Public Works Department and the local boards, may be formulated as follows:—

(1) Full freedom of initiation, direction, and control in respect of all matters not being details of professional execution to be reserved to the local boards.

(2) The organization should be such as to render it possible eventually to entrust all cutcherries, jails, lunatic-asylums, and other public buildings, as well as roads, to the care of local boards, and to dispense with the necessity of keeping up a separate provincial engineering establishment.

(3) Each local board should have its own staff of overseers and the like, and the appointment and removal of this staff should be left to the board.

(4) Government should in all cases assist local boards in securing competent professional assistance, and even offer to supply competent Engineers.

(5) When a local board is unable to employ a competent Engineer of its own, Government should provide an officer of the Public Works Department to act as Engineer, to all or several of the local boards of a district.

(6) When a District Engineer is appointed by Government and made over to the service of a local board, the board to pay his salary and allowance in such proportion as may be determined.

(7) Government should in all cases supply professional supervision, the exercise of which will be necessary to enable the district officer to see that the boards do their work properly.

(8) Sufficient control to be reserved to Government to guarantee that the public money entrusted to local boards is usefully spent and made the most of, and that Government buildings and other works made over to them are properly maintained.

(9) No charge should be made for supervision and control by the superior officers of the department.

(10) It is recognized that in settling such questions as the lines of provincial, district or railway feeder roads, professional and departmental opinion must have a preponderating weight.

2. In giving effect to these propositions, which I have quoted almost in the words used by the Government of India, I think one postulate must be granted, and that is, that the transition from the existing order of things must be so managed that, while the end aimed at by the Government in the direction of local self-government is surely and steadily approached, there should be no avoidable or unnecessary disruption of the system or agency by which the current-work of the Government is being prosecuted. I have given my best consideration to the subject, and the result is the scheme which I now propose.

3. It is unnecessary for me to discuss the question of the constitution of the local boards. It is clear from Mr. Macaulay's circular of the 5th July that there will be many gradations of development in them. The three districts—Singbhoom, Sonthal Pergunnahs, and Chittagong Hill Tracts—will remain as they are. There will be some districts without local boards, which will continue under the administration of district committees as at present. There will be other districts in which some of the sub-divisions will have local boards and some remain under committees like the existing branch committees of the Cess Act. There will again be other districts more highly developed, in which all the sub-divisions will possess local boards, or in which there may be even more local boards than there are sub-divisions. And finally, there will be two or three classes of municipal boards. It is also proposed to place all the local boards under the Government of a central board of control.

4. Whatever may be the ultimate development of the system of local boards as to their number, the area of their jurisdiction, or their internal organization, it is clearly intended by the Government of India's proposals that each board should have its own establishment for the execution of work under its own immediate control. Hitherto the district has been the unit, and we have had district road cess committees with branch committees for sub-divisions and a District Engineer. But the unit in future will be the local board, and I propose that the chief officer of its executive establishment should be called the "Surveyor to the Local Board." He should be appointed, and his salary fixed by the local board much in the same way that the District Engineers are now appointed by the road cess committees. He should have a sufficient establishment of overseers and clerks under him. His pay and that of his establishment will depend on the income at the disposal of the board and the amount of work to be done. In this, of course, there will be great differences between different boards, just as there are now between different road cess committees. Some 'Surveyors' will merely have the qualifications of subordinates; others will have those of Engineers according to the recognized tests. But the local board surveyor and his establishment will be the unit of executive agency by which all the work of the province will in the future, when the system has become matured, have to be carried out. The first four of the Government of India's requirements, as set forth in the category given in the first paragraph of this note, have to be met by the nature of the organization given to the Surveyor's establishment, and I do not think we can do better than adopt the organization and forms of account already prescribed by the Bengal Cess Act for the existing district road cess committees, and which would fully meet them. The defects which experience has shown to exist in the road cess committees are those which may be mainly attributed to the inexperience with which they were inaugurated. These have been remedied by the revised Cess Act of 1880. That Act, whilst it gave the committees full freedom of initiation, direction and control, applied suitable safeguards against the appointment of incompetent Engineers and the execution of projects without proper professional supervision. Most of the committees' executive establishments have gradually acquired efficiency, and there was every reason to hope that in a few years more they would have become effective instruments for the execution of all local public works transferred to their charge. The same hope may even more reasonably be entertained with regard to the establishment of the Surveyors to the local boards, for they will have more compact areas to deal with, and committees which are more interested in, and familiar with, local affairs to govern them. It has not been practicable hitherto, and it will probably not be practicable for some little time to come, to make over the construction and maintenance of all civil buildings to the management of the local committees; but there is no reason why this should not be partially done at once, and completely done as soon as the establishments of the Surveyors of the local boards become efficient. But it could only be done under the safeguards which will be introduced by the next step in the scheme, which I now proceed to describe.

5. The three next requirements of the Government of India, numbered 5, 6, and 7 in the list given in the first paragraph, refer to the provision of Public Works Engineers by Government for the service of such local boards as cannot afford to engage competent men of their own, the payment to be made for such service, and the need for exercising professional supervision, so that district officers may be enabled to see that the boards do their work properly. I see no way of effecting these objects so well as by making a re-distribution of the establishment of the Public Works Department, and placing one Engineer at least in every district. He should be called the "District Engineer and Deputy Inspector of Local Works." He should have his office at the head-quarters of the district, and his duties should be as follows:—

(a). He would continue to carry on the work of an Executive Engineer as long as any work remained to be done, that is, till the Surveyors of the local boards were sufficiently organized to undertake the execution of all kinds of work.

(b). He would be the professional adviser of the Magistrate and other departmental officers of the district, and prepare designs and estimates for all their requisitions for new buildings, or for additions and alterations, &c. These designs would, when approved and sanctioned, be made over to the local boards to carry out, but this would of course only be done when their organization was sufficiently advanced.

(c). He would be the Consulting Engineer to those local boards who could not afford to keep Surveyors of their own possessing the necessary qualifications; that is, he would have to prepare all projects for roads and bridges which might be beyond the powers of the Surveyor.

(d). He would be the Inspector of all roads and bridges and other works in the district. He would submit his inspection reports to the Magistrate, who would send a copy with his remarks to the local board and another to the Divisional Engineer and Inspector of Local Works to be laid before the Commissioner.

6. I will now explain these duties more fully. The present organization of the Public Works Department is such that the whole work of the General Branch, excluding Calcutta is grouped into ten divisions, which comprise 37 out of the 45 districts of Bengal. Each of these divisions, therefore, includes about four districts. The other eight districts are included in nine of the divisions of the Irrigation Branch, the Executive Engineers of which have to look after the general work of roads and buildings in addition to their irrigation work. The Executive Engineer has his office at the head-quarters of one district, while at the other districts of his division he has assistants or subordinates who take their orders from, and submit their accounts to him. This system is productive of unnecessary delays and references, and I think it is perfectly feasible to make the Engineer at the head-quarters of each district a dependent District Engineer, in direct correspondence with the Magistrate-Collector and the Superintending Engineer (or, as I propose to call him, the Divisional Engineer and Inspector of Local Works). One difficulty in the way of this has been the question of office establishments, but I think this can be got over. The result is undoubtedly one to be attained if possible, that each district should have its Engineer, and that the complicated and ever-changing system of grouping, which has hitherto always prevailed in the Public Works Department, should be simplified and assimilated to the civil jurisdictions of the province.

7. The District Engineer and Deputy Inspector of Local Works need not necessarily be an officer holding the departmental rank of Executive Engineer in the Public Works Department. Many Assistant Engineers would be well qualified for the charge, and also many of the senior upper subordinates. Just as in the Medical Department officers of the Warrant grade are often employed as Civil Surgeons, so in the Public Works Department officers of similar rank would be qualified for employment as District Engineers, and the chance of such employment would be a great incentive to the whole subordinate service. I do not contemplate any increase in the Public Works establishment, but merely a re-distribution, the method of which will be explained in greater detail further on. The object of the re-distribution is to have a responsible local Engineer in each district in the service of Government, who shall discharge the functions detailed in paragraph 5, and on the proper discharge of which it seems to me the success of the local self-government scheme greatly depends. Ten years ago an attempt was made to reorganize the Public Works Department in Bengal on the system of District Engineers, but the mistake was made on that occasion of making the Engineers of the Public Works Department the servants of the district committees, the Magistrates, and of their own departmental superiors. The result proved the truth of the principle that no man can serve two masters, and was a failure which should be kept in view as a warning now. Subsequently, District Engineers were appointed to be exclusively the servants of the district committees, and Executive Engineers reverted to their old departmental position, and the two are now working side by side. There is ample work for both to do, for it has been possible for Government to afford a greatly increased expenditure on both provincial and local works. There is no reason to suppose that this increase of expenditure will not go on in the future. On the contrary, experience shows that it will go on faster as the development of the country proceeds. It would be a fallacy therefore to suppose that the provincial engineer establishment can be reduced or superseded by the creation of local boards. The creation of local boards is necessary, because it is the only way of increasing the working power of the machinery of Government to meet the increasing demands on it. But we must re-adjust the old machinery to meet the new circumstances. The staff of the Public Works Department must emerge from the condition of an executive agency to that of an inspecting agency.

8. It is in this view that I have set out above the duties of the District engineer and Deputy Inspector of Local Works. The range of his duties must first be made to correspond to the civil divisions of the province. Then as regards the first of the duties (a) it is, of course, essential to make provision for carrying on the executive duties of the Public Works Department while the local board system is being matured. These the District Engineer will continue to perform very much in the same way as he is performing them now under another name. He is now what is technically called a 'Sub-divisional Officer' of some Executive Engineer's division, and corresponds with, and submits his accounts to, the Executive Engineer. Under the new system, I propose that he should communicate direct with the Superintending Engineer (to be called under this system the Divisional Engineer and Inspector of Local Works who will be at the head-quarters of the Commissioner of the Division, and that he should submit his accounts direct to the Examiner. Gradually, as the local boards' Surveyors are able to undertake the work, he will hand over all building operations to the Surveyor, and remain himself the professional adviser and Consulting Engineer to both the local departmental officers of Government and the local boards, and he will become the official inspector of all local works in his district.

9. As regards the second duty (b), it appears to me that it will not be possible to place all provincial buildings in charge of local boards in the same way that they are now in charge of the officers of Public Works Department. And even if it were possible, it would lead to much inconvenience and be inexpedient. In the first place there are a great many troublesome duties involved in the mere charge of the buildings as the property of Government, such as the submission of returns, the periodical examination of the buildings for repair, the answering of questions regarding their extension or adaptation to other purposes, &c., all of which appear to me to be quite outside the idea of self-government by local boards. To hand over this duty to local boards is to hamper them with a great deal of troublesome and uninteresting business, and to sow the seed of future disagreements between them and the district officers. For instance, if the Inspector-General of Jails visits a jail and finds it necessary for administrative reasons to propose changes in it, is he to be subject to the approval of the local board in whose jurisdiction the jail happens to be, and if so, why of that board more than any other local board in the district if it happens to be a district jail, or in the division if it happens to be a central jail? There are many disagreements now as to the necessity of complying with all requisitions, and they have to be decided by Government. But at present everybody concerned is a servant of Government, and the decision is accepted in the ordinary course of business. If, however, the quarrel is between local boards and district officers, it is easy to see that much inconvenience may arise out of it.

10. In my opinion, therefore, the District Engineer, as the servant of Government, should continue to be the responsible officer in charge of all Government buildings, and the professional adviser of the Magistrate and other departmental officers of the district. He should prepare the designs and estimates for all their requisitions for new buildings or for additions and alterations, &c. But this being done, I see no reason why the execution of all work should not be entrusted to the local board Surveyors. It may be asked what advantage would this be to the local boards—if they are not to have the initiative and control with respect to provincial buildings, why should they be saddled with the execution of work? The advantage would be twofold—first, the more work a local board has to do the larger will be its expenditure, and it will be able to afford to entertain a better and more competent staff; secondly, it falls in with the idea of local self-government that the procuring of labour and material, and the expenditure of public money for these purposes, should be placed under the control of local boards who, from their local knowledge and influence, may be presumed to be able to perform these duties to the best advantage both to Government and the community they represent. In these remarks I refer only to those provincial buildings which are used for the administrative purposes of Government. Any other buildings appertaining to departments which are made over to the control and management of local boards, such as schools, dispensaries, staging-bungalows, pounds, &c., may of course be placed under charge of the boards All roads should also be transferred to them.

11. As regards the third of the duties enumerated in paragraph 5, viz. that the District Engineer should be the Consulting Engineer of those local boards who could not afford to keep Surveyors of their own possessing the necessary qualifications, it is necessary to consider this question in connection with the propositions of the Government of India numbered 4, 5, and 6 in the first paragraph. It is already the practice in Bengal to place the services of officers of the Public Works Department at the disposal of road cess committees when they are applied for, and in such cases the committees fix the salary to be paid to them subject to the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor, and they also pay the necessary contribution for the retention of such officers' claims to leave and pension allowances. Out of 40 District Engineers now employed, eight are officers or subordinates who are still borne on the rolls of the Public Works Department; 11 are officers who were formerly in the Public Works Department, but are now pensioned; and 21 are Engineers who have never been in the Public Works Department. The present rule is, when a vacancy occurs, for a committee to apply to Government for a list of qualified men who are willing to accept the salary offered A list containing not less than three names is then furnished, from which the committee make their election. The nominees entered in the list are now generally passed students of the Calcutta Civil Engineering College who have undergone the prescribed practical course of training in the workshops, and have besides served several years as Temporary Assistant Engineers in the Public Works Department. The same procedure might continue to be followed when local boards are substituted for district committees. In this way the requirements of the Government of India, number 4, will be fully met. But as regards requirement number 5, it will necessarily happen, as already remarked above in paragraph 4, that there will be great differences in the incomes of the several boards, and that, while some Surveyors will be well qualified Engineers, others will have merely the qualifications required of subordinates of the Public Works Department. The Government of India suggest that in such cases we should appoint an officer of the Public Works Department to act as Engineer to all or several of the local boards of a district, and that the local boards should pay his salary and allowances in such proportions as may be determined. But if a local board is already employing a Surveyor and paying all it can afford for his salary, it could not afford to pay anything more for a share of an Engineer. I think, therefore, it would be necessary to place the services of the District Engineer and Deputy Inspector of Local Works at its disposal free of charge for the preparation of any projects which may be beyond the qualifications of the Surveyor. It would be more satisfactory in all respects for a local board to have as its exclusive servant a Surveyor of the highest qualification it can afford to pay for, than to go shares with a group of other local boards in an Engineer; and there would be no difficulty in having the deficiencies of such Surveyor made up by asking the advice of the District Engineer in the preparation of the more difficult or expensive projects. I believe many of our subordinates would apply for Surveyorships, and they would be competent to undertake, as they do now, the execution of the ordinary engineering work of a sub-division, if they were occasionally inspected. The local boards will have more independence under the scheme sketched out by me than if the suggestion of the Government of India were literally acted on; for it is, in my opinion, quite impossible for any officer to work satisfactorily if he is a servant in the joint pay of three or four independent boards. This, then, is the meaning of the third duty (c) mentioned in paragraph 6.

12. The fourth duty (d) of the District Engineer would be that of inspecting local works. The seventh and eighth of the proposals set out in the first paragraph are that Government should in all cases supply professional supervision, the exercise of which will be necessary to enable district officers to see that the boards do their work properly, and that sufficient control should be reserved to Government to guarantee that the public money entrusted to local boards is usefully spent and made the most of, and that Government buildings and other works made over to them are properly maintained. This implies systematic inspection, which, it may be assumed, will be necessary in all departments, whether Educational, Medical, or Public Works, to ensure the successful working of the local boards' scheme. In the Public Works Department I would propose to make the Divisional Engineer, who will be at the head-quarters of the Commissioner, the Inspector of Local Works, and the District Engineer at the head-quarters of a district the Deputy Inspector. The nature of the former appointment as regards personnel will be explained in a succeeding paragraph, and it will be convenient to consider the duties of District Engineers in their capacity of Deputy Inspectors of Local Works in connection with those of the Divisional Engineer and Inspector, as, together, they will form one departmental system of inspection.

13. Under the Bengal Cess Act, the appointment of Divisional Superintendent of Works was created. On the application of a two-thirds majority of the road cess committees in any commissionership, or of a sufficient number of road cess committees not necessarily included in the same commissionership, the Lieutenant-Governor was empowered to appoint a Superintendent of Works for the control and supervision of the executive establishments of the committees Five such appointments have been made, and the actual duties performed by the Superintendents have been to advise and assist the Commissioner in his duties connected with the committees and to examine projects and inspect works. Their salaries are paid by a contribution, pro rata, from the incomes of the committees. The rules framed by the late Lieutenant-Governor required that the appointments should be filled up from officers actually serving in the Public Works Department, and who had been so serving at least ten years previous to their appointment. One appointment, however, that of Mr Heyman, was made before these rules were framed.

14. It is one of the proposals of the Government of India now that no charge should be made for the supervision and control exercised over local boards by the superior officers of the Public Works Department, and it appears to me, therefore, that the constitution of the appointment of Divisional Superintendents of Works will have to altered under the new Act, and that these officers must revert to the establishment of the Public Works Department. As the supervision and control must be maintained, however, I propose to abolish the present departmental circles of Superintending Engineers, and instead of them to place a superior officer of the Public Works Department, who may be either a Superintending Engineer or a senior Executive Engineer at the head-quarters of each Commissioner of Division, and to style him the Divisional Engineer and Inspector of Local Works. This would absorb the three Superintending Engineers of our sanctioned establishment, and six Executive Engineers. The remainder of our sanctioned establishment would suffice to provide 15 of the more important districts with District Engineers of the rank of Executive Engineer, and the remaining 30 with District Engineers of the rank of Assistant Engineer, with a proportion of selected upper subordinates This question cannot be worked out in greater detail at present till it is ascertained how many of the Public Works officers who are now employed by district committees will revert to the department. The question of office establishments and accounts also need not be gone into in detail here; but I may mention that the idea of making the District Engineers independent in the matter of accounts is based upon the transfer of the accountants from Executive Engineers' offices to that of the Examiner, and upon a general re-distribution of the remaining office establishments.

15. The reorganized Department of Public Works, in the General Branch, would thus consist of a Chief Engineer and two Assistants at the head-quarters of Government, nine Divisional Engineers at the head-quarters of Commissioners of Divisions, and 45 District Engineers at the head-quarters of districts, besides a Superintendent of Works and two Executive Engineers at Calcutta. These, with a proportion added for absentees and juniors, would form the permanent establishment, and would be worked on a departmental system as at present, but with considerable modifications in the direction of decentralization and affiliation to local civil authority. For the present the appointments would be filled up as best we can from the existing staff, and the department would carry on work much as before, retaining the subordinate establishment and reinforcing it by temporary Engineers as at present. But by degrees, as the local boards acquired strength and relieved the Public Works Department of the actual execution of work, the latter would become the departmental agency by which the Government control and supervision over the work of the local boards would be maintained, and the development of roads and buildings planned. With the increasing professional difficulties of such work the personnel would no doubt gradually have to be improved and strengthened.

16. The work of inspection, supervision, and examination of designs would, however, have to be begun at once in a systematic manner, and to this end the new Act should contain clauses defining the powers of the Inspectors, and the conditions which should regulate the necessity of referring proposals for expenditure for their scrutiny and approval. The consideration of this part of the subject will be much facilited by reference to the English Acts; but unfortunately I have not got them to refer to. I will therefore leave it to a future opportunity, and trust that what I have already written will suffice for the present to enable His Honor to proceed with the consideration of local boards' scheme as regards its effect upon the Public Works Department.

No. 425M, dated Dacca, the 16th October 1882.

From—N. S. ALEXANDER, ESQ., Officiating Commissioner of the Dacca Division,
To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department.

WITH reference to your circular No 5T—M, dated 5th July last, and in continuation of this office No. 387M, dated 23rd ultimo, I have the honour to submit the following report on the introduction of local self-government and the constitution of the proposed local boards in the districts of this division.

DACCA DISTRICT LOCAL BOARDS.

1. MR. WESTMACOTT, the Magistrate, writes as follows:—

Manickgunge.—"The Deputy Magistrate of Manickgunge at first thought that every village in the sub-division ought to be represented on the local board, and regretted that there were only five places, besides the Manikgunge union, in which there would be found a sufficient number of qualified electors; but in his whole sub-division he considered that there would be 368 persons qualified to be electors, and 137 as representatives according to the qualifications proposed in paragraph 13 of Government letter No. 5T—M, dated 5th July 1882. It is not clear whether the 137 are included in the 368 or not.

2 "On receiving my first letter the Deputy Magistrate called meetings at Teota and Bolla, details of which are given in appendix E. The general opinion seems to have been that the local board could not work without the sub-divisional Deputy-Magistrate as chairman, and that the elective principle must be supplemented by nomination of some members of the board by Government. At that time, I think, the people had scarcely begun to understand the proposals submitted to them, which I hope were made to take a more practical shape by the questions proposed in my second letter (appendix F). I have no doubt also that the agitating party had, by the time the later meetings were held, been discussing the question among the people. Indeed, I hear that school-boys have been busily at work collecting signatures for some petition on the subject of local self-government.

3. "On the receipt of my second letter the sub-divisional Deputy-Magistrate held meetings at Manickgunge on the 6th August, appendix G, at Dasora on the 12th, and at Harirampore, appendix I, thana on the 16th.

4. "At the first 37 qualified electors attended, besides other persons, and the Deputy-Magistrate estimated the total number of qualified electors in thana Manickgunge at 198. At the second meeting there were 53 qualified electors; but there is no revised estimate of the total number in thana Jafurgunge. At the third meeting 83 qualified electors attended.

"The first question I asked was as to the wish of the qualified electors for the introduction of a system of electing representatives for a local board, and from the answers I gather that this is their wish. Secondly, I asked how many representatives they would propose for each thana or outpost jurisdiction for each large town or other local area In thana Manickgunge they mentioned 13 places or tracts which they thought should send up 25 representatives, in thana Jafurgunge 11 places with 20 representatives; but in thana Harirampore they propose the much more practical scheme of sending up 8 representatives from the whole thana jurisdiction, restricting the numbers on the board to 25."

5. Mr. Westmacott's own opinion is—

"That as there are no large towns in the sub-division, each of the three thanas should send up from 3 to 5 representatives, making the total number on the board from 9 to 15. Whether all these should be elected, or whether Government should reserve the power of nominating a certain proportion of them, say one-third, I leave to the decision of higher authority."

As regards paragraph 5, I am of opinion that five members for each thana will be quite sufficient; if more members are elected, the board will be composed of too many members, and it will be difficult to find accommodation for meetings to be held, and the work will be retarded by the number.

6. Mr. Westmacott continues—

"My third, fourth, and fifth questions were as to the proportion of qualified electors who would wish the sub-divisional officer to be the chairman of the local board, or to elect one of their own number.

7. "At the earlier meetings the people seem to have been unanimous in thinking that the sub-divisional officer should be chairman; but at the later meetings there was always a party, though in a minority, who wished to leave the board free to elect their own chairman if they could find one qualified; but I do not find any such violent objection to having an official chairman as I find in Dacca.

8. "I think," writes Mr. Westmacott," it would be wise if the board would have the sub-divisional officer as their chairman for at least two years, in order to have the advantage of his administrative training in organizing a new system of government, and also that they should have one or two vice-chairmen to be trained under him. I do not, however, think it so absolutely necessary that the board should commence operations under the guidance of a trained administrator as I think it in the case of municipalities, wherein there is a complicated origanization on which the health of a large community depends, as in the case of the city of Dacca, or wherein a great work of sanitation needs to be initiated, as in the comparatively new municipality of Naraingunge. I see no objection to leaving the board to elect their own chairman if they think they can find a qualified man; but unless it is the intention of Government to nominate some members of the board, I do not think their liberty of choice should be confined to such members. Whether the sub-divisional Deputy-Magistrate be a member of the board or not, it should be open to the board to elect him as chairman; but I see no necessity for giving him a vote, excepting a casting vote, if the board is divided on any question into two equal parties"

As regards Mr. Westmacott's remarks in paragraph 8, I am of opinion that it would be advisable for the first year at least that the sub-divisional officers should be the chairmen, and that time should be given for the elected members to learn something of the work and procedure, &c. To start at once with totally untrained men seems to me to be courting certain failure.

9. Mr. Westmacott in his report continues—

"Every one appears ready to adopt my suggestion that members of the local board should be elected for two years only, and similarly they agree in thinking that the sub-divisional head-quarters should be the place at which the local board should hold its periodical meetings."

As regards his remarks in this paragraph, I concur with Mr. Westmacott.

10. "As regards the various kinds of work which the people are ready to undertake, the following is the list they suggest; but there are several items which I do not think it would be practicable to make over to them, and the selection must, I think, be left for future consideration:—

1.	Roads and bridges.	To be placed under charge of the Engineer's establishment under the board.
2.	Public tanks.
3.	Drainage.
4.	Repairs of ancient religious buildings or monuments.
5.	Schools of various classes	Sub-Inspector of Schools.
6.	Dispensaries.	Under the medical establishment of the board.
7.	Sanitation.
8.	Vaccination.
9.	Epidemic relief
10.	Collection of vital statistics.
11.	Famine relief.	To be arranged by the chairman subject to the sanction of the Commissioner."
12.	Destruction of wild animals and venomous snakes.
13.	Village chowkidars.
14.	Licensing of outstills and drugs shops.
15.	Ferries.
16.	Pounds.
17.	Zemindari dâk.
18.	Licensing tax.
19.	Road cess and Public Works cess, assessment of.
20.	Trade statistics.

As regards paragraph 10, it has not yet been settled whether the boards are each to have a separate establishment or to unite in appointing joint establishments, such as that of road cess, schools, pounds, posts, ferries, &c. Until this is settled it seems to me useless to go into details.

11. Moonsheegunge Sub-division.—"The peculiarity of this sub-division," writes Mr. Westmacott, "is that it contains the pergunnah of Bikrampore, which is probably the home of more of the educated Baboo class from which are taken pleaders, clerks, and officials than any other place in Bengal.

12. "Appendix K is the sub-divisional Deputy Magistrate's reply* to my first letter, appendix A, and appendix I is his report on meetings held at five different places after receipt of my second letter, appendix F. He sent in a separate report respecting each meeting; but those I do not think it necessary to submit considering his abstract report sufficient.

* No. 136, dated 25th July 1882.

13. "The five meetings were attended by 391 substantial persons, of whom I am glad to see that 65 were Mahomedans, while 274 were traders, so that there were a number of persons present in addition to the educated Baboos. It was the opinion of these latter, however, that the bulk of the people followed. The Deputy Magistrate's estimate of the number of qualified electors cannot be accepted, because I see that he has included in it a great number of non-resident persons to whom I do not think the franchise should be extended.

14. "The desire to elect representatives for a local board appears to be unanimous.

"There were various opinions as to the number of representatives. There are only two thanas in the sub-division, and I think it would be enough if each thana sent up five representatives. As I said in the case of Manickgunge, I will not discuss the question whether Government should nominate any portion of them or not; but I may say what I omitted to say before that I think, in case of failure to elect with the record of certain proportion of the available rates, Government should nominate representatives, as I recommended in the case of municipalities."

As regards this paragraph, I agree with Mr. Westmacott in thinking that, if a certain percentage of the voters do not record votes, the Government should have the power to nominate the members. I may mention here that I think the thana will have to be sub-divided into circles for the convenience of voters; if the voters have to go all the way to the police station to record their votes, many will be found to neglect to do so.

15. "The opposition to making the sub-divisional officer chairman was," the Magistrate writes, "very strong, some even wishing that the board should be debarred from asking for his services in any case. As in the case of Manickgunge, I am desirous of allowing the board to elect any one they like as chairman, and shall be very glad if they can find a person qualified for the post other than the sub-divisional officer. Should they fail they should certainly have an opportunity of securing the services of that officer.

16. "A majority wish to elect the members of the board for three years. I do not think the matter important; but I am inclined to think two years enough.

17. "All think that Moonsheegunge, the sub-divisional head-quarters, should be the place of meeting. The numbers 30, 50, and 100 were suggested as suitable for number of members on the board. I think no work could possibly be done by so large a board, and have already suggested 10.

18. "As at Manickgunge, the people are ready to undertake any branch of administration that they can get hold of; but, as the sub-divisional Deputy Magistrate remarks, they have very little idea how the business is to be conducted, and he thinks much of what they propose will be too arduous for them—a sentiment in which I fully concur."

Paragraphs 17 and 18.—I am of opinion that 10 to 15 members will be found quite sufficient for all practical purposes, and it will be found more convenient to have such a number for the purposes of the transaction of business, as I have said in the case of Manickgunge; and for the same reasons I think the sub-divisional officer should for the first year, at all events, be the chairman.

19. Naraingunge Sub division.—"I have already," writes the Magistrate, "in appendix C given the Deputy Magistrate's answer to my first letter, but have hitherto discussed so much of it only as refers to the municipality.

20. "I have not yet received a full reply to my second letter, appendix F, as Mr. Fraser is still in the interior convening meetings on the subject; but he has sent me lists of persons qualified to be electors according to the standard suggested by Government, shewing in thana—

Roypoora	...	...	...	...	154
Roopgunge	...	...	...	...	148
Naraingunge	...	...	...	...	157

Among these, however, I observe that he has included several non-resident persons whom I know to be in service or employment in other districts. I observe that a great many of the persons qualified as electors are also qualified to be representatives.

21. "The sub-divisional Deputy Magistrate names three non-official natives, each of whom he thinks well qualified to be chairman of a local board, and I shall be glad if one of them is elected.

22. "I have heard from non-official persons that there is a strong wish throughout the sub-division for the introduction of an elected local board, the members of which should elect their own chairman."

Paragraphs 19, 20, 21, 22.—The Magistrate has not stated how many members he considers should be elected for this sub-divisional board. In my opinion there is no great difference between this and Moonsheegunge, and the same number of members might be elected. I do not think that a non-official chairman should be allowed to be elected for the first year at least; after that sufficiently trained persons may be found qualified for the post.

23. Sudder Sub-division.—The Magistrate says—

"He has entrusted the enquiries in the head-quarters sub-division to Deputy Magistrate Baboo Krishno Chunder Roy, a sensible and experienced officer, who is also a land-owner and old resident. As his replies to my first letter (appendix A) contained little more than his personal opinion, I have not appended them, classifying them with opinions which I have myself gathered in conversation with individuals.

24. "Appendix M, however, contains his reply* to my second letter, appendix F, after holding meetings at three places selected by me. He is now on his way to hold other meetings. He estimates the number of qualified electors in the sub-division at 652 as follows:—

* No. B, dated 1st September 1882.

Thana Lalbagh	...	...	...	...	174
Kapasya	...	...	...	...	65
Sabhar	...	...	...	...	234
Nowabgunge	...	...	...	...	179
					652

Taking into consideration the payment of road cess and license tax only of those possessing the third qualification, that of income, he gives me no estimate.

25. "The number of persons attending the meetings seems to have been much larger than in the other sub-divisions. My questions, however, have not been by any means clearly answered.

"I gather that the people want an elected local board and a non-official chairman, and it is also suggested that there should be more than one board in the sub-division, which is divided by large rivers.

26. "At this stage of the experiment I am not prepared to propose a local board for each thana; but there are certainly physical difficulties of communication which may render the administration of this sub-division less easy than that of the others. I should allow each thana to send up representatives as follows:—

Sabhar	4
Lalbagh	3
Nowabgunge	3
	12

and if Government reserves any power of nomination, I would suggest one nominee for each thana, the other eight members being elected."

Paragraph 26.—I am of opinion that the number should be 15; but any number from 10 to 15 would be a good working number.

27. General remarks.—"Having thus commented on such information as has as yet been collected for each sub-division I will now," the Magistrate states, "proceed to make some general remarks on the subject of local boards other than municipal.

"I think one should be constitued for each of the four sub-divisions of the district, or, if there be any doubt respecting the sudder sub-division, certainly for the other three; and I think each board should be allowed to elect any one they please as chairman, Government giving the services of an official if required.

28. "Should rate-payers of the city of Dacca and the municipality of Naraingunge be allowed votes, if duly qualified, for the sudder and Naraingunge sub-divisional local boards respectively, or not? I am inclined to think that it is undesirable that they should do so, unless resident in the interior and not in the municipality of which they may be rate-payers. I am not, however, sure upon this point, and must consider it further.

29. For qualifications of candidates, I can suggest no improvement as suggested by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor.

30. "For voters, I would reduce the road cess qualification to the payment of Rs. 5; and any payer of license tax should be qualified; but the question of income requires consideration. Rs. 500 means about Rs. 41 per month, and many people are desirous of reducing the qualification to Rs. 200. This represents a monthly income of Rs 16 only, and looking to the class of persons who hold clerkships on such pay, I think it too low a qualification, especially as His Honor has suggested no condition of residence, so that in such a constituency as that of Moonsheegunge the representation would be controlled by non-residents, comprising probably a third of all the clerks, pleaders, and native officials in Bengal. I think residence in the sub-division for at least 10 months in the year should be an essential condition to qualify an elector. There is much agitation as to allowing education, such as a university degree, to qualify. This I have considered very fully, and do not see the necessity for it. I would reduce the income qualification to Rs. 240, or Rs. 20 per month, and if a Bachelor or Master of Arts cannot shew an income of Rs. 20 per month in the sub-division in which he is resident, I would look on him as an unproductive idler and unworthy of a vote. The only question is as to the heirs of qualified electors living with their fathers, expecting to succeed to the estate and possessing a university degree, and I think some provision might be made for extending the franchise to them. I am not yet, however, prepared to propose definitely what the qualifications of electors shall be, and have directed the several sub-divisional Deputy Magistrates to invite all persons wishing to be electors to apply, stating their qualifications, and I think that, when I have a number of applications before me, I shall be able to judge what classes of persons desire the franchise, and to consider to what classes of them it should be extended."

I agree with Mr. Westmacott as far as regards the first part of this paragraph; but as regards the property qualification, I think it might stand as it has been suggested in the Government circular, it being a sine qua non that the candidate is a regular resident in the district of Dacca. Many of the clerks, &c., alluded to by Mr. Westmacott are non-residents for the greater part of the year in the district in which their property lies and ancestral homes are.

31. "Regarding qualification of share-holders in joint holdings or concerns, the possession of more votes than one, and cognate matters, my remarks respecting the municipalities will apply equally to sub-divisional boards."

The opinion recorded on part I of his report on local self-government on municipalities will apply and may be referred to.

32. "Where an official is chairman, I do not think it necessary that he should have a vote, except a casting vote, whenever the votes of the other members of the board are equally divided.

33. "The polling should be taken at each thana, and perhaps at other places in exactly the same way as I have proposed for the municipality, the sub-divisional officer presiding, and the presence of the elector being insisted upon as essential.

34. "The registration of the qualifications of electors must I think be left for the first election in the hands of the sub-divisional officer, with an appeal from his decision to the Magistrate of the district. In future I hope the people may be found capable of managing their own elections."

As regards the other remarks of Mr. Westmacott, I think there must always be some revising or controlling authority without which elections cannot even be carried on in England. People here cannot be left entirely to manage their own elections.

35. "I am decidedly of opinion that to give the district officer any powers of control over the local boards will destroy all their independence, and I quite accept the proposal of a central board of control as preferable.

36. "I object quite as much to the existence of a district board as I do to the interference of the District Magistrate; but I think occasional conferences of delegates from various local boards may be desirable and perhaps necessary.

37. "In discussing the question as to the funds which may be made over to local boards other than municipal, I do not find so much difficulty in deciding what matters there are, the control of which may be transferred from Government officials to local bodies, as in deciding what may be better left in the hands of village punchayets than in those of the local sub-divisional board.

38. "In fact the scheme of giving power to local boards, which I am directed to discuss, militates against a scheme of my own, which I have long had under consideration of developing local self-government by adding to the functions, emoluments, dignity, and usefulness of the village punchayets.

39. "With reference to pounds, I think the utility of these institutions is rendered much less than it might be by the great distances from which trespassing cattle have to be brought, and that the gross income of pounds might be enormously increased if they were brought more than within reach of the people for whose convenience they exist. I am therefore proposing that every punchayet should be allowed to maintain a pound, from the proceeds of which it would support the village school and possibly a dispensary, village post office, and other institutions; the loss which Government would sustain from giving up the income from pounds being met by a corresponding deduction from the grant for primary education. But, while I would make the village punchayet a local committee for their school and dispensary, I would give the local sub-divisional board the duty of controlling their educational work by proper inspection, by giving grants to more advanced schools, by giving rewards on examination under what is known as Mr. Harrison's Midnapore system, and by giving scholarships. For these purposes educational funds must be made over to the local board, and I see no objection to giving them the proceeds of the license tax within their jurisdiction. From this also may be met the necessary expenditure on their office establishments.

40. "As regards roads, I think extreme caution necessary to prevent funds being frittered away upon bye-roads of merely local importance to the detriment of the communication of the district generally. For this latter purpose I think a certain proportion of the proceeds of the road cess must always be reserved, especially where a district is so destitute of main lines of road as is the case with Dacca. I do not think local boards can take a sufficiently broad and statesmanlike view of district or provincial requirements, and I believe that if the district road fund were left entirely in their hands, the district would after the lapse of a certain number of years be found well supplied with footpaths, each of a mile or two in length, converging to the several markets, with perhaps a few cart roads of equally limited value, while it would be impossible to drive a cart a dozen miles in any direction.

41. "I think, however, the local board may be entrusted with all funds for the maintenance and repair of existing roads with the trees thereon, and bridges of minor importance; such work as can be done without a trained engineer, and also with any money it may be considered advisable to allow for village roads; but I think the actual expenditure should be entrusted as far as may be to village punchayets.

42. "Local boards might suggest new lines of road; but I do not think the final selection of new roads should be left to them. I think, however, it might be possible for them to undertake the construction of new roads under proper supervision and after full specification of requirements as sufficiently and much more economically than is found practicable with the existing district staff. The repair and construction of large bridges would be left in professional hands. I think the local board would absolutely fail in collecting the road cess from themselves. That must be done by the State

43. "The licensing of outstills and drug shops, and the tolling of ferries might be very well left to local boards, and the only question would be how to compensate the Government for the loss of the income now derived therefrom by throwing upon the board equivalent expenditure. It might perhaps be balanced in distributing the educational funds."

44. As regards Mr. Westmacott's remarks in the foregoing paragraphs, my opinion is that the four local boards to be established in this district should be made to pay equally the salary of a competent engineer and for one quarter of the salaries of the Deputy Inspector of Schools and Inspector of Excise; each local board to pay half the salaries of a Sub-Inspector of Schools and Assistant Surgeon. These payments could be made from funds derived from the following sources:—Pounds, ferries, and outstills within the limits of the local board's jurisdiction, and from road cess levied within that area. The balance of the salaries might be paid either by local boards of other districts, or by Government as now. I do not think any details can now be settled as it is not yet settled even whether the boards will join together to maintain such officers as the District Engineer, Sub Inspector of Schools,

Excise Inspectors, and the like, or whether they will each appoint their own separate establishments.

45. "As regards the Public Works cess, I do not quite understand what is proposed, and doubt whether it is advisable to make over to a local board the sub-divisional cutcherries, residences, and subsidiary jails, munsifs' courts, and the like.

46. "It remains," writes Mr. Westmacott, "to consider what safeguard there should be against waste of money, abuse of patronage, and neglect of necessary work on the part of the local boards. There might even occasionally occur instances of still graver need for interference. Some form of watching their administration would be necessary and some form of control.

47. "I have already said that the interference of the District Magistrate, if permitted, may at any time reduce the system of local self-government to a sham; but, though the accounts of the boards may be scrutinized elsewhere, I do not see how their executive work can be examined and checked otherwise than by the local authorities. The Magistrate may point out defects and remonstrate; but when the necessity for actual supersession or interference arises, it will be better, if the independence of the local board is to be maintained, that the Magistrate should not himself interfere, but should report the case, invoking the interference of some external authority, and I do not see what better form such external authority can take than such a central board as the Government of Bengal has suggested."

48. As regards the above, I may remark that this is a matter of policy which must be considered and decided on by Government alone. My individual opinion is that the proper officers to control the committee are the district officers and the Commissioners of Divisions. No central board or any such body holding office in a distant capital can so efficiently check waste of money, abuse of patronage, and the like, as these officers. In any new law to be enacted, provision can be made that all employés of the boards drawing salaries beyond a certain amount, say, Rs. 50 per mensem, should not be finally appointed without the sanction of Government or the central board of control; also the maximum amount to be expended on any one work, without the sanction of Government or other controlling authority, might be fixed.

49. The district of Dacca should be, in my opinion, entered as a district under (3) of paragraph 8 of the Government circular. If the scheme of local boards is to be tried anywhere in this division, it must be in the Dacca district, as here it appears that there is the best chance of its being a success.

FURREEDPORE DISTRICT LOCAL BOARD.

Mr. Sharp, the Magistrate, writes as follows:—

"A large quantity of papers has been collected, and long and frequent consultations have been held in many places. The papers with which I have been favoured from non-official sources are annexed in original.

2. "Ever since the publication of the Government circular (No. 5T - M, dated 5th July 1882), I have conversed on the subject with persons of various classes as I have happened to meet them. I also called two meetings of different kinds. For the first I wrote letters of invitation in 'demi-official' form to 55 gentlemen living in or within moderate distance of Furreedpore, who were either known to me already, or who appeared to be qualified by position and intelligence to offer sound advice, and to form a kind of council by whose aid knowledge of the subject might be disseminated, and further discussion might be fostered and guided.

3. "At the same time I had printed notices stuck up at every market-place and village of any size throughout the district, inviting the attendance of all who wished to come at PUBLIC meetings on a later day. The plan succeeded capitally. Fifty gentlemen attended the first meeting at Furreedpore, which was held in the zillah school at 7 A.M. on the 1st ultimo. I explained the contents of the Government circular, and illustrated it by references to the former orders on the subject, and other matters bearing upon it. Many of the gentlemen present were already well up in it, and the meeting was soon put in possession of a very fair knowledge of what had been done and proposed up to that time.

4. "I then begged these gentlemen to spread information among as many persons as they could during the next few days, to invite such persons to attend the public meeting and freely express their views, and themselves to help to start the discussion on that future occasion. I also explained the way in which I thought the public meeting should be held, and the position which I proposed to take up for myself in regard to it, viz. that on the principle adopted in Europe the meeting should be convened by me as chief executive officer, but that once assembled it should elect its own chairman, preferably a non official; that I should be present and hoped to hear full discussion by a thoroughly representative body. I described the way in which the chairman should act, the custom of moving, seconding, and putting resolutions, &c., &c., and both at this and at the public meeting, and on other opportunities, I expressly stated that although it seemed best that I should thus call public meetings at Furreedpore and at the two sub-divisions, yet these were by no means to be held to indicate any desire that they should be exhaustive; on the contrary that any persons who wished to meet at other times and places open either to the public or members of classes, or in the way of clubs or associations, would be abundantly justified in collecting and publishing opinions, and presenting them either to or through me, or direct to Government as they might think fit.

5. "We then began a consultation on the principal points stated in the Government circulars and on kindred subjects. In this first meeting no resolutions were formally moved, and no set speeches made, but I was enabled to ascertain pretty clearly, and perhaps more thoroughly than at the latter public meeting, the ideas of the leading and really intelligent residents of the neighbourhood, and most of the suggestions that I shall make as being expressive of non-official opinion and desire are in fact grounded on the consultation held at this first meeting. I may say that it was the best meeting of the kind that I ever saw. Discussion was free and hearty, but at the same time in admirable order and courtesy, and every single person who came, seemed to have made up his mind to do his best towards really helping on the project without any selfishness or approach to bombast. A list of the gentlemen who attended is annexed (appendix B), and they have my best thanks for their conduct on the occasion and also at the public meeting which followed.

6. "Some points were at the first meeting settled by mere discussion, but on a few others, such as the rate of taxation, &c., which should qualify for suffrage and for membership respectively, votes were easily and quickly taken by show of hands. At this meeting I presided, and those who attended were good enough to pass votes of thanks, on the first occasion, as to the chair, and on the second on the grounds that I had called the meeting and ensured free discussion.

7. "The public meeting was also held in the morning at the zillah school, and was very largely attended by persons of all sections of the upper and middle classes. Baboo Baikuntha Chandra Chakravarty, a resident zemindar, was voted to the chair and conducted the proceedings admirably. Some excellent speeches were made not only by pleaders, but two or three by unprofessional gentlemen, whose delivery, aptitude, and knowledge of the subject were remarkable. A copy of the resolutions carried out at the meeting is given in appendix A, and by the speeches, and especially by such shorter remarks as were applauded or were evidently acceptable, I was enabled, as by the consultation at the former meeting, to gauge the popularity of different views.

8. "The sub-divisional officers were asked to act in the same way, first inviting selected gentlemen to a consultation and calling public meetings to be held on a later day. A copy of my instructions, Nos 1293-4, is submitted in appendix A, together with copies of the two vernacular notices, A and B, and English translations. A puts before the public an exact statement of the Government views on the extension of elective powers to municipalities as contained in the late circular, and upon it the authorized translation of the quoted section of the Act is printed at length. It was also notified that any information on the subject would gladly be given, and many questions in connection therewith have been put and answered; 50 copies of this notice were hung up in and near each of the three municipalities; 150 in all.

9. "Of B, announcing the meetings to be held at Furreedpore, Madaripore, and Goalundo, and inviting the public thereto, 100 copies were posted in each sub division, at all market-places, and large villages; 300 in all. I also supplied copies of the principal papers to Baboo Tara Nath Chakravarty, Government pleader, as one of the leaders of the bar, requesting him in a letter (No. 1410), of which a copy is annexed in appendix A, to allow access to them by others. Additional copies of the rules for election, &c., were also supplied to Baboo Hara Bilash Mukherjee, Secretary to the Branch Indian Association. Besides the two meetings in which I took part at Furreedpore, several were held by zemindars and other residents, and I was demi-officially informed of the general results of some of these. We spoke of local self-government at the meetings of the different committees, and on all kinds of other occasions.

10. "One of the most important towns in the district is Bhanga, 20 miles south of Furreedpore, and as no gazetted executive officer is stationed there, I addressed the first munsif (No. 1409, copy in appendix A), suggesting the desirability of ascertaining the public views on the late Government circular of which I annexed a copy for communication to others.

11. "At the sub-divisions also the people were put in the way of full information. At Goalundo a meeting of the Municipal Commissioners was called to discuss the subject, but at it only three native gentlemen attended. Mr. Badshah, the sub-divisional officer, then invited 26 of the chief zemindars and others at Khangunge, the most central place in the sub-division, but only eight came He explained the scheme, and asked them to take time to understand and form their opinions on the subject. About the same time, while Mr Badshah was in camp, the Municipal Commissioners of Goalundo held an informal meeting, at which about 30 persons, mostly pleaders and muktears, attended. On the 11th August Mr. Badshah presided at a public meeting, previously called under my instructions, to which some 150 persons came. He says: 'There were several leading men present. I should have liked to see more of them. I explained for what purpose the meeting was convened, and invited a discussion and a free expression of opinion' He has taken pains to give a résumé of the speeches and the gist of the opinions will be stated further on in this report.

12. "At Madaripore a public meeting was held on the 8th ultimo, at which a very large number of persons attended, and it is satisfactory to note that none of the five thanas were unrepresented. Some of them are very far from Madaripore, but the sub-divisional officer, Baboo Kali Nath Bose, reports that there were at least four or five persons from every one. The greater number naturally came from thana Madaripore and the neighbouring thana Palong. He had also sent letters inviting the well-known residents, and acquainted them with the scheme, which was also fully explained to the people, especially in regard to elections. A further meeting was fixed for that day week, so that in the interval there might be time to discuss and form opinions.

13. "In Bhanga, already mentioned in paragraph 10, three meetings were held by the People's Association, and copies of the proceedings were sent to me; the copies are submitted in appendix C. Two public meetings were also called under the auspices of this Association and of the local munsifs, to whom I had written as stated in paragraph 10 and appendix A, and the inhabitants of the three southern thanas of the head-quarters sub-division (Bhanga, Ayanpore, and Magsudpore) largely attended these meetings. The Association also sent special delegates to the public meeting held at Furreedpore on the 8th ultimo. That part of the district has therefore had a double series of opportunities for stating its views.

14. "The first munsif favoured me with a full report, and he thus describes the proceedings:—'After the return of Baboo Koylash Chandra Sen and his colleagues, the delegates to the Furreedpore meeting, and encouraged by the interest taken by you in their presence there, the meeting alluded to above was gladly convened on the 14th instant, which, though preceded by a short notice, was attended by not less than 500 persons, representing all classes of the people residing within the jurisdiction of the Bhanga munsif. I along with my colleagues, the second munsif, Baboo Jogendra Chandra Mullick, and extra munsif Baboo Purna Chandra Dey, were present at the meeting; Baboo Bipin Bihary Roy of Manickdoha, a well known leading zemindar of this part of the country, presided at the meeting, and the eagerness and the attention with which the scheme was discussed and listened to shewed the greatest earnestness on the part of all assembled. * * * * *
After the receipt of your letter on the 17th, another meeting was, at my suggestion, convened and held yesterday in which the same subjects were discussed, and the attendance which was a very respectable one, evinced still more interest in the matter This meeting was presided over by a representative of one of the oldest Raja families of the country, viz., Raja Prasanna Chandra Roy of Ujani. I along with my colleagues attended the meeting.'

15. "The second public meeting at Bhanga also appointed a committee of 17 gentlemen with power to add to their number for the purpose of explaining the Government scheme to people in the interior. Memorials on this subject were also presented to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor on his late visit to Furreedpore, of which copies were previously supplied to me by the Furreedpore People's Association, by the Bhanga People's Association, by several residents of Madaripore and its neighbourhood, and by 148 residents of Bhanga and its neighbourhood (appendix C), submitting the proceedings of the two public meetings mentioned in paragraph 13.

16. "A meeting was also held at Gopalpur in the Madaripore sub-division, at which a memorial (appendix D) was drawn up and signed by 645 persons, praying for a local board in that sub-division and for the elective system. The two last-mentioned memorials have been made over to me, and I now submit them with this report, in which remarks upon them will be made further on. The one marked appendix C was handed to me by His Honor after he had heard and replied to it, and that marked appendix D was transferred to me by post from the Private Secretary's office.

17. "I have also read a long letter, containing remarks worthy of notice, from Baboos Shyama Shankar and Girija Shankar Majumdars, zemindars of Baniboho, in thana Belgachi. I had written to ask their opinion, also inviting them to the first meeting; but as they were among the few who could not come, I was glad to have their views on paper.

18. "It will be seen from the above that the people of this district have had the fullest opportunities of information, of consultation, and of stating their sentiments, and it seems right to describe these matters very fully as an introduction not only to the opinions contained in this report, but to future letters that may be required in connection with any part of the subject which may thus be considered with the assurance that this office has means of appraising popular views, and that all classes have had facilities for airing their own particular ideas.

19 "All the memorials, resolutions, and letters received from non-official persons unite in recommending (1) the creation of local boards; (2) the elective system both for such boards and for municipalities; and (3) the election by the members of the board or committee of their own chairman, preferably a non-official. But it will be seen that these statements of desire must be practically taken with some qualifications.

20. "Each of these three points is included in resolutions II and III (appendix A) of the public meeting held at Furreedpore on the 8th ultimo. Mr. Badshah writes of the public meeting held at Goalundo on the 11th ultimo—'There was a consensus of opinion that the proposals of Government should be accepted and welcomed. But none of the speakers entered into details The two leading ideas in their heads were that the members of the local committees should be elected by local suffrage, and that the chairman should be, if possible, a non-official. But when discussing the last proposal, most of the speakers addressed the meeting with a certain diffidence and hesitation. If they could get a non-official chairman they seemed to think it would be the best thing for them. But they seemed to doubt whether they could get such a person in this sub-division. Many speakers carried away by the enthusiasm of the moment did not express this doubt—this diffidence. But in course of private conversation with me they betrayed their real feelings. They thought that no man could undertake the onerous duties of a chairman, as no man could spare time or incur the expense of constantly going to Goalundo. More than once I was asked if the chairman would receive any salary for his work. So far I have gathered from the most enlightened, the most influential, men of the sub-division.'

21. "Reporting a 'very able and eloquent speech' by the first munsif, he further writes—'He called upon his hearers to come forward and undertake the duties which Government required them to do. He denied that people were not able to bear the burden. He urged on the zemindars present to come forward for the office of a chairman. That they would have to undergo much trouble, expend large sums of money, devote a great deal of time to their work, he did not deny; but for the public interest they ought to accept the burden. He ended by moving two resolutions—(1) That the meeting is very grateful to Lord Ripon for his generous policy; (2) that the meeting accepts in all its details the scheme propounded by Government, and leaves to it the method of working it out.' The resolutions were carried unanimously.

22. "But further doubts enter in. Of his first meeting with the leading residents specially invited he says—'From what I could gather from them, the leading men seemed averse to any change in the present system. with the exception of two gentlemen, one Faiz Baksh Choudhuri, a part owner of the Belgachi pergunnah, and the other Ishan Chandra Ghosh, a retired pleader.' Another speaker at the public meeting 'described the duties of a vice-chairman and chairman, and called upon his hearers to declare whether these duties can be efficiently discharged by them. He also desired that the number of members of the committee should be large. as the members cannot attend the meetings often, both on account of expense and the trouble of coming a long distance.'

23. "Baboos Shyama Shankar and Girija Shankar Majumdars (mentioned in paragraph 17) intimate a similar difficulty in the following passage:—'The desire of a person to represent his fellow and neighbouring villagers would be great; but we fear that the ability to attend the board would be very much curtailed by the distance, the want of facilities of communication, the expense required for the journey, and all sorts of inconveniences arising therefrom. The success of the measure would depend much upon the punctuality of attendance, and in order to ensure it we would humbly suggest that some such rule might be framed, that if a member be absent from six successive meetings a warning is to be given to him, and that if in spite of that warning he still remains absent from two or three other successive meetings, his name is to be taken off the list of members, and the voters of his ward directed to elect another in his place. The member so excluded should not, however, be debarred from offering himself as a candidate for membership in the next general election.' Considering the small area of the Goalundo sub-division in which these gentlemen live, and the unusual facilities of communication enjoyed by its inhabitants, one might fear that a board at which absence at eight or nine successive meetings is contemplated as a not unlikely event, would hardly be energetic and persevering in the despatch of public business."

As regards this paragraph, I can only say that if such very lax attendance is prognosticated now when the scheme is new and people are more or less enthusiastic about it, there is very little hope of a local board at Goalundo being a success.

24. "Mr. Badshah thus somewhat diffidently sums up his report on popular opinion—'The interest taken in the new scheme is not so strong as it should have been. Many of the leading men have kept aloof from the agitation. But for that reason I would not recommend that the boon of local self-government should be denied. There are many men who understand the question, whose natural longing is to come forward and undertake the duties which they are required to perform under the new scheme.'"

25. On the subject of a local board for the sudder sub-division of Furreedpore, Mr. Sharp writes—

"There are in and about this station a fair number of very intelligent gentlemen, who have, moreover, proved their energy and attention to public business. One at least devotes a great deal of time and pains to it. I believe that a local board here constituted would be likely to succeed quite as well as in most other districts, and I recommend the trial. I have some apprehensions whether there is a large enough number of qualified gentlemen to admit of many changes at future elections or appointments; but I do think that the number is large enough to justify a beginning. Most indeed of those of whom I think are pleaders (though of these several are also holders of land in the district); but some are unprofessional. Among these there are some who would, in my opinion, be competent chairmen of a local board under the new system. I would therefore recommend that the head-quarters local board be allowed the power of electing its own chairman.

26. "The power ought, however, to be continued, I think, only so long as the committee are able to find a competent non-official chairman. It would be undesirable that a Magistrate, Collector, or other executive officer should discharge his functions as the tenant-at-will of an elected committee, and the following considerations seem to be of greater and real importance. Privilege should connote duty, and it would be opposed to the principles of self-government to allow the mere option without the necessity of finding means and men to do the work. It would be demoralizing if, besides obtaining self-government as a gift rather than as a thing won, the people should not be called upon even to keep the instrument bright with use, and should be able to exercise control without responsibility, putting up one of themselves when it suited them, but otherwise lazily leaning on the old props and getting their work done at cost of time and pains not their own."

I quite agree with Mr Sharp in his remarks in this paragraph; if there are persons (non-officials) who are capable of doing the work, by all means let them be unhampered; educate them not to lean on Government officers for support; but if properly qualified persons cannot be found, we must fall back on officials or salaried officers of some sort. My own opinion is that pleaders and merchants have not sufficient leisure; they will not give up time more profitably spent in making their fortunes in order to look after what they would consider other persons' business.

27. "It is not of much moment, in my opinion, whether an official chairman, if there be one, has or has not a vote. He has generally a good deal of influence by his position, and though it is now the fashion to decry this influence, yet to destroy that influence would be to forego the use of such wisdom as may be the outcome of training and experience. It is a mistake to think that deference to the views of an official chairman always springs from his power as an executive officer. Sensible men are apt, in the majority of cases (without giving up their freedom of selecting those in which they decline it), to follow the advice of men whose knowledge and ability in the matter on hand they feel to be greater than their own. On many points the resident non-official members are better advisers than a Magistrate-Collector, and he himself, if he knows and does his duty, will welcome their opinions on that footing. On the other hand, there are many points on which he has means of forming a sound decision quite beyond theirs, and under such circumstance to profit by the advice of such a man is neither cringing deference nor anything other than what is done by the freest and most enlightened assemblies in the world.

28. "Many of the foregoing paragraphs touch on the questions connected with local boards, and I have already (in paragraph 25) recommended the constitution of a local board for the head-quarters sub-division, which consists of five thanas, for each of which there should be two elected members in addition to five (in all) appointed members; total 15. For this sub division the thanas might conveniently be the elective wards I would also recommend that the board should be allowed to appoint its own chairman, subject to the proviso suggested in paragraph 26.

29. "Mr Badshah has said little of these boards, and the sub-divisional officer of Madaripore has not yet reported on the subject at all. I waited some time for his report, and have now had to write this without it. This would nevertheless have been ready some days ago, but for an attack of fever which made me quite unable to do work of this kind properly. Mr. Badshah says—'I have been unable to discuss the details of the scheme with the people of the sub-division. It was very difficult for them to grasp the general ideas of the scheme, and they were unable therefore to descend into particulars. It is with hesitation therefore I recommend that a local board be created in this sub-division. If it can be useful in any other sub division of Eastern Bengal, it will be useful here' * * * and 'as regards the appointment of a chairman, I do not think that any man resident in the sub-division has the intelligence, education, time, and influence to enable him to make a good chairman. I know that some people whose homes are in the sub division, but who reside in other places, can very well act as chairman; but the appointment of such men is simply out of the question, because they do not reside in the sub division at all.'

30. "I do not quite understand why he has been unable to discuss this question with the people. They seemed to enter eagerly into it here. The absenteeism which he mentions is indeed a serious matter, and unluckily clings to all parts of the district. Mr. Jeffery was led by this and other considerations to pronounce (No. G—812, dated the 23rd December 1881) against any plan of self-government; but I am by no means content with his somewhat offhand verdict. Since I have been here the landholders have not shewn that invariable failure in attendance on which he comments; and although there is, as has been pointed out (paragraph 25), a difficulty of making any large changes among the members, I think that when it has been resolved to extend self-government to all districts, save those which present special circumstances of real difficulty, it is clearly right to offer a full and fair trial here. With reference to paragraph 10 of the late Government circular, I may state my belief that the intelligence among those who would be electors is certainly up to the average, and though there may be now comparatively few likely to make able and energetic members, yet there are enough, and the intelligence of the electors aided by the education that consists in the employment of such privileges may be reasonably expected to call forth in due time a larger number of qualified candidates.

31. "The petition (appendix D) from inhabitants of Madaripore prays for a local board; but in regard to the sub-divisional officer's letters, it would seem better to postpone the constitution of such boards in both the sub divisions. If the first board succeeds well I should be inclined cordially to recommend another. Mr. Pellew was inclined to have one at first limited to one thana, or even to part of a thana (No. M—263, dated the 24th July last); but I venture to think there would be great difficulties in working so small an area with a board apart, and besides I do not think that such a limited exercise of functions as would thus be called into play would attract the best men. The trial would hardly be fair. The members could deal with only one or two roads, and one or two schools, pounds, &c., and their authority would be in a continual state of deference and adjustment with other officers

32. "If a local board were constituted for the head-quarters thana, the majority of the members would probably be elected from among those already on the district road cess committee, and the double position might cause much embarrassment, while to declare the ineligibility to one board of the members of the other might deprive, whichever of the two should be held the less disqualified, of the services of the best men.

33. "There will be some difficulty in arranging for the efficient performance of work in outlying sub-divisions or thanas when a local board is constituted for the head-quarters sub-division. In such cases it is notified that a committee corresponding to a branch committee under the present Act will administer the outlying tracts; but a branch committee can only exist in connection with the district road committee, which would thus sit away from its chief remaining work at head-quarters, where also the local board would almost independently control the neighbouring thanas. The position seems to be one which may lead to inconvenience. In such a case the branch committee might be entrusted with the fullest powers allowable by the Act, and a larger number than usual of its members might be appointed members of the district committee. They could thus come into vote on the distribution of funds, and do most of their own executive work in the branch committees; but I doubt whether the difficulty would thus be adequately met, and would invite further consideration of the point.

34. "The people of Bhanga have urged their claims for a separate local board to be constituted at that town and to administer thanas Bhanga, Magsudpore, and Ayanpore. Their case is stated fairly and without exaggeration in paragraph 4 of the petition (appendix C) presented to the Lieutenant-Governor at Furreedpore—

'4. That your petitioners beg most respectfully to represent that Bhanga, though not the seat of a sub-division, is nevertheless an equally important station, whether considered as the centre of commerce and all sorts of business of this part of the country, where, in consequence of its advantageous position at the confluence of three rivers, a brisk trade is actually carried on during the whole year, or a civil station where three munsifs' courts are located to administer civil justice to the people residing within the three thanas, comprising the Bhanga munsifee, and the sub-registrar of deeds and the Mahomedan marriage registrar of Bhanga hold their offices, where the police station is situated, where there is a Government aided school and a post-office, and where there is a political association, called the Bhanga People's Association, or whether viewed in regard to its almost central position in the district, or the extent and intelligence of its population, or the great number of middlemen, whose welfare and properties are at stake in the management of the proposed board.'

"The substance of this has been affirmed in the resolutions in appendix C. I should be inclined to support the application on the terms stated in paragraph 31; but for the present it is better to have one local board only, and at Bhanga there is the special difficulty of the absence of a gazetted executive officer. There ought in my opinion to be a sub-division there, and I shall probably submit this question for separate consideration. If a sub-division should be established, its position as regards a local board would be similar to that of Madaripore now."

As regards paragraphs 32, 33, and 34, I do not, I confess, understand how a local board for a thana or sub-division is going to manage its affairs and leave the rest of the district to be managed as it now is, nor does Mr. Sharp record his opinion as to how it is to be worked. However, as he is of opinion that properly qualified members for such a board are forthcoming, his proposal may be sanctioned, and a local board elected for the sudder sub-division.

35. This district should accordingly fall under class (2) of paragraph 8 of the late Government circular.

36. "The opinions communicated to me on the qualifications for voters and for candidates are very various; but their general tendency has been not only to greatly lower the scale of rates proposed by Government, but to admit professional men and others quite irrespective of payment. The latter point is directly opposed to the words in that paragraph—'Mr. Rivers Thompson is distinctly of opinion that the ownership or occupancy of some kind of property, or the direction of some trade or business in the area to be represented should be an essential condition of the franchise. * * * * * * It is essential that both the voters and the candidates should have some stake in the locality.' As instances of native views I may refer to paragraphs 4 and 5 of the Gopalpur petition (appendix D), paragraph 3 of the minutes of the Bhanga meeting of the 14th August (appendix C), and paragraph 3 of that of the 21st idem, proposing further reductions.

37. "On the other hand, Baboos Shyama Sanker and Girija Sanker Mozumdars (appendix E, paragraph 4) consider the qualifications stated in the Government circular to be just and proper; but they raise the pertinent question of granting separate votes to each member of a family paying joint-rates. Their views appear to be well entitled to consideration.

38. "A fair solution would seem to be the grant of one vote to each family for every Rs. 10 license tax, or Rs. 25 road cess, provided that no more votes be allowed than there are adult recorded sharers. So long as the family remains undivided, it might be required, as in other business, to give each vote in the name of all the members, or each member might be allowed one vote up to the limit of the number of votes that could be held by individuals making separate payments, aggregating the same amounts of road cess and license tax respectively.

39. "The reason of the proviso is the extraordinary consent with which every one of my advisers has protested against the suggestions made in the Government circular, that a single rate-payer should have a number of votes corresponding to the amount of his payment. In the meeting here of the 1st August the proposal was unanimously deprecated, and this view seems to be a healthy sign of a wish to commit power of the people en masse rather than to the already influential classes. The reports from Goalundo corroborate this view. Mr. Badshah writes—'To increase the number of votes to be given by individuals will tend to enable big zemindars to send in their own nominees. It is a well known fact that practically the zemindar is a very powerful man; he directs in ordinary matters of life his ryots to follow a certain course, and it is followed without much hesitation. By enabling him to give more than one vote, he will be able to return a man of his own choice, although he may not be the fittest person, and the consequence will be that the boards will be filled with nominees of zemindars.'

The course recommended by Messrs. Sharp and Badshah, viz., the giving of votes to the mass (in this part of Bengal agriculturists) would, I should say, for this very reason, give great power to the zemindar, and he would work his tenants. and make them vote his way; whereas if there were a money qualification, giving extra votes to those paying extra tax, many merchants and men of business would have extra votes and be better able to contend the zemindar's influence.

40. "The payments proposed in paragraph 10 of the Government circular appear to meet the circumstances of this district; but I venture to propose, as a fair concession to the weight of native opinion, that half of those payments should qualify in the case of any person falling under any one of the classes (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), (j), (k), and (l) in paragraph 38 (vide paragraph 9 of my letter No. 387M—A, dated 23rd September 1882, regarding Furreedpore second class municipality)—

(d) 'Who holds a title granted by Government;
(e) Who holds a certificate of January 1877;
(f) Who has been exempted by Government from personal appearance in civil courts;
(g) Who has been exempted by Government orders from service as a juror or as an assessor;
(h) Who holds any university degree;
(i) Who is commonly recognized as a pundit, a moulvie, a kazee, or as holding any academic title proceeding from any Sanscrit, Oriental or normal school, or any madrassa;
(j) Who is a teacher in any Government, municipal, or aided school;
(k) Who is a barrister, attorney, pleader, muktear, or marriage registrar: or,
(l) Who (in the language of section 406, Code of C. P.) openly and constantly practises in the profession of physic. I think that such an arrangement would tend to promote the object stated by Government—'the gradual training of the most capable and influential men in the community to a participation in the business of the part of the district in which their interest lies.'

41. "To ascertain the number of persons paying road cess of Rs. 10 and Rs. 25 respectively and upwards, and living within a given area, would be a work much more difficult and tedious than was apparently estimated, and its magnitude may be appreciated from a note by the Cess Deputy Collector, of which a copy is annexed (appendix F). The cess registers, unlike those of the License Tax Department, take no account of the residence of the payers; and even after finding the amounts paid by individuals, the residence (which is the point at issue) of a vast number would still be unknown without minute enquiries. The number of estates is extraordinarily large in this district, and the apportionment of joint-payments among different persons is extremely minute. Without stopping ordinary work to an extent which I think not intended, it would be impossible to make a complete list of such persons; but the revenue agents have been questioned, and they have supplied lists which are, however, quite imperfect.

42. "In the margin is an approximate list of the persons who would be qualified respectively as voters and as candidates by payment of the sums specified in paragraph 10 of the Government circular; but I venture to think that, when the terms of the franchise are fixed, all who will care to vote will also care to register their names, and the testing of their claims will be easy enough when the names are put in, though the production of the names without such previous indication is very difficult. People whose names have to be found out for them by official action are not likely to send in their votes, and while it would be desirable to notify the names of those who can be identified according to their residence as payers of license tax, it will, to the best of my belief, be enough to publish in every village a clear statement of qualifications, and an invitation to all others who would exercise their right to cause their names to be registered.

	Voters	Candidates.
Head quarters s b division ...	705	82
Goalundo ditto ...	453	105
Madaripore di to ...	768	176

43. "Baboos Shyama Shanker and Girija Sanker Mozumdars offer the following remarks on this part of the question: The people 'should be called upon to offer themselves as candidates if they like, and to represent their residence, and on such offers and representations being made, a revised list of the qualified candidates for membership should be prepared, and such revised list, as also the list of qualified voters, be printed and published in all thanas, post-offices, principal villages, and other conspicuous places, calling upon the voters to submit their voting papers, printed forms of which should be kept for distribution in all thanas, post-offices, &c.'

44. "On the subject of polling they write—'The village post-offices, which are many in number, might, we beg to suggest, be utilized by requiring every voter to sign his name, as also the name of the candidate for membership whom he would vote for in the voting paper, in the presence of the postmaster, who should be directed to countersign the same as a witness. If any voter has any objection to the same, he may sign his paper in the presence of two other qualified voters who would sign their names as witnesses thereto. The papers may then be sent to the thana direct or by the post,' and the plan seems practicable and useful.

45. "These gentlemen are, as on other subjects, very moderate in their views of the powers to be exercised by the board. They say 'the road, education, and dispensary matters may, we hope, be safely entrusted.' Some are, however, very much more ambitious. There was at the Goalundo meeting some expression of a wish to have the assessment of the license tax, and to this the Bhanga public meeting would add the Public Works cess and other funds. It also passed an unanimous resolution that 'power be given to the board to levy or abolish additional tax if necessary.' I do not think it would be well to commit the assessment of the license tax to the boards till they have proved themselves in matters of less difficulty. Nor would they be willing probably to discharge the duties of that department if they really know how onerous they are.

46. "This district for instance would eagerly welcome a large share of the Public Works cess, for the representatives of the people are now prone to complain that what is collected from them is spent largely on feeder roads in other districts (as Rajshahye, Bogra, Dinagepore, &c.), the superiority of whose claims they are unable to recognise, while no grant has been made to those of this district where the need is none the less great. Thus, if a large or even a moderate share of that cess were localised, the advantage of this and of other districts would be equalised to that extent. To that same extent, however, the advantage of some other districts would suffer by the localisation, and Government, which sees and can adjust the claims of all, must alone decide on all the merits of the case. It is not easy therefore to report on this point as regards a district thus situated, otherwise than to the effect that the more complete the localisation of the proceeds, the more suitable would the decision be from its own point of view.

47. "My recommendation of non-official chairman wherever possible implies preference of control from without rather than from within the boards. Sanction to expenditure and to works involving professional consideration would apparently be acceptable much on the lines of the procedure now adopted in connection with the road cess committee; but there seems to be a strong feeling that in respect to the selection of works and their localities, to the decision of the amount to be spent upon each, and to such matters not needing professional advice, the boards should have greater freedom than is now allowed by sections 151 and following of the Cess Act. Some gentlemen have not unreasonably urged that in practice the committees are reduced under these sections to little more than consultative bodies, for not only the total and the general arrangements, but every detail in their budget estimate may under the present law be changed.

48. "Nearly all seem to admit the necessity of control by central authority, and of provision against the possibility of local abuses, class prejudices, &c.; but they are inclined to think that alterations of their resolutions on matters so essentially affecting their particular charge as budget estimates should proceed only on tangible and ascertained grounds of that kind, or on clear professional advice, and that the views of the local committee should not be liable to large or fundamental revision, proceeding on the general opinion that other projects would be more suitable. Only a few opinions have reached me on the subject of the central board of control, consisting of selected representatives, and they are in favour of its constitution."

49. The district of Furreedpore may be classified as coming under (2) of paragraph 8 of the Government circular, a local board being appointed for the sudder sub-division with head-quarters in the town of Furreedpore. There should be 15 members, three being elected by each of the five thanas which comprise the sub-division. In my opinion it would be better if the Magistrate and Collector were for the first year at least to be the chairman.

50. As regards the other divisions of the district, Goalundo and Madaripore, I notice that even at the very outset it is prognosticated that there will be great laxity of attendance on the part of the members of the local board if one is established for Goalundo, and it does not appear that there are any well qualified residents within the sub divisions of Goalundo and Madaripore from among whom a local board can be elected. These sub-divisions must therefore remain as at present.

BACKERGUNGE DISTRICT LOCAL BOARD.

As regards the district of Backergunge, Mr. Fiddian, Officiating Collector, writes as follows:—

"The sudder sub-division is the only one in which the formation of a local board, referred to in paragraph 8 of Government resolution, appears practicable or at least desirable. The officers in charge of the outlying sub-divisions, viz., Perozepore, Patuakhali, and Bhola, after holding meetings and duly considering the question, have arrived at the following conclusions :—

2. "The sub-divisional officers of Patuakhali and Perozepore agree in considering a branch committee preferable to an independent local board. In Patuakhali the meeting held on the subject agreed with the sub-divisional officer.

3. "In Perozepore resolutions were passed in favour of a local board; but as the proposed board would be under the control of the sudder board at Burrisal, I do not see that it would differ materially from a branch committee (or branch board).

4. "As regards Bhola, the sub-divisional officer recommends a local board subject only to the controlling authority mentioned in paragraph 14 of the Government resolution; but I do not see any warrant for such a suggestion, or in what respects the sub-division is specially fitted for independent action. There has not even been a municipality in the whole of the sub-division; the zemindars are non-residents, and the only ground put forward in support of the suggestion is that there are a number of independent talukdars within the area of the sub-division. In this respect all three sub-divisions should be treated alike, nor can I see any essential difference between them.

5 "As a rule the zemindars are absentees, and of the middle classes the bulk of the people are ignorant and uneducated cultivators, who have accumulated a little money and so become respectable. The necessary materials for even a tolerable local board are not at present to be met with in any of the sub-divisions, unless indeed officials and pleaders connected with the courts are to form a leading element.

6 "In the sudder sub-division there are six thanas, of which the Kotwali (or Burrisal) thana, Gournadi, and Mendigunge constitute roughly the centre and north of the sub-division, and the remaining three, Jhalakati, Nalchitti, and Backergunge form the southern portion. This latter portion, viz, Jhalakati, and Nalchitti, and Backergunge I propose to form into a separate branch committee or board, similar to those in the outlying sub-divisions. At present there are municipalities at Jhalakati and Nalchitti which have given some training to the residents there, and there is one union at Backergunge. They are also important centres of trade. Such materials as there are for self-government in those three thanas would have a better opportunity for devolpment in a separate branch board than if they were included in the Burrisal board. As, however, they lack the services of an experienced and responsible person like the sub-divisional officer, it would be necessary to make the Magistrate of the district or the chairman of the Burrisal board their presiding officer, and Nalchitti, being within easy reach of Burrisal and central for the three thanas, would be the most suitable place at which to establish the branch office.

7. "This district would therefore come under class (2) of paragraph 8 of the Government resolution, and the arrangements I beg to propose are—

(1) "A local board at Burrisal for the larger portion of the sudder sub-division, viz., thanas Kotwali, Gournadi, and Mendigunge.

(2) "A branch board, i.e., branch committee, at Nalchitti for the remaining thanas of the sub division.

(3) "A branch board for each of the sub-divisions Perozepore, Patuakhali, and Bhola."

Election of members and appointment of chairmen.—"The next point to be considered is the election of members and appointment of chairmen.

"The principle of electing members by popular vote can only be sparlingly adopted in this district, because the inhabitants are mostly cultivators, living in isolated homesteads, and somewhat exclusive in their habits, so that they are not accustomed to act together for the public good.

"There are one or two thanas, parts of which contain much larger number of educated and business people, and in these the experiment of electing members might be tried; but as a rule this procedure would be either nugatory or altogether untrustworthy.

8. "As regards the outlying sub-divisions, the Deputy Magistrates in charge of Bhola and Patuakhali agree in the opinion that the members should be selected by Government.

"In Perozepore the Deputy Magistrate thinks that one-third should be nominated by Government and the rest elected. The meeting which was held here preferred that all the members should be elected. The Deputy Magistrate himself, however, admits that both voters and members are to be found only in parts of two thanas, Sarupkati and Perozepore. Why, under those circumstances, there should be election in the case of the remaining two thanas, Bhandaria and Motbaria, where there is scarcely any one to vote, does not appear. The meeting which was held represented mainly the neighbourhood of the head-quarters and not the whole sub division. I could not therefore speak for the whole sub-division. The eastern portion of Sarupkati thana is thickly populated, and contains a considerable number of Baboos and educated people. That thana and Perozepore thana are the most suitable portions of the three sub-divisions in which to try the experiment of election, and I think there would be no risk whatever in attempting it there. If the experiment failed, the Government would then be able to nominate members instead.

"With the exception of these thanas, then, I would recommend that the system of electing members be not introduced into any of the above three sub divisions.

9. "For the branch board of thanas Jhalakati, Nalchitti, and Backergunge I would recommend that the members be selected by Government in the first instance. It will be a sufficient advance to give them separate action as a branch committee without attempting a so entirely new procedure as the election of members by popular vote. The local board at Burrisal should consist partly of elected and partly of nominated members. 'The sudder or Kowtali thana includes the town and sub-division of Burrisal, and in the mofussil contains the homes of many zemindars and other educated persons. The system of election by popular vote might be fitly introduced there. In this case and at Perozepore the voters living within 10 miles of the polling station should, I think, be obliged to come in and record their votes. Those who live more than 10 miles away might give their vote in writing.

10. Appointment of chairman.—"In Bhola, Patuakhali, and Perozepore there is, in my opinion, no suitable person besides the sub-divisional officer for holding the post of chairman Munsifs are debarred from such offices; pleaders would not give the necessary time; and minor Government officials, such as a head clerk or police inspector, or even a sub-registrar, would not command sufficient weight. As far as I can learn there is no non-official in any of the sub-divisions who could safely be entrusted with the management of the branch committees, and is at the same time willing to give his time and attention to the duties of the office.

11. Appointment of chairman in sudder sub-division.—"At Nalchitti there is no sub-divisional officer, and it would be preferable, I think, to make the Magistrate of the district, or chairman of the Burrisal board, the head of that branch board. It would also prevent local jealousy between Nalchitti and Jhalakati, two rival communities. As regards the Burrisal local board there are no doubt non-officials competent to undertake the office or chairman, and I think the board might safely be trusted with his nomination, the general sentiment being in favour of this step. It is not equally certain that any one would be found willing to accept the appointment, or that they would not be obliged to fall back on an official. In the latter case the Government should reserve a controlling power to accept of reject the nomination.

12. Qualifications of voters.—"As regards the qualifications of voters those suggested by the Government appear to be the most suitable as an index of the voter's income and position in life, viz, the payment of Rs. 25 road cess, Rs. 20 license tax, or an income of not less than Rs. 1,000 a year for members, and Rs. 10 road cess, Rs. 10 license tax, or an income of Rs. 500 a year in the case of voters.

"The test, however, in respect of road cess would be a difficult one to apply in this district, as each man who pays in the cess does so on account of so many other tenure-holders and cultivators besides himself. I have consulted the Road Cess Deputy Collector who has had much experience, and I agree with him in thinking that it would be a work of great difficulty and magnitude if not an impossibility to prepare even an approximate list of those who pay a given amount of road cess on their own account. In prepairing any estimates, we should be obliged to content ourselves, I think, with the statistics of license tax and of general income so far as the latter can be gauged, and leave those who claim a vote on the ground of road cess payments to come forward and establish their claim for themselves.

"The figures shewing the estimated number of persons qualified to vote or to be members are given in the table B annexed to the report.

"Residence within the area of the local board or branch committee should be an essential requisite of membership.

"The proposal of the Government for cumulative voting seems reasonable.

"Taking for example the basis of license tax assessment, to vote might be allowed for a voter paying Rs. 20 license tax, three for Rs. 50, four for Rs. 100, and five for a payment of Rs 200 or upwards.

"Instead of 123 votes of the lowest class in the sudder thana and Burrisal town, and an aggregate of 65 in all the other classes. we should then have a proportion of 103 to 167, which seems more equitable. The same proportionate cumulation of votes might be allowed in regard to the other forms of qualification"

13. As regards the above, I concur with the Magistrate in this, as I have assigned my reasons in my remarks on the Furreedpore report.

14. Arrangement of wards.—"No other arrangement of wards apart from thana seems necessary. It would be a difficult matter to divide one thana into two or three wards, and as in the thanas proposed for the trial of the elective system there could be actual polling in one circumscribed locality only, it would not be worthwhile to make the remainder of the thana into a separate ward.

Form of voting.—"No special form of voting seems necessary. Voters within a fixed distance of the polling station, not more than 10 miles, might be required to record their votes in person, while those living at a greater distance could be allowed to do it by letter.

Number of Members.—"For the sub-divisional branch committees, I would recommend the following number of members:—

"Bhola 12, Patuakhali 16, Perozepore 16. Bhola is a small sub-division, comprizing two thanas. The other two sub-divisions contain each four thanas. In Perozepore sub-division four members might be allotted to each of the four thanas, and in Sarupkati and Perozepore thanas three out of the four members might be elected by the voters. In Bhola and Patuakhali all the members should be selected by Government. In the Sudder sub-division I would recommend 15 members for the Nalchitti branch committee and 18 for the Burrisal local board. The Kotwali or the Sudder thana being much the most important of the three thanas, nine members should, I think, be allotted to it; six to be elected by the voters and three nominated by Government. Government would nominate the members for the other thanas, but should not be restricted as to the locality from which to choose if sufficient suitable members are not to be found in those thanas.

"It appears to be the general opinion that where an official is appointed chairman of a local board or branch committee, he should not have a vote, but if a non-official, he should be allowed to vote.

"As regards travelling expenses, I think it would be advisable not to prohibit payment on that account to members living at a distance of more than 10 miles from the head-quarters of the local board or branch committee, at least for one meeting in each quarter. In some cases the cost of travelling might be felt as burdensome, and it is better not to place obstacles in the way of a fair trial of the new system.

16. "The scheme which is put forward in this report gives a considerable measure of liberty for self-government, and quite as much, I think, as the peculiar character of the district will allow. Being far removed from the centres of civilization, and with only limited means for communication with the outer world, the people, as a rule, are in a backward condition, and but slightly prepared for self-government. To go further than is now proposed in the direction of self-government would be rash and only court failure.

"I beg to apologize for the delay in submitting this report which has been caused by the shorthandedness of the staff of subordinates and other unavoidable circumstances."

17. As I am but little acquainted with the general circumstances of the Backergunge district, I have given the report of Mr. Fiddian, the Magistrate, in its entirety. It appears to me that the district should be classed as one coming under (2) of paragraph 8 of the Government circular. A local board for the Sudder sub-division of Burrisal being established with 18 members, three to be elected by each of the six thanas of which it is comprised, I do not see any advantage in having branch boards at the places suggested by the Magistrate; nor do I think that in this district there could be two local boards established within the Sudder sub-division.

MYMENSINGH DISTRICT LOCAL BOARD.

As regards Mymensingh, I submit extracts from my own report made as Magistrate of that district.

2. "I will premise by saying that this part of the country is probably as backward in matters of education and civilization as almost any in India. We are here at least a quarter of a century behind districts like the 24-Pergunnahs and Hooghly and similar districts near the metropolis; there are no railways and steamers are rare, and the residents of the district have little intercourse with the outer world; there are no great staples of manufactures such as tea, indigo, or silk to bring in capital and enterprise, and create new ideas among the indigenous population. I must confess therefore I should prefer to see the experiment of local self-government tried first in the more advanced parts of the country before it is extended to this district which is decidedly of the nature of a rural district as described in paragraph 8 of the Government circular.

3. "As regards the district generally, I am disposed, as said before, to see the results of the experiment in more civilized parts of Bengal before seeing it tried here; but if the scheme is to be tried at all, it should be tried first in the Sudder sub-division only. Members for this sub-division might be elected to sit at the general district board as that recommended to be instituted in my letter No. 5T, dated 12th December 1881, a copy of which is appended for ready reference. I will, if this is approved, submit lists as approximately correct as can be got ready from our office records on such short notice showing the names of persons paying license tax and road cess to the amount of Rs. 10 and upwards per annum, or possessing property to the value of Rs. 500 and upwards, residing within the jurisdiction of the Sudder sub-division. I would propose that all such persons should have one vote for every Rs. 10 of tax paid by them, or for every Rs 500 worth of property held by them. Thus a payer of Rs. 50 license tax would have five votes, or a zemindar or talookdar possessing Rs. 5,000 worth of property have ten votes, and so on.

4. "If you approve of this plan as to the introduction into the Sudder sub-division of the elective system as recommended by me, I will submit the list of persons eligible as voters and members, and a further detailed report at an early date. All persons paying Rs 25 as road cess or license tax and upwards per annum, or possessing other property to the value of Rs. 1,000, and upwards, might be made eligible for election to be members of the local board.

5. "As to the office of chairman of the local board, I shall adhere to the views expressed in my report No. 5T, dated 12th December 1881. I think for some time to come yet, the only officer who can be chosen as chairman is the district officer (the Magistrate and Collector). In this backward part of the country, unless the local board is presided over by him, matters would very soon come to a dead lock; it is difficult enough to get things done as it is."

6. With reference to the above extracts it will be seen that it is doubtful whether Mymensingh should be entered under (1) or (2) of paragraph 8 of the Government circular.

7. Having had now before me the reports from the Backergunge and Furreedpore districts, I would recommend that as in those districts a local board should be established for the Sudder sub-division, which comprises thanas Kotwali, Iswargunge, Fulpore, and Guffurgow. This area contains the largest number of educated and well-to-do persons. Three members might be elected for each thana, giving a total of 12 members for the board. According to the scale laid down by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, the number of voters will, it is roughly estimated, be 773, and persons eligible as candidates 181. The chairman should, for the present, be, I think, the district officer or the Joint-Magistrate at the Sudder, as I am certain a properly qualified chairman, who would devote himself thoroughly to the work, could not be found. As I have said elsewhere, the zemindars and merchants, the best men for the post, will never give up sufficient time to the work, and as to men of independent means, who would take the trouble, there are none.

GENERAL.

With reference to paragraphs 10, 12, 14 of the Government circular in which I have been called on to give my opinion on certain specific points, I have the honour to add the following memorandum.

2. As to modes of voting, many of my correspondents have laid great stress on the necessity of allowing what they term "an intellectual-qualification," by which they mean that all persons who have attained a certain educational standard, such as graduates of universities, diplomaed physicians, pundits, and others, should have votes purely on the ground of their being such, and quite irrespective of their having any property within the municipality or district within which the election is to take place. Some also hold that such persons should be eligible for candidature as members, solely on the ground of their intellectual capacity as proved by their being graduates, &c. This idea as to an intellectual qualification seems to be very popular, but I can hardly say that it seems to be one that can be recommended for adoption as the election of such members by such votes would tend to cause the primary object of the boards, viz. the looking after local matters and interests, to be quite lost sight of.

3. As regards paragraph 12, the license tax assessments in most towns would far exceed any charges that Government could transfer to the municipalities. The funds to be made over to boards might be, besides those derived from pounds and ferries, and the primary education grants, a portion, say one-half, of the road and public cess funds, estimated to be levied within the area of the local board's jurisdiction. This would, I think, furnish them with requisite funds. Municipalities have ample funds or means at their disposal for increasing taxation for any particular object, and it is only in the case of local boards that any special funds will have to be provided. I think if local boards are to be saddled with the cost of drainage, and other such more or less costly schemes, they will be entitled to have a portion of the public works cess made over to them for expenditure.

4. As regards paragraph 14, I have noted before in the report on the Dacca district some of the points on which I am of opinion sanction to their acts should be obtained by local boards such as—

(a) The appointment of employés up to and beyond certain amounts of salary

(b) The maximum amounts to be expended on any one work by a board without the sanction of Government, or a board or controlling officer.

(c) The raising of loans and rules thereto might be provided for in the Act and not left to be laid down in rules, which might be disregarded by independent bodies, such as the future local boards.

(d) The manner in which appointments are to be made of employés of the boards must be, I think, carefully laid down, so as to prevent jobbery and abuse of patronage, as there will be none of the many appeals which are now allowed to discontented candidates for employment.

(e) All appeals from employés dismissed or degraded might be allowed to mose controlling authority.

No. 2484, dated Dacca, the 12th September 1882.

From—E. V. WESTMACOTT, Esq., Officiating Magistrate of Dacca,

To—The Commissioner of the Dacca Division.

WITH reference to your No. 242 of 10th July 1882, with enclosure as per margin, and also with reference to your No. 263 of 24th July 1882, on the same subject, I have the honour to report as follows respecting the introduction of the principle of local self-government into the district of Dacca.

Bengal Government (Financial) No. 5TM of 5th July 1882.

2. The district is divided into four sub-divisions including the central or head-quarters one. The city of Dacca forms a large and important municipality of the first class; Naraingunge another, which, although now only of the second class, is of growing importance, being a place of increasing commerce, and ought to be raised to the first class. The reason of its being now in the second class only is that the last census was taken in the month of February, when the jute trade is quite at a standstill, and a very large proportion of the ordinary population is absent. I am sure that a census taken in the mouth of August would shew the population to be sufficient to satisfy the legal requirement for raising the municipality to the first class.

3. The head-quarters station of the Manikgunge sub-division now forms a municipal union, but being nothing more than a group of villages, may, I think, be abolished.

4. The head-quarters sub-division consists of four thanas with a population exclusive of the city of Dacca as follows:—

	Population.
Thana Lalbagh	244,448
„ Sabhar	174,831
„ Kapasya	119,515
„ Nowabgunge	160,235
Total ...	699,029

The Naraingunge sub-division consists of three thanas with population exclusive of the town of Naraingunge as follows:—

	Population.
Thana Naraingunge	91,252
„ Roopgunge	164,159
„ Raipura	202,738
Total ...	458,149

The Moonsheegunge sub-division consists of two thanas with population as follows:—

	Population.
Thana Moonsheegunge	243,463
„ Sreenogor	275,984
Total ...	519,447

The Manikgunge sub-division consists of three thanas with population as follows:—

	Population.
Thana Manikgunge	184,196
„ Jafargunge	143,012
„ Harirampur	100,009
Total ...	427,217

5. I hope that it will be practicable to introduce the elective system into the two municipalities of Dacca and Naraingunge and to form a local board, also on the elective system, in each of the four sub-divisions. I will proceed to discuss the condition of each in detail.

6. Appendix A gives certain questions which I circulated among sub-divisional officers and others, and I give below the substance of the replies I received with my own opinion upon them.

CITY OF DACCA.

7. Appendix B is the reply of Mr. A. C. Tute, Vice-Chairman, to my questions. Dacca is among the most advanced places in Bengal, and if any town or tract in the country is ready for the introduction of the elective system it is Dacca. Ever since the subject of local self-government was mooted a certain section of the people of Dacca has taken an interest in it, and on the 24th July a meeting was held by a body, calling itself the Peoples' Association, at which there was a considerable amount of declamation on the subject in presence of a large concourse of people. On the 3rd August I called a meeting of rate-payers of the municipality, and addressed them for three quarters of an hour, endeavouring to explain the nature of the proposals of Government, to point out what it was necessary for the people themselves to do, and the precautions which I thought advisable to prevent local self-government being either a failure or a sham. Addresses to the same effect were given by a Deputy Collector in Bengali and by the Superintendent of the Madressa in Hindustanee, with both of whom I had previously discussed the subject.

8. There is no doubt that a large section of the community represented by the aforesaid Peoples' Association is eager for the introduction of an elective system and for the appointment of a non-official Chairman. This section consists of the men who have received an English education—pleaders, clerks, school-masters, and the like—and who form almost the only class which makes its wants known by public declamation or by writing in the public newspapers I must not, however, conceal the fact that there is in the background a large mass of people with less English education, but by no means wanting in intelligence, and including the principal portion of the Mahomedan citizens who view the movement with distrust if not with dislike. These people are averse to coming forward in public affairs, and I think it very doubtful whether they will exert themselves to obtain a fair share in representation, and whether they will not at least at first leave a monopoly of representation to the Hindoos who have received an English education, but who possess by no means so large a stake in the country as others who do not make themselves so prominent.

9. This is to be regretted, but I think it an evil that will gradually correct itself. Either the representatives will so manage affairs as to satisfy the quiet people who at first hold aloof from electioneering, or they will manage them so little to their liking that in future elections these people will see the necessity of exerting themselves to come forward and to secure representatives of their own. This appears to me an argument in favour of electing representatives at first for a short period only, certainly not more than two years, and perhaps not more than one.

10. Representation should be by dividing the city into wards, each ward electing one or more representatives. The city has been divided into seven blocks for conservancy arrangements, and I am not aware of any better system on which to divide it into elective wards, and I would suggest the adoption of these seven blocks as elective wards.

11. Mr. Tute has suggested that no person paying less than eight annas monthly house-rate should be allowed a vote. Should this qualification be adopted, the number of electors in each ward is estimated to be as follows :—

Ward No. 1	...	...	...	321
" " 2	...	...	...	472
" " 3	...	...	...	112
" " 4	...	...	...	176
" " 5	...	...	...	310
" " 6	...	...	...	104
" " 7	...	...	...	141
		Total	...	1,636

Accordingly, Mr. Tute proposes that wards 1, 2, and 5 should return each three representatives, and 3, 4, 6. and 7 each two only. I think some such recognition of the difference in importance of the wards is advisable, but the numbers Mr. Tute proposes would give 17 members for the municipal bo rd which appears rather a large number. Perhaps it would be enough if the larger wards elected each two representatives, and the smaller one, giving a total of ten.

12. The next point to be considered is the qualification of voters.

13. In Burdwan and Krishnanagor, under the rules of 1875, every rate-payer was allowed a vote, and I believe the same was the case in Serampore; but in this latter municipality, at all events, I hear that this system worked very badly, and in the revised rules of 1880 the payment of Rs. 4 at least as annual house-rate was made a necessary qualification. I am of opinion that the payment of a certain minimum amount of tax should be insisted on as the qualification of an elector. It would be very easy to lower the franchise hereafter if found desirable, and I think Mr. Tute's figures shew that the payment of eight annas monthly would qualify a sufficient number of electors in each ward to secure fair representation. Out of a total population, including women and children, of 82,210, 1,636 men would have votes, or perhaps about one in every 20 adult males. I find, however, that in Dacca the landlord frequently pays the municipal rate collecting it from the tenants, and consequently the tenant, not appearing on the books as a rate-payer, would not be entitled to a vote. I would therefore recommand that the occupation of a house of such annual value as involves the payment of a monthely rate of at least eight annas, should be as good a qualification as the actual payment of that rate. I think this measure would probably raise the number of electors to about 2,500.

14. Next must be considered the division of the vote among the several co-sharers, where a qualification is possessed ijmali, or jointly among co-parceners. Taking eight annas as the qualification, I would say that two persons having equal shares in a holding rated at one rupee, or four persons having equal shares in a holding rated at two rupees, should each be qualified electors, and that any person whose contribution to the rate on the holding in which he has a share would in due proportion to his share amount to eight annas, should be a qualified elector. Respecting this question I do not think it difficult to decide.

15. It is less easy to say what should be done in the case of holdings paying a monthly rate of eight annas, or perhaps much more, held by several co-sharers, not one of whom would in proportion to his share con tribute so much as eight annas monthly. It appears to me that unless as many co-sharers as between them would contribute eight annas join in appointing a representative, it would be impossible to allow a holding so sub-divided to qualify an elector at all.

16. I would give no vote to any but adult males of sound mind, but I do not think residence in the ward, or in the municipality, or a knowledge of reading and writing, should be essential. Many highly intelligent natives cannot read or write, and so long as a man contributes a certain amount to the rates, I think he should have a voice in the election of the persons who spend those rates wherever he may live.

17. Much clamour has been raised in favour of giving a vote to educated persons irrespective of other qualifications. Respecting this I shall have something to say presently, when discussing local boards in the interior ; but as regards a municipal board, where the expenditure of municipal rates is in question, I would allow no vote to any person who does not in some way contribute a certain amount to these rates.

18. Bearing in mind the distrust felt by natives of anything new, and the ignorance even among their leaders of electioneering tactics, I am prepared to find that at first only a small proportion of the qualified electors will come forward to register their votes. It would be ridiculous to hold a candidate duly elected if only half a dozen or a dozen votes were recorded, and I think that the record of a certain minimum proportion of the available votes should be a necessary condition of proper election. I do not mean that this minimum number should be recorded in favour of any one candidate, but that it should be recorded at the polling place for the various candidates. I find it by no means easy to say what should be the minimum proportion of available votes the record of which should be necessary to make an election valid, and I think it would be better that no election should be valid until confirmed by Government. A comparison would then be possible as to the amount of interest taken in the matter by different wards and by different municipalities or elective areas, and it might be decided by such comparison whether in any particular place the elective system had failed or not. I think this would be better than prescribing a fixed proportion beforehand.

19. At this point comes in a practical difficulty in ascertaining what the real number of qualified voters might be, for the same reason which would, I believe, prevent voters coming forward would also probably prevent the registration of their qualifications, and I believe the register of rate-payers by no means represents the number of really qualified persons. The heirs of deceased persons, for instance, or purchasers of holdings, often continue to pay the rates without any transfer of names on the books. I fear that the registers of rate-payers will continue to be the only registers of qualification of electors, though by no means representing the truth, and I can only hope that electors will gradually apply for correction of the said registers under section 100 of Act V, 1876.

20. On the 14th August 1882 a petition was presented to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for the introduction of the elective system purporting, under section 16 of Act V, 1876, to be signed by one-third of the rate-payers; but the petitioners themselves express a fear that their names will not be found registered on the municipal registers of rate-payers. I have therefore addressed to them a letter of advice recommending application for correction of the registers, under section 100 of the Act aforesaid, by registration of the names of those who are now actually rate-payers.

21. I believe that this correction of the registers and preparation of correct lists of duly qualified electors will be very laborious, if the canvassers understand how to make the electors bestir themselves. I think it may be confided to a sub committee of the present Municipal Commissioners in each ward, and, from an expression used in the petition above referred to, I hope volunteers will come forward to assist them as assessors. The expression used appears to indicate a feeling of distrust of the Magistrate, who, the petitioners presume, would himself undertake the scrutiny of qualifications in a hostile spirit. This proceeds from an utterly unfounded assumption that I, as Magistrate, wish to throw obstacles in the way of the introduction of an elective system which is of course not the case, and I do not understand the object of the persons who are industriously fostering such an assumption and dishonestly misrepresenting my attitude.

22. The polling should be held by a sub-committee of Municipal Commissioners in each ward. I think that voting papers should be distributed among the electors beforehand; but that in case they did not understand how to fill them up it might be done for them at the polling place. In every case, however, I hold it most essential that the elector should personally present himself at the polling place to be identified, and that in addition to filing the voting papers, the Polling Committee should enter in the register, opposite the elector's name, the candidate or candidates for whom he votes.

23. I should have mentioned before that I would give each elector as many votes as there are representatives allowed for his ward. If the ward returns three representatives, he would have three votes; if one, he would have only one vote; but in no case should he be allowed to give more than one vote for any one candidate.

24. I do not think it necessary now to go further into the details of polling rules, but looking to the Calcutta rules published in the Calcutta Gazette of 30th August 1881, I may briefly note that, premising that the actual presence of the elector at the polling place is essential, rules 17, 19, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, and 27, with some modification, appear applicable.

25. Mr. Tute advocates the qualification of electors otherwise than by contribution to the rates, by payment of license tax, and by the receipt of a certain income. To this I object altogether. I consider contribution direct or indirect to the municipal rates an essential qualification.

26. It remains to consider whether eight annas being the minimum rate the payment of which should qualify an elector, the payment of a larger sum should give more votes than one. Bearing in mind the principle that contribution to the rates should qualify, I see no objection to allowing a larger number of votes to the larger contributors, so that the payment of one rupee should give two votes, of two rupees four, and so forth; but I think a limit desirable, and would allow no elector more than ten votes in any one ward for any one candidate, whatever the number of his holdings or the amount of his contribution to the rates.

QUALIFICATION OF CANDIDATES.

27. Mr. Tute has proposed various qualifications for representatives of the wards on the the municipal board. From these I propose to reject the qualification by payment of a certain license tax and the qualification by the receipt of a certain income. I think the two essential duties of a Commissioner are economy in administration and efficiency in administration, and I think the former will be best secured by his being a contributor to the rates, and the second by his being a resident in the ward, and so acquainted with its requirements in such matters as sanitation, conservancy, water-supply, roads, lighting, and the like.

28. I think that if a man occupies a house of a certain value he may be looked on as a contributor to the rates whether they are actually paid by the landlord or by himself, and I would therefore omit the qualification by payment of rate and retain only that of occupation of a house of a certain annual value with residence therein for at least ten months in the year. I see no objection to accepting Mr. Tute's suggestion that Rs. 400 might be adopted as the annual value to be prescribed. This would be equivalent to the payment of a rate of Rs. 32 per year, or Rs. 2-8 per month, and Mr. Tute is of opinion that 250 persons would be found so qualified in the city. As regards qualification by the possession of a share only in a joint-holding, I would follow the lines which I have indicated respecting the qualification of electors.

29. Should any ward fail to elect any duly qualified person as its representative, either from the absence of any duly qualified candidate or from the failure of the electors to record whatever may be considered the minimum proportion of the registered number of available votes, I think, to secure efficient administration, it would be necessary that the Government should nominate some person or persons to represent the ward, and herein I think there should be no restriction of qualification, and that official persons should be as liable to nomination as others not in the service of Government.

30. It must next be considered whether the municipal board should consist only of elected Commissioners and of Commissioners nominated by Government in consequence of failure on the part of the wards to elect, or whether such Commissioners should form a proportion only, such as two-thirds, of the board, the remaining proportion being nominated by Government. This is a question of general policy upon which I do not understand that my opinion is now asked for. Whether it be necessary or not at first for Government to nominate certain members of the board in addition to those elected, I hope it would eventually be found possible to abolish such nomination, and leave the administration entirely in the hands of the elected representatives of the rate-payers; otherwise I should consider that the system as one of self-government had failed.

31. I will now go on to discuss the question whether the municipal board should be permitted to elect their own Chairman, or whether Government should nominate a duly qualified person to be Chairman. That section of the community to which I have already referred as eager for the introduction of an elective system is also eager for the appointment of a non-official Chairman; but it remains to be seen whether that section really represents the views of the substantial rate-payers of the city, who have a real interest in the matter.

32. The only non-official citizens whom I could select as in any way qualified to undertake the duties of a Chairman are too much occupied in their own business to be able to devote sufficient time to the laborious duties of the post. Mr. Tute instances the management of the water-works, the control of a very troublesome body of imported scavengers upon whom the whole system of conservancy depends, and the urgent need of sanitary reform as making the post of Chairman one of unusual difficulty. If the election of Chairman is to be left to the municipal board, it should certainly not be confined to their own number, so that they might elect an experienced official if they should see the need of it; but if the power falls into the hands of those who are most prominent in crying out for a non-official Chairman, I feel little doubt but that they will elect some one of their own number whether fit for the post or not, and if he proves himself unequal to the duties, his failure will be a breakdown in the municipal administration involving most serious injury to the citizens. A failure in the water-supply or a strike of the mehtars would be misfortunes not to be trifled with.

33. If only a qualified person can be found, I should think it most desirable that a non-official should be Chairman; but I do not at present see such a person.

34. What I should propose is that the Magistrate or Joint-Magistrate should be made Chairman for a year, the board electing two Vice-Chairmen to whom the Chairman should delegate as much of his duties as he finds possible, reserving to himself the power of resuming the reins in case of failure, and that at the end of the year the board should consider whether one of these Vice-Chairmen, after a year's training, has shewn himself qualified for the Chairmanship.

35. I fully recognize the fact that the scope of the municipal board in the independent management of the affairs of the city might be seriously limited if the Magistrate of the district were Chairman, and if he chose to intervene actively; but I think this objection would be much less if the Joint or Assistant Magistrate were made Chairman, and I think in most instances such officer would be found sufficiently experienced in administration for the post. Some official training, however, seems to me essential to prevent the large municipal establishments now entertained from becoming disorganized. I bear in mind particularly the fact that the water-works require a European Engineer, and I doubt his working cordially except under a European superior. Should an official be appointed Chairman otherwise than by election by the members of the municipal board, I see no necessity for giving him a vote, except a casting vote in case the votes of the board be equally divided.

36. In case an untrained non-official Chairman be appointed, the working of the administration must be very closely watched to avoid the possibility of a breakdown with the disastrous consequences that would be entailed on the citizens of Dacca.

37. It will not be out of place here to mention that very soon after I came to Dacca, I saw the desirability of entrusting more municipal work to the people than has hitherto been done, and devised a system of Ward Committee with a view to delegating to them much detailed work. I proposed that in addition to the Municipal Commissioners resident in each ward, the rate-payers should elect other persons to sit on the Ward's Committee. It appeared to me that this would give the people some training in the details of electioneering of which they are of course utterly ignorant, and their ignorance of which will, I foresee, prove a great source of difficulty in the details of introduction of an elective system.

38. I regret to say that my scheme has broken down altogether, the people abstaining from coming forward to register their votes, and I have reason to believe that this is due to mischievous agitation by which my motives have been misrepresented and twisted, I cannot understand how, into a desire to frustrate the introduction of the elective system into the municipality.

39. I see no necessity for placing any additional funds at the disposal of the municipality the income of which has lately been largely increased by its relief from charges on account of police. Should license tax and excise receipts be made over to the municipality, I do not see any equivalent saving to be made in Provincial or Imperial expenditure.

MUNICIPALITY OF NARAINGUNGE.

40. Naraingunge exports very large quantities of jute, several European firms doing business in that staple, besides cotton and other merchandise; and imports cloth, salt, and other goods. It will be the terminus of the Dacca and Mymensingh State Railway, the construction of which will shortly be commenced, and it is altogether a place of rapidly-growing importance. I have already stated (see paragraph 2 above) that it ought to be classed as a first class municipality.

41. It is the head-quarters of a sub-division, and the Deputy Magistrate in charge of the sub-division is now Chairman of the municipality. It is at present in a most insanitary condition, and the work of sanitary reform to be organized is enormous.

42. Appendix C is the Deputy Magistrate's reply* to my questions given in appendix A.

* No. 824 of the 25th July 1882.

43. On the 7th August 1882 I addressed a meeting of rate-payers of the Naraingunge municipality, explaining to them the nature of the proposed local self-government, and in my presence the Deputy Magistrate went round and personally questioned about sixty rate-payers. Their opinion was almost unanimous that they were content with their present Chairman, and did not want an elective system so long as they had a non-official native Vice-Chairman.

44. Appendix D gives the Deputy Magistrate's official report† of this meeting.

† No. 829 of 13th August 1882.

45. The truth is that the native rate-payers of Naraingunge, as well as the European merchants, are very busily engaged in their own affairs, and are quite content to have municipal affairs managed for them by officials. There are no idlers or unoccupied persons in the place. It would be very desirable to induce one of the European merchants to act as Chairman, but I do not believe that any of them would consent to do so. It is very difficult to get any of the present Municipal Commissioners to take any interest in municipal affairs.

46. The result of enquiry hitherto has been disheartening, and it does not appear easy to rouse the rate-payers of Naraingunge into taking an intelligent interest in their own affairs. I have, however, heard indirectly that there was an idea abroad that those who wished for an elective system were acting in opposition to the wishes of the officials, and that it was more loyal to disclaim any desire for its introduction. I have also heard that the agaitating party of Dacca has since commenced operations in the municipality of Naraingunge, and it is possible that they will induce the rate-payers to come forward with a petition for the introduction of the elective system. I have also begged the Deputy Magistrate to do what he can to dispel the idea that there is any official objection to the elective system, and to explain that on the contrary it is desired that it should be introduced.

47. In this smaller municipality, I think the qualification of electors should be less than in Dacca. It might be reduced to the payment of four annas monthly rate, or the occupation of a holding of equivalent value, and that of candidates to the occupation of holdings rated at one rupee per month.

48. As regards the Chairman, unless a European will come forward I think the Deputy Magistrate is the only qualified person, and I do not think any non-official native among the residents would consent to undertake the work. The place is so small that I do not think division into wards at present necessary, except that Modongunge, on the other side of the river Lukhiya, should be separately represented. Naraingunge might elect five persons to a seat on the municipal board, and Modongunge three, or a third of the members might be nominated by Government.

MANIKGUNGE.

49. The municipal union of Manikgunge, though possessing an income of Rs. 4,266 and a population of 11,289 persons, consists only of scattered villages, and there is really no municipal work to be done in it. I propose its abolition, and the formation of a local board for the sub-division.

50. Appendix E is the Sub-Divisional Deputy Magistrate's reply* to my question given in appendix A; appendix F is a letter which I addressed to the several sub-divisional officers on receipt of their replies to my questions in appendix A, and appendices G, H, and I give the replies of the Deputy Magistrate of the Manikgunge sub-division to my second letter (appendix F).

* No. 156 of 24th July 1882.

51. The Deputy Magistrate at first thought that every village in the sub-division ought to be represented on the local board, and regretted that there were only five places, besides the Manikgunge union, in which there would be found a sufficient number of qualified electors; but in his whole sub-division he considered that there would be 368 persons qualified to be electors, and 137 as representatives according to the qualifications proposed in paragraph 10 of Government letter No. 5TM of 5th July 1882. It is not clear whether the 137 are included in the 368 or not.

52. On receiving my first letter the Deputy Magistrate called meetings at Testa and Bulla, details of which are given in appendix E. The general opinion seems to have been that the local board could not work without the Sub-Divisional Deputy Magistrate as Chairman, and that the elective principle must be supplemented by nomination of some members of the board by Government. At that time I think the people had scarcely begun to understand the proposals submitted to them, which I hope were made to take a more practical shape by the questions proposed in my second letter (appendix F). I have no doubt also that the agitating party had by the time the later meetings were held been discussing the question among the people. Indeed, I hear that school-boys have been busily at work collecting signatures for some petition on the subject of local self-government.

53. On receipt of my second letter the Sub-Divisional Deputy Magistrate held meetings at Manikgunge on the 6th August, at Dassara on the 12th, and at Harirampur thana on the 16th.

54. At the first 37 qualified electors attended besides other persons, and the Deputy Magistrate estimated the total number of qualified electors in thana Manikgunge at 198. At the second meeting there were 53 qualified electors, but there is no revised estimate of the total number in thana Jafargunge. At the third meeting 83 qualified electors attended

55. The first question I asked was as to the wish of the qualified electors for the introduction of a system of electing representatives for a local board, and from the answers I gather that this is their wish.

56. Secondly, I asked how many representatives they would propose for each thana or outpost jurisdiction for each large town, or other local area. In thana Manikgunge they mentioned 13 places or tracts which they thought should send up 25 representatives, in thana Jafargunge 11 places with 20 representatives; but in thana Harirampur they propose the much more practical scheme of sending up eight representatives from the whole thana jurisdiction, restricting the numbers on the board to 25.

57. My own opinion is that, as there are no large towns in the sub-division, each of the three thanas should send up from three to five representatives, making the total number on the board from 9 to 15. Whether all these should be elected, or whether Government should reserve the power of nominating a certain proportion of them, say one-third, I leave to the decision of higher authority.

58. My third, fourth, and fifth questions were as to the proportion of qualified electors who would wish the sub-divisional officer to be the Chairman of the local board, or to elect one of their own number.

59. At the earlier meetings the people seem to have been unanimous in thinking that the sub-divisional officer should be Chairman; but at the later meetings there was always a party, though in a minority, who wished to leave the board free to elect their own Chairman if they could find one qualified, but I do not find any such violent objection to having an official Chairman as I find in Dacca.

60. I think it would be wise if the board would have the sub-divisional officer as their Chairman for at least two years, in order to have the advantage of his administrative training in organizing a new system of government, and also that they should have one or two Vice-Chairmen to be trained under him. I do not, however, think it so absolutely necessary that the board should commence operations under the guidance of a trained administrator as I think it in the case of municipalities wherein there is a complicated organization on which the health of a large community depends, as in the case of the city of Dacca, or wherein a great work of sanitation needs to be initiated as in the comparatively new municipality of Naraingunge. I see no objection to leaving the board to elect their own Chairman if they think they can find a qualified man; but unless it is the intention of Government to nominate some members of the board, I do not think their liberty of choice should be confined to such members. Whether the Sub-Divisional Deputy Magistrate be a member of the board or not, it should be open to the board to elect him as Chairman, but I see no necessity for giving him a vote except a casting vote if the board is divided on any question into two equal parties.

61. With reference to my next question, every one appears ready to adopt my suggestion that members of the local board should be elected for two years only, and similarly they agree in thinking that the sub-divisional head-quarters should be the place at which the local board should hold its periodical meetings.

62. As regards the various kinds of work which the people are ready to undertake, the following is the list they suggest; but there are several items which I do not think it would be practicable to make over to them, and the selection must, I think, be left for future consideration :—

(1)	Roads and bridges	To be placed under charge of the Engineer's establishment under the board.
(2)	Public tanks
(3)	Drainage
(4)	Repairs of ancient religious buildings or monuments
(5)	Schools of various classes	Sub-Inspector of Schools.
(6)	Dispensaries	Under the medical establishment of the board.
